The popular belief that running water in the mountains purifies itself every few hundred feet is always safe is not accepted by the sanitation authorities, says the Forest Service, United States Department of Agriculture. In streams used as a farm water supply, bathing or wading is a dangerous source of contamination. The throwing or dumping of refuse into the streams is forbidden upon by the Forest service, which asks the co-operation of its visitors in the National Forests during the vacation season in keeping camp grounds clean and preventing stream pollution.

COUNTY LIBRARY IS ADVOCATED AT JOINT MEETING OF BOARDS

Larger Appropriations Needed To Care For Service To Rural Patrons

Faced with the possibility of having to deny rural patrons of the Carnegie library with the past privileges of borrowing books in this city under the same arrangement as citizens of Thief River Falls, unless additional financial aid is forthcoming, the members of the library board last Thursday evening asked members of the board of the city council and the county commissioners to meet with them and discuss the situation.

Clara J. Baldwin, director of the libraries for the state of Minnesota, was also present and explained arrangements made by other communities where similar conditions have arisen, advising that Pennington county adopt the library plan, which the legislature recently authorized and which is now in use in ten counties in Minnesota.

Mrs. Hazel Halgrim, librarian at the Carnegie library, stated that there are at present 241 rural patrons making use of the local library, which has a total of over 2,000 books on its shelves. The city for the past few years has been contributing $3,500 annually to the cost of operation of the institution, but formerly had appropriated $4,000 annually. The present year, ending June 30, will surpass all previous years in the number of books loaned patrons of the library, the estimated reading room attendance also exceeding any past year. It was the latter suggested that instead of asking the city council to give any additional amount at this time, that the public and rural schools co-operate in the work being done by the library, and that the county commissioners assist financially in the upkeep of the library, possibly appropriating this year about $500, which would be only one tenth of a mill. This would make it possible to continue the present arrangement with rural patrons of the library.

Inasmuch as County Commissioner Andrew Ness and County Attorney A. H. Dewell were the only county officials present at the Thursday night meeting, it was decided to call another meeting, members of the library board and the county commissioners on Friday afternoon, explaining the situation, and asking for consideration of the problem confronting the board, not with a view of making any decision in the matter at that time, but of considering the subject at some future time. The state law provides that the commissioners may levy a three mill tax, but a one mill tax in Pennington county would provide about $5,000, and would make it possible for the city to discontinue its contribution.

The co-operation sought from the public schools and the rural schools is that of the various districts turning over their appertionments received from the state and the Carnegie library use; these funds to be augmented with any funds they may derive from either of the plans mentioned above, in turn supplying the school libraries with better books than they are at present carrying, a wider selection being possible, and also avoiding duplication to a considerable extent.

Further conferences will be held and a solution possibly worked out within the next few months. If Pennington county should adopt the plan, the system it would be the first in this section of the state. Polk county is also seriously considering the matter at this time, and may adopt the plan, according to Miss Baldwin.

Distance To New Orleans Is Cut 250 Miles By New Jefferson Highway Route

The Jefferson Highway Association announces shortening of the route from Joplin, Mo. to Shreveport, La., by approximately 250 miles. The new route now runs almost straight south all the way from Saint Paul to Shreveport. The Highway is also shortened being extended 494 miles north from Winnipeg to Saint Paul to Winnipeg. The entire distance from Winnipeg to New Orleans is now surveyed, with the exception of about 100 miles, which will be completed this summer.

Annual Session At N. W. School Friday

Alumni and former students of the Northwest School will return to their school on June 29 for the annual alumni reunion. The day will be spent in reminiscences by classes, a short business session, sports and contests, and a banquet at 6 p. m. Arrangements are in charge of the following committees: Entertainment, Mrs. G. Swing, former superintendent, and Superintendent A. A. Dewell.

Auto Club Boosts Headlight Testing

The Breckenridge Automobile club has offered to pay a part of the expense if one of the garages in that city will install the necessary equipment for conducting an official light testing station. The club realizes that night driving will be safer for all concerned if motorists generally have their lights adjusted to give proper road illumination, but to date there is no station in that vicinity.

Although the State Highway Department has licensed about 150 official lamp adjusting stations throughout the state, there are still a number of cities without such stations. A bulletin from the Highway department suggests that where the "local" tem it would be the first in this section of the state. Polk county is also seriously considering the matter at this time, and may adopt the plan, according to Miss Baldwin.

Clara J. Baldwin, director of libraries for the state of Minnesota, was also present and explained arrangements made by other communities where similar conditions have arisen, advising that Pennington county adopt the library plan, which the legislature recently authorized and which is now in use in ten counties in Minnesota.

Tissue ginghams in attractive checked patterns and dainty colors, should not be overlooked among the sheer cotton fabrics, suggests the Bureau of Home Economics. The distinguishing characteristics of any gingham is that the yarns are dyed before the fabric is woven. These ginghams have slightly heavier threads at intervals, but are otherwise almost transparent. They wash and wear well, and are suitable for either morning or afternoon frocks, often being combined with organdy insertions or bandings.

Liver can be broiled in the gas oven. Cook it from 8 to 10 minutes, turning frequently. When done, sprinkle with salt and pepper, pour melted butter over it and serve piping hot.

CHILDREN TO BE ADMITTED FREE AT COUNTY FAIR

27TH ANNUAL EVENT TO BE AUGUST 1, 2, 3

Premium Lists Will Be Issued By Secretary Robert Lund Within a Week

One of the most interesting features of the Pennington County fair for many of the people of this community will be the fact that children will be admitted free when accompanied by parents or guardians. This fair board at a recent meeting, it being felt that many Polk county parents children have been kept from the fair in past years because of the high cost of admission for a large family. Under the new arrangement those parents who follow Teddy Roosevelt's advice and have large families will not be penalized, but will be put on the free admissions under this ruling in future years.

Culbertson's Roman Circus, the outstanding track thriller of the animal world 500 feet in the spacious pavilion unbeatable, will be one of the unusual features of the fair, which is held at Thief River Falls Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, August 1, 2 and 3. This circus, a combination of many such breath taking acts as horse push ball, roman standing races, furiously fast chariot races, a horse jumping over an automobile, a pair of mules with a lot of kick, and many other wonderful and beautiful spectacles, is indeed a complete attraction in itself. It is only one feature of several that will be presented at this fair this year however, and according to present indications the 27th Pennington County exposition will maintain the usual high standard it has set in the way of entertainment. Platform acts of high quality, airplane stunt flying, horse racing, auto polo, auto and running variety and of course plenty of band music and fireworks will be other attractions that will make this year's fair an interesting event.

The premium lists are now being printed and will be distributed within a few days, according to Robert Lund, secretary. Several of the fair Department heads have gone over these lists very carefully making such changes as they deemed necessary to make them more complete, more attractive, more serviceable, more convenient, more economical, more satisfactory, more valuable through more experience, and more helpful to the fair patrons. Premiums not only substantial but also unusually liberal in many instances, it is said.

Frank Mongoven, city, was sentenced to pay a fine of $10 and costs or sixty days in jail for obstructing and delaying an officer in the pursuit of his duties.

Clarence Dicken, city, received a sentence of $50 and costs or thirty days in jail, for drinking intoxicating liquor at a public dance.

At 2:30 Sunday morning Sheriff Ole Olson arrested Ole Fro, 28, north of this city for driving with one light. Instead of stopping, the car speeded away, only to be overtaken by this after several shots were fired. Fro was fined $15 and costs.

Henry Mongrovon, who was with Fro, was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.—As he was then on probation for a previous offense, his probation was evidently revoked.

Everetta Culver was stopped by Sheriff Ole on First Avenue last Sunday morning for speeding. He was released after paying a fine of $15 and costs.

June was a prosperous month for the municipal court, a total of $226 in fines being collected. A very fair start toward this record has already been established for the month of July.

Telephone War Ends, New Company To Serve Bagley

As a result of a "telephone war" in the Clearwater Valley-Tenstrike territory, which serves a large section east and south of this city, was last week granted permission by the Railroad and Warehouse commission to extend their service to Bagley and vicinity. Bagley has been served by the Citizens Telephone company, which recently raised its rates. The Garden Valley company completed a petition signed by a number of residents to build lines in competition with the local company, if the property of the latter company could not be purchased. Construction of lines was begun immediately upon the action of the commission, but was temporarily halted by an injunction filed by the Clover company. A number of business houses and residents have the telephone connections for several months.

Four Deer Park Men In City Jail This Morning For Drinking On Highway

When arrested, the occupants of the car threw several bottles of beer through the windows of the car in an effort to destroy the evidence, five of the bottles, however, remaining intact, as in a big ditch full of water.

No Accidents Reported From Independence Day Observation In County

With the exception of a few arrests for drunkenness and minor automobile collisions, in which no one has been reported injured, this city and vicinity passed a quiet and uneventful Fourth. Large crowds were present at Highlanding, Gryglia, Red Lake Falls, and Crookston. Excellent weather and road conditions made it possible for a large portion of the population of the city to attend one or more of the neighboring celebrations, many bearing a speech by a favorite orator at one and going on to another for dancing in the evening.

Crowds nearing 4,000 are reported from Highlanding. Walter Quist and Senator Lauris F. Neplin of this city were the speakers of the day, with sports, band concerts and dancing running thruout the day and evening. Many from this city attended the Modern Woodmen celebration at Crookston, where Congressman C. G. Selvig gave the principal address. So large were the crowds that a number of tickets had difficulty finding parking space for their cars.

At Red Lake Falls a crowd began to assemble early, to witness one of the major attractions of the day, the baseball game between the fast Red Lake-Thief River Falls teams, and for the afternoon the city fiesta. Miss Gertrude J. H. Haugen of Crookston spoke in the afternoon.

Locations Are Changed By Several Businesses

Several local businesses are changing their locations this week, the firms that are moving being Simson's Barber Shop, the Federal Millinery, Salveson's Studio and the Palace cafe. Simson's Barber Shop is already occupying the new quarters in the Christie building on East Third Street, half of which will also be occupied next week by the Salveson photograph studio. The Federal Millinery will be located in the room formerly occupied by the Simson Barber Shop in the First National Bank building, and the store vacated by the Federal millinery will be occupied at once by the Palace cafe now located next to the Times on LaBree Ave.

This shifting around has meant much remodeling and redecorating of the store buildings affected and the end result will be a great improvement to the block of stores on Third Street east from the First National bank.

Pennington County Fair Makes Progress

The Pennington County Fair which will present its twenty-seventh annual exposition at Thief River Falls, August 1, 2 and 3, is one of the few fairs in this section of the state that is progressing in recent years. It is the outstanding fair in northwestern Minnesota today and is recognized as one of the leading organizations of its kind in the entire state.

In recent years the fair grounds have been improved a little right along, the property having been enclosed, a dwelling house built, and new stock barns have been built, and this year a substantial new story and dwelling has been added which will be occupied by a permanent caretaker. The present exhibit program will call for the construction of a larger grand stand in the very near future, the present structure being inadequate to handle large crowds.

The fair is a community institution, being managed by the Pennington County Agricultural Society, a non-profit organization of citizens of Pennington county. It is interesting to note that the only salaried person connected with the fair is the secretary who receives $300 a year for his services. Herbert Fuller, who has been president of the association for 15 years, is a railroad mail clerk who works out of this city on the Wheat Line.

TWENTY-FOUR CASES ON CALENDAR FOR TRIAL

Myhrum Case May Be Tried—Important Civil Actions On Present Schedule

No criminal cases appear on the calendar but there is a possibility that the Peter Myhrum case will be tried. He is accused of having misappropriated funds of the company.

Damages are asked in asking for $10,000 and Mr. Hawking's wife for $5,000. Mr. Hawking is said to have secured at the intersection of Duluth Ave. and the Great Northern tracks.

The Great Northern Railway is defendant in two suits, these being actions brought here for trial from Polk county, the one being for $1,000 and the other for $500. The suits are brought here for trial from other counties because of the fact that the defendant railway company has considerable influence in the home county, it is said.

Local cases include a suit brought by Ole Fortun against Louise Mandt and Emma Mandt, in which he asks for $900 damages which he claims he sustained in an auto collision nine miles east of Thief River Falls on April second. The suit of Anna E. Bradley against Ole Ihle, in which she asks for $5,000 for personal injury and property damage, will also be tried. Both cases will be jury court cases. "Frivolities of 1928" Feature Of Dakota Fair

The North Dakota State Fair at Grand Forks during the week of July 16 to 21 offers one of the best balanced programs of entertainment ever presented in a Grand Forks exposition, according to officials who have charge of arrangements.

The outstanding grandstand attraction will be the "Frivolities of 1928" each evening of the fair, with a complete change of program at the middle of the week. The revue, by Schooley & Collins, producers of last year's "Vanities of 1927" at the State Fair here, brings an ensemble that is spectacular to an astonishing degree, featuring that outpresents in looks and ability to dance anything previously seen on an open air stage, and comedians who rarely leave the lights of the Great Broadway. The costumes of the revue cast are gorgeous and breath-taking.

Miss Clarice Catlett, a dainty bit of femininity from the old South with sunny blonde hair, a beautiful face, large sunny-blue eyes and an intriguing figure and a wonderfully clear soprano voice, is prima donna of the revue. Miss Catlett sings operatic numbers with the same ease with which she sings popular numbers.

Miss Catlett's partner is Eddie Matthews, principal male dancer with the Schooley & Collins revue. He was picked in 1923 for the lead in a certain important number to be given during a pageant at the Monroe Doctrine Motion Picture exposition in Los Angeles from among several hundred who were summoned from over the country. He filled the role as none of the others could and it was his original step and great store of pep that won him fame.

Annual Crops and Soils Day At Northwest School Will Be Monday, July 16

The Annual Crops and Soils Day at the Northwest Experiment Station, Crookston, will be held Monday, July 16. R. H. Stinson, superintendent, considers this the ideal time for visitors to see the growing crops and thus familiarize themselves with the work of the station. The forenoon will be devoted to discussions of crops and soils problems and the inspection of station fields, which will be under the direction of Professor H. S. Harbach, T. M. McCall, and E. R. Clark.

Luncheon for the day include, Dr. Andrew Boss, Dr. F. J. Alway, and Director F. M. Peck of University Farm. Dean and Professor E. G. Booth of the North Dakota Station, will speak on the subject of "Soils and Fertilizers" as adapted to the Red River Valley. "The Crop Market Outlook" will be presented by Director Peck, and Professor Harbach will explain the production and distribution of pure seed.

A special invitation is extended to farmers, farm clubs and community organizations to visit the Station on Crops and Soil Day. An attractive program has also been arranged for the women. Bring your picnic lunches, and make this a pleasant and profitable day for the entire family. Coffee, cream and sugar will be provided.

An easy dinner menu for wash-day would be scrambled Cold sliced corn beef or other meat; vegetable curry; radishes; baked bananas. You can use various vegetables in the curry, but a good combination consists of onion, carrots, fresh or canned peas, celery, in about equal amounts, and seasonings. Cook the rice first. Cook the vegetables the necessary length of time for each in a small amount of water. Make a ring of the rice, and put the vegetables in the middle, pouring over them a sauce made of the vegetable water, seasoned with curry, salt, pepper, or Worcestershire, and butter.

KANSAS BUILDING ARTIFICIAL LAKES TO DRAW TOURISTS

Competition Of Minnesota Drawing Vacationists Out Of State, Says Governor

Minnesota's ten thousand lakes have been so widely advertised and have become such an attraction that states from which this summer playground draws tourists are now taking steps to harp their people at home by building artificial lakes says H. C. Hotaling, Minnesota tourist commissioner and he specifically calls attention to the campaign now being waged in Kansas under the leadership of Governor Ben S. Paulen to provide lakes for that state.

Kansas is now undertaking one of the greatest conservation programs ever attempted by any state. From money received from hunting and fishing license a fund is being created for the building of artificial lakes. Licenses are being urged by Governor Paulen to take out licenses even though they may not fish or hunt to help the cause of conservation along and the Kansas law is such that persons who accompany a hunting or fishing party, whether they indulge in the sport or not, must be provided with licenses. In his appeal issued by Governor Paulen says: "State lakes and the recreational and camping facilities which go with them will be the means of saving to Kansas millions of dollars annually spent outside the state by Kansas folks on vacation trips. Economically, socially, climatically and from an aesthetic standpoint the lake building program is sound and as free from objections as progress can be."

"In Minnesota" says Mr. Hotaling, "Nature has provided beauties that other states envy. Beautiful states. Our ten thousand lakes are so strategically that there is hardly a spot in the state where there are not several lakes near at hand. Where there are few lakes there usually is water so that our citizens have the opportunities for recreation which they offer. Throughout the state our lakes have wooded shores and our rivers wind through timbered valleys. Wild life is abundant here and our lakes teem with fish. Hundreds of thousands of citizens from other states come here each year to enjoy our lakes and woods, and while other governmentalities may build artificial lakes for the recreation of their people they will never have the natural salvages for recreation to be found in Minnesota.

"Our lakes and forests help to make Minnesota an ideal place in which to live and where we are telling our friends in neighboring states what we have to offer we should never lose sight of the wonderful blessings with which nature has endowed us.

Card of Thanks

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to those friends and neighbors who so pleasantly surprised us on the 4th of wedding anniversary. We also thank those who contributed to the fine silver gifts.

CAUTION IN MAKING LEFT TURNS URGED BY HIGHWAY DEPT

Right Turns, Made Wrong Way, Also Cause Many Serious Accidents

The state law provides that a person making a left turn shall approach the intersection in the lane nearest the center and shall extend his arm to give some other clear signal showing his intention to turn. A driver intending to turn right shall approach the intersection in the lane nearest the right side of the road and keep as close to the right as possible.

In spite of this law, which is the universal rule all over the United States, and one of the most important rules of the road, it is common to see drivers make a wide sweep to the left before turning right, or make a curve to the right before turning left. On city streets turns made the wrong way are cited as accidents but they add to the congestion on busy crossings. On country highways, turns wrongly made are much more dangerous, because approaching drivers are likely to be coming at high speed.

Some drivers may make the excuse that the side road or driveway into which they are turning is not wide enough to permit making the turn in the manner provided by law.

In such cases the driver should slow up, give a clear signal showing his intention to turn, then make both ways to see that there are no approaches approaching before he makes the turn.

Asparagus should always be cooked as soon as possible after it is cut. The piece may be left whole or cut in one inch lengths. Drop into boiling salted boiling water and cook ab out 20 or 25 minutes. Young tender asparagus may be done in 8 or 10 minutes. Season with salt, pepper, butter, and cream. Serve, either alone or in combination with other vegetables. Don't leave a space of eight or more inches from the wall.

More than a "health food"

Shredded Wheat is something more than a mere health food. It supplies the elements for growing children—mineral salts for teeth and bones, carbohydrates for heat and energy, proteins for muscular tissue, vitamines for normal growth and the prevention of diseases of childhood. Shredded Wheat contains no condiments or "teasers" to stimulate an unnatural appetite. It is 100 per cent whole wheat, nothing added, nothing taken away. It is salt-free and sugar-free—you season it to suit your taste. Every package contains 12 large full-size biscuits (12 ounces) thoroughly baked, crisp and brown. Ready-cooked, ready-to-eat.

Raw Milk Is Healthful

Dr. W. E. Stark, Secretary-Treasurer of the Raw Milk Producers Association of America, Kansas City, Mo. states facts in regard to the merits of good raw milk:

Raw Milk contains every element required by the human body. It is rich in vitamins, containing A B C, which are absolutely necessary to our well-being, and which by heating as well as by air and sunlight are destroyed, without vitamin C we grow irritable, lose energy, and are easily tired. In order to get stored in the body a fresh supply is needed daily. Consequently by heating milk we destroy the very elements which goes to make it the most perfect food known to science. It is not necessary to substitute Cod Liver Oil, green vegetables and fruit juices for vitamins when using Raw Milk for it contains all of them.

Prof. Ref of the Ohio State University, "Bacterial organisms infest in pure Raw Milk, worm feed on the milk sugar produce lactic acid, the soothing factor in milk. Raw Milk is a germicidative agent to intestinal putrefaction because of this lactic acid organism. Destruction of the natural bacteria in milk, by pasteurization is harmful because it arrests the formation of lactic acid."

We can point out good arguments for Raw Milk on economic grounds. Our strong argument for Raw Milk is its health-protecting qualities, whether as a diet. As we value our health and the health of members of our families, as we should value milk—Surely health is cheap at 15 or 20 cents a day.

Of course Milk must be cooled promptly to proper temperature to insure its keeping quality. Excepting this process, however, the less you handle it, the better the product.

Dr. J. H. Schrader, Ph. D., Director, Bureau of Chemistry and Food, Baltimore City Health Department, says: Nothing that man can do for has done) to milk makes it any better. In fact, the more he handles it, the more it departs from its original condition. Under our conditions of living, there is bound to be some change in milk, due to the many hands through which it passes in its various means of travel from the cow to the consumer.

Official Paper of the City of Thief River Falls and Pennington County.

I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided; and that is the lamp of experience. I know no way of judging of the future but by the past.—Patrick Henry.

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to live after our own; but the great man is he who in the midst of the crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Emerson.

WITH PATIENCE AND FORTITUDE

The last will of Robert Morris, who is credited with having financed the American Revolution, has recently been restored by experts. The unselfishest man in the colonies in the prime of his life, he later lost all of his wealth and died in poverty. This will, and particularly the closing words, is interesting because it reveals the fine character of the man himself and also because it expresses a beautiful philosophy. "Here I express regret," he says, "at having been a very large fortune, acquired by honest industry, which I had long hoped and expected to enjoy with my family during my own life and then to distribute it among those of them that should outlive me. Fate has determined otherwise, and we must submit to the decree, which I have done with patience and fortitude."

THE UNIVERSITY IS CHALLENGED

According to the Willmar Tribune, "The Washington Herald of a recent date publishes three fac simile checks signed by officials of the power interests in favor of Prof. E. A. Stewart, professor of agricultural engineering of the University of Minnesota, in the amounts of $1,185.00, $222.00 and $188.07, which it alleges were given for financing trips to Ontario and to Geneva, Switzerland. He went to Ontario for an investigation of the public ownership plan, and wrote a pamphlet which has since been circulated by the power interests as being the result of a survey undertaken independently of them."

If what is charged by the Washington Herald is true and a professor in the employ of the University of Minnesota has accepted money from the power companies to advance their interests, it would seem that his relations with the university should be severed immediately. There is no reason why a university professor should not have a right to favor either private or public ownership or have an opinion of his own on any other important question of the day; and because a professor has accepted money from an outside source for gathering data and writing an opinion, it does not necessarily follow that the opinion expressed and the motive behind the expression are dishonest. The opinion and the motive behind the opinion may be dishonest. But when money is transferred in a secretive and underhanded manner the public has a right to suspect that dishonesty is a part of the transaction, and if this is the case the public has a right to demand that the University establish a proper precedent by discharging the professor. It may not be the duty of a university betraying the public trust but he is guilty of a certain indirection that deserves punishment.

The recent investigations of the electric trust by the Federal Trade Commission disclosed the fact that electric companies throuout the country are spending huge sums of money to favor influence in various forms. No one questions the right of these companies to employ honorable means in advancing their own interests but that they own cause an irreparable injury when they stoop to tampering with public servants.

WHEN IS THE TIME TO BUY?

It has been observed that one can buy to the best advantage when there are few buyers and many sellers, and that one can sell to the best advantage when there are few sellers and many buyers. This observation is based, presumably, on the theory that every action is followed by a reaction and that values, like many other things, travel in cycles, moving constantly backward and forward between high peaks and low levels. A financial paper which advises its readers on values of stocks and bonds suggests that a not unsatisfactory method of selecting the time of purchase and sale of stocks is to buy when business depression is so severe that it becomes front page news and sell when, conversely, booming business has become front page news.

Such a philosophy might be applied to farming too. It might be said that the time to buy land is when land is cheap; that the time to start in the sheep business is when sheep are cheap, and that the time to put in a big potato acreage is when potatoes are low priced. But this philosophy has application chiefly for those who would live by their wits. It probably is a good guide to gamblers but we doubt very much that it would have any practical value to the ordinary good business man or good farmer. Most of those people we have come in contact with who have attempted to live by their wits have evidently suffered from a shortage of wits, while most of those farmers or business men we have known who have succeeded have succeeded, not because they have outsmarted the rest of the world but rather because they have worked hard and spent less than they earned.

William Feather tells of a friend of his who wanted to start a business of his own but kept putting it off waiting for conditions to get right. The result was that this friend never got started in a business of his own because, as Mr. Feather says, "Conditions are never just right." He continues:

"People who delay action until all factors are favorable are the kind who do nothing.

"They are inevitably failures as executives and business men.

"Sometimes I think that the wisest business men are those who disregard general conditions, and operate their enterprises without any fear that the sun is going to drop out of the sky, or that money is going to be tight, or the crops are to fail. They may often be wrong, but usually they are right. By giving the major part of their thought to service to their customers they sink their roots so deeply that they are able to pass through the severest depressions without blight. Often, it's only by reading the papers that such men know there is a depression in business."

THE STORY OF THE STUMPS

Ray Chase, state auditor, Grover Conset, state forester, and Dr. Raphael Zon, federal director of the lake states forest experiment station, are saying clean things about each other in an argument as to who is to blame for the fact that Minnesota's forests have been neglected and have not been handled as a permanent resource; all of which has caused Lou Benshoof, editor of the Detroit Record, to become "gratified beyond measure." He is gratified, he says, because in this controversy there is being brought out facts which are of inestimable value in informing the people of the state of Minnesota as to just what is happening to our forests—and very little is being done to remedy or retard the disappearance of what timber is yet left in the state.

Repeating a statement made by Conset, "Let the silent stumps tell the story" Mr. Benshoof says:

"Yes, let them be pictured in all their ghastliness, their lonely nakedness as examples of what might have been had the state possessed a scientific, far-seeing and worthy policy—but alas, under the regime of Auditor Ray P. Chase, but for several years previously!

"Let the Silent Stumps Tell the Story!" Yes, the story of ill-advised and wasteful logging operations, lack of scientific replanting, and an almost complete indifference upon the part of the great mass of our citizens as to the proper conservation and preservation of our timber, water power, lakes and streams, wild life, fish, etc. A people who under the State Constitution, have at all times had the power to change conditions as they have and do not do it.

"Let the Silent Stumps Tell the Story!" Tell it to the thousands upon thousands of Minnesota voters who either voted against (or failed to vote at all) upon the Forestry Amendment when it was submitted at the November election in 1926! Tell it in such a manner as will reflect proper credit upon the vast organization, bipartisan and otherwise, to whose activity is due the fact that the Amendment was adopted, despite the opposition of the near-rightest ones—not Auditor Chase, Forester Conset nor Dr. Zon.

"Let the Silent Stumps Tell the Story!" Tell it in such a way as to bring haste to all the people of Minnesota the fundamental facts as to where the responsibility really rests, and keep ever fresh in the minds of each one of us the fact that not a single one of the three individuals now debating more or less immaterial incidents, are really other than infinitesimal figureheads in the great problems awaiting solution by the people of this great sovereign state."

Each of these three men have contributed much to the general interest in forestry and interesting the citizenry of Minnesota to the outstanding fact that we have no definite and general forestry policy, and no definite and comprehensive responsibility (under the law) of co-ordinating the work of the officials charged with caring for the state's resources!

What a wonderful slogan Forester Conset has conceived! Let the silent and blackened stumps tell the story!"

WE AREN'T WORSE

(Goliath News)

Recently a pastor began his sermon with a statement which sounds quite familiar. He said:

"There is lawlessness everywhere. Children no longer obey their parents. It is evident that the end of things is at hand."

Then the preacher told his congregation that the words were not original with him, nor even the utterance of the present day, but that he had just translated from an inscription found among the ruins of ancient Assyria, dating centuries before the time of the patriarch Abraham.

Through all recorded history are evidences that each generation has found from time to time a cause for the future of the race. Now and then an era of comparative peace and quiet has been experienced, only to be followed by recurring outbreaks of violence and lawlessness.

While the present day conditions are bad enough, it seems that on the whole they are better than those of the past. There is more thought given to the relief of the suffering, to the betterment of industrial conditions, to the protection of the helpless and to other humanitarian movements than ever before.

Also the world war gave civilization a severe test, and society has been rapid and fair ground but is being speedily regained. It must be remembered that war has always marked the history of every generation of mankind, and the same is true of lawlessness, oppression and every other manifestation of human imperfection and sin. It is reasonable to believe that these will always exist in greater or less degree, as long as good and evil struggle for mastery in the minds and hearts of men.

BE CAREFUL OF RABBIT

(Grand Rapids Herald Review)

The Illinois farmers are "rabbit fever" has been definitely established in its effect upon human beings. The disease has been known for many years in its effect upon rabbits and other animals. It was first discovered in 1910 in Toledo county, California, and it has since been called Tularemia. Within the past three years its effect upon the human body has been determined by Doctor Edward Francis and the disease will be called "Francis Disease" from now on.

The illness is a slow fever, sometimes confused with typhoid. Since it has been recognized in the human body 230 cases and 15 deaths have been reported.

Be careful in handling rabbits. In preparing them for food use gloves to protect the hands. See that the flesh meat is properly and completely cooked. Then there is no danger.

PRODUCTION STILL TOO GREAT

(Redwood Gazette)

There's a modern and sophisticated age we are told and people are supposed to be becoming both intelligent and "hardboiled." And yet within the last few weeks residents of this section of the northwest have fallen victim to the Prisoner-in-Spain cage sort of Wisconsin man and others to the tune of $10,000 by the same old "floated pocketbook" scheme when his wife rescued him just in time. We really don't see much change in many respects in spite of our self-conceit. Nature still manifests the same old tricks, just the same frequency that caused Barnum to marvel.

The Fergus Falls Hospital for the Insane has established a beauty parlor for the inmates, and according to the Tribune of that city it is hard to lure some of the enthusiastic women away from it long enough to allow others to have a chance. It was nice of the Tribune to express the thought in those words. Enthusiastic sounds better than crazy, and can be applied to those who are feeble minded in this respect both inside and outside the institution.

The world's champion coffee drinker ran afoul of the law the other day when he attempted to establish a long distance beer drinking record. The first quart confused him, he claims. The officials didn't seem to appreciate the spirit with which this champion sought new laurels and imposed a fine upon him. It was ever thus.

Small compared with the school fund, the permanent university fund of $2,515,000.92 at the last report and still growing—is after all quite a respectable sum.

It was founded on two land grants and indefensible. There was 120,000 acres for an agricultural college granted under the Morrill act, and the grant to the university which came double, 72 sections under the act selling act to be selected by the governor and 72 sections under the act of admission to be selected by the land office. So the state claimed both and got away with it.

Incidentally the remnant of the salt springs land, some 22,000 of the were turned over to the geological survey and there were other accretions. Though it is not part of the fund, the experimental forest at Cloquet, given by the lumbermen, has added to the assets of the university more than $125,000, most of which is the natural growth of the last twenty years.

If the preservation of the school fund is due to Kenney and Sibley, the credit for creating the university fund belongs to John S. Pillsbury.

It was the Pillsbury, like other pioneers, had been building on hope. It began business with a perpetual charter and a land grant and a debt of $125,000 for uncompleted buildings. The regents were given the sections in the entire land grant to cancel the mortgage, only the sections would not take it; they wanted their money. Pillsbury came to the rescue. As president of the board of regents, he handled the business so efficiently that the debt was discharged at a cost of 14,000 acres. Of course, the changes in conditions were far better in the '90's, but the credit is still his.

At first it was taken for granted that receipts from stumpage were current funds. The question was raised as early as 1865, for example, later it was discovered that it was a mistake to spend the money and, to make the accounts square, about $12,000 was taken from the state institutions fund and put in the permanent university fund.

The state institutions fund, by the way, was the proceeds of 2,500,000 acres set apart from the swamp land grant for the benefit of special state institutions. Later other institutions came along and their share was added, when the swamp land fund was dedicated afterwards one-half to the school and the other half to all the institutions, the separate fund was abolished.

The ruling that stumpage should go to the university fund has turned out to be quite important. Of the total of $61,000,000 in the trust funds at last report, more than $50,000,000 came from the sale of pine stumpage and other timber. And in future reckonings, pine stumpage and pulpwood will bear an increasing proportion of new funds.

With more than $2,500,000 in permanent fund and a total of $5,000,000 or more in sight, the cackling of the early statesmen over an accumulation of $500,000 in 1880 and a prediction that the fund would ultimately reach as much as One Million Dollars seems unimpressive.

But in those days they thought the income of the trust fund would pay all the current expenses of the university and the reports in 1880 found less the tax of 1-10 mill was producing a surplus and should be cut off. Happy days!

Like other grants, the university and agricultural college selections were crumbled into the agricultural college last nearly 90,000 acres because it had to take so much "double minimum" lands, that is land within railroad grant limits which counted two for one. As a result the university especially was obliged to fall back on the remote part of the state where there was nothing of value but pine and possibly mineral. And that is where the rest of the fund is coming.

Minnesota Labor Will Discuss Dam Proposal At Border Town Tues.

The Minnesota State Federation of Labor will hold a hearing on the Rainy River Falls dam project at International Falls July 10th. This dam, which has aroused vigorous opposition from the Isaac Walton League, the American Legion, and a number of other sportsmen in the state, recently received the endorsement of the International Falls Trades and Labor Assembly, as giving employment to labor along the Canadian border. In a statement given out by the assembly the assertion is made that opposition to the dam proposal comes from "a few people who have the time and means to enjoy their summers on the boundary waters." If the dams are built, the statement adds, the lakes will still be there and in many cases will be more substantial and beautiful.

Terminal Livestock Associations Increasing

The first permanent terminal association was organized about seven years ago. To-day there are 25 of these agencies operating on 19 central markets. Approximately 11,000,000 head of livestock valued at several hundred million dollars were handled by these terminal commission agencies. Numerous problems have arisen in connection with the administration of those large co-operative organizations, and one of the most pressing is to provide facilities to take care of the always increasing business. In order to do this, it is necessary to be constantly planning men of the organizations in the co-operative method of doing business. This takes time and money, but is the only way to preserve, giving the best possible service to shippers. An association should be supplied with enough help to properly handle the business and to maintain the personal relationship with the shippers that grows out of and is a part of the commission business. Another problem facing the terminal association is to get out more educational information to members and shippers. If an association does not inform its members, there are usually plenty of people ready to undertake the job! What members know about their association, where they get their information, and the reliability of this information, should all be a matter of concern to the association.

If a woman's hips are large in proportion to her waist and bust, she should choose long vertical lines from the shoulder to the floor in designing her dresses. These lines may be stripes in the material, bands, or rows of trimming, rows of buttons, tucks, and so on.

Canadian Wheat Pool Leader To Speak At Warren, Aug. July 26

F. W. Ransom, Secretary of the Manitoba Wheat Pool, will address a double-header farmers' and business men's meeting to be held at Warren and Ada on July 26, according to a statement from Secy G. W. Connell of the Minnesota Wheat Growers, a co-operative association of more than 11,000 grain growers operating under the same general plan as the world-famous Canadian Pool.

"We have secured Secretary Ransom because he knows wheat marketing and wheat pooling, and because he knows how to explain to our farmers and business men and bankers what the Wheat Pool is doing for Canadian agriculture and business," said Mr. Connell in making the announcement of the coming of the great Canadian co-operative leader. "There is no reason why the same benefits that have come to Canadian agriculture and business thru good marketing should not come to the farmers and business men of Minnesota thru the methods that have made the Canadian Wheat Pool a world-wide factor in grain and marketing."

One Out Of Eight Marriages Ends In Divorce In This State

One out of every eight marriages—12.5 per cent—ends in divorce in this state, according to statistics just issued by the Department of Commerce at Washington. In 1927 there were 23,326 marriages and 2,922 divorces, in a total population for the state of 2,686,000. On the basis of these figures, there were 8.7 marriages per thousand of population, and 1,081 divorces. As compared with 1926, marriages decreased from 23,713 to 23,326, while divorces increased 1.4 per cent from 2,704 in 1926.

Pennington county showed an even more alarming increase in properties and divorces to marriages. Marriages decreased from 88 in 1926 to 56 for 1927, or 36.3 per cent. At the same time divorces increased from two in 1926 to five, or 150 per cent.

Wash with Soft Water

REMEMBER when grandmothers used to save rain water in the cistern for washing? How you can have pure, soft water from every faucet! It will make your washing look whiter and cleaner than ever before, with just a little bit of soap you get the thick, rich, soft-sudsing lather that makes dirt vanish! Hour after hour over any road -and every mile a pleasure

At every speed, the Bigger and Better Chevrolet holds the road with a surety that is a revelation—for it is built on a wheelbase of 107 inches, and the body is balanced on four long semi-elliptic shock absorber springs, set parallel to the frame. It steers with the weight of a hand—for the worm and gear steering mechanism is fitted with ball bearings throughout. And it sweeps along at high speeds for hour after hour without the slightest sense of forcing or fatigue—always under the complete control of its big non-locking 4-wheel brakes. Come in today for a demonstration!

The little gray car was meandering along a third from Chippewa county, man, who glanced around only in time to shrink from the menacing radiator and a most unladylike collision which believed quality!

"Howdy! Half the road's yours!" Wildly he swerved to the left, but too late. With a neat crunching "swish" the big blue car sliced off his rear wheel, wrecking the running boards. The poor remains foundered crazily to a dusty stop. The little gray man with the big black whiskers paused, grinning, juggernaut. Shading his eyes, he peered back along the trail and guesses of various kinds. Will fascinated, entertainment. Reverend R. L. Tangeth will be present to assist the local teachers with the doings.

POWERS OF TOWN BOARDS DEFINED BY HIGH COURTS

Must Be Given Some Discretion In Spending Road Funds Supreme Court Holds

A decision of interest to township officials and others interested in road improvements was handed down last week by the Minnesota supreme court, in which the court confirms the right of town boards to use their discretion and judgement in determining certain questions pertaining to road improvements. The court holds that mandamus proceedings cannot be used to control or coerce the discretion or judgement conferred upon public officials. They can be used only to compel the performance of a duty which the law clearly and positively requires an official or tribunal to perform. Discretion is the power or right of acting officially according to what appears best and appropriate under the circumstances. It can be controlled, says the court.

The specific case came from Long Lake (Wilson)ean county. Ten years ago the board denied a petition for the establishment of a road. This was reversed by the district court and the road established, but the board did nothing to improve the road. Mandamus proceedings were started, and the district court ordered the board to open and improve the road. The board appealed.

The decision points out that money appropriated at the annual town meetings were not appropriated for one particular road. They were voted for general roads and bridges or for the town, some for grading, some for culverts or bridges, some for repairs or graveling. The board must say how, where or what it is to be spent. The board is charged with the duty of opening the road in question. They have also their duty in reference to roads generally and for which the money was appropriated. The extent, nature and relative importance of this improvement with other improvements, repairs and maintenance which may be deemed to be necessary throughout the town are matters concerning which, in general, the discretion of the supervisors, and not of the courts, must be exercised."

While holding that the lower court in finding that there were funds available for the improvement, the supreme court upheld the town board in its opinion says that even if there are funds available and sufficient for that project, that is not enough. It must be made to appear that there are funds sufficient to carry out this project and also to do whatever else may, in the reasonable discretion of the board be needful on other town roads. The supreme court upholds the portion of the lower court's order which directs the town board to remove fences and obstructions and open the road, but the time and extent of the improvements is left to the board.

Are Bills Wise? Ask the Man Who Owes One!

Many people have the mistaken impression that charge accounts and installment buying involve your credit and give a feeling of responsibility. If you want an honest opinion, ask the man whose bills top his income by many dollars every pay-day. He will tell you that credit is never established by going into debt, and that anxiety, not responsibility, is the result of "charge it."

The J. C. Penney Company is confident that our customers want goods of serviceable quality at the lowest possible price; that they prefer to pay cash and carry their purchases home so that they may put the substantial saving into their own pocket. If we permitted charge accounts we would have to add on an extra charge and this would be unfair to our other customers.

This month, we are celebrating the Anniversary of our Independence. Whether we, as individuals, have benefitted from this freedom, depends on how much we owe. Starting July free from debt, is a "safe and sane" celebration of Independence Day.

FARMER EARNED 11 CENTS AN HOUR IN 1927, SURVEY SHOWS

Records Of Askov Farmers Indicate Wide Variation In Earnings

Conclusions and deductions to be made from a study of farm incomes carried on for thirty years on the Pine county farm accounting route were presented by farm management division men of the university at a public meeting held recently at Askov, a letter of a progressive Danish community.

Twenty-nine farmers enrolled originally as members of the project are keeping up to date records or inventory, cash received and paid out, crop yields, feed, labor, etc. A yearman employed by the department was stationed at Askov to supervise the work and collect and forward the records to University Farm, where they were checked for accuracy, computed and analyzed. Each co-operator received a detailed statement of each department of his farm business annually.

The average family earnings of this farm, as reported for the year 1926 they were $964 and in 1925 $1,228. The return per hour for farm labor was 11, 16 and 19 cents respectively. The decrease, the university men found, was caused principally by unfavorable weather conditions which reduced crop yields, and by lower prices for hogs, poultry, rutabagas, and potatoes.

Several of the farm operators failed to earn 6 per cent of their investment in any of the three years. Others made 6 per cent and had a substantial return for their labor besides. The highest earnings per operator for 1927, 1926 and 1925 were $910, $1,341, and $1,968 respectively. Many of the factors causing this variation in earnings are due to differences in organization and management of which were under control of the farmer. Production per unit is an important factor influencing returns. This was illustrated at the Askov meeting by comparing six dairy farms, three of which had a production of 354 pounds of butterfat per cow and a net return per animal of $58 as contrasted with three farms having production of 201 pounds of fat and a net return of only $5 per cow.

Doing figures of average production only, a university staff man summarized the work of the three years on the route and showed how the earnings could be increased by better farm organization. Several alternative organization plans were presented and discussed. Special study was made of the organization and management of one farmer who had had an average return per hour of 31 cents compared with a route average of 18 cents. His success was to be attributed to crop yields 23 per cent above the average and to production per cow of 316 pounds of butterfat compared with the route average of 255 pounds.

Marshall County Fair Opens At Warren Monday For Three Day Session

Offering an exceptional array of professional talent among the many attractions appearing before the grand stand, a program that has never been out-classed in Northwestern Minnesota will be presented to Marshall county fair visitors at Warren next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, according to fair officials who are this week making their final efforts to make this fair the biggest success in its 22 year history.

"We have done all we can to work up a well balanced program of entertainment and education, and we are sure that the public will be well satisfied with what we have done," said Wm. Forsberg, president of the association.

Baseball games have been added to the splendid program of entertainment, with the Argyle base ball club acting as the home team during the fair. The Argyle management has arranged to play Oslo on the second day of the fair, and Stephen on the closing day while on Monday another game has been booked. The games will be played in the Argyle park. Park commencing at six o'clock.

The fair book with purses totaling $600 will feature the afternoon attractions on Tuesday and Wednesday while on Monday and Wednesday evenings Free-for-All racing with purses of $225.00 each will be featured. Horse and pony races will be run each afternoon and evening of the three day exposition.

Vaudeville features before the grandstand each afternoon and evening will include Cassay Bros. acrobatic and trick trumblers; The Seibini Sisters, rolling globe experts; Eugine Climax, aerial princess; Great Leopah, European juggler and spade juggler; The three Americans, comedy in their trick house; the Cassay Bros. in a hand balancing act and Patricia Harper, the girl Jack Dempsey, who is claimed to be the only girl fighting pug in the world.

Free attractions will include five-works—program will feature—the history of the Democratic and Republican parties, with Democratic donkey and Republican elephant; Lindbergh and his Spirit of St. Louis, and many other features will be on hand. Dancing on a large pavilion will also furnish entertainment for many of the visitors.

Premium lists are made for a great increase in the number of exhibitors, many farmers planning to bring in their best livestock to compete with each other for county honors. The more the exhibitors, the better the fair, say the officials, therefore all are urged to make entries.

To whip cream successfully you must have the cream and the bowl very cold. If the kitchen is hot, it is better to whip the cream out of doors, using a dover beater. Or stand the cream bowl in a pan of cracked ice. To obtain the best whip it is well to use cream that contains at least 30 per cent butterfat and that has aged at least 24 hours.

In buying a protein feed for beef cattle, it is important to purchase one that will supply the protein most cheaply. Wheat, rice bran, and legume hays, if of good quality, each have a protein content of about 13 percent; linseed meal, about 35 per cent; and cottonseed meal, from 36 to 43 per cent. For example, alfalfa hay with a protein content of 13 per cent at $20 a ton will supply a pound of protein at 7½ cents, while linseed meal with a protein content of 35 per cent will supply protein at the same cost, when valued at $52.50 a ton. Cottonseed meal with a protein content of 43 per cent at $45 a ton will supply protein at the same cost at $40 per cent meal at $40 a ton. In general, the higher grades of a feed are the most economical sources of protein.

Zone Officers and District Dealers Hold Annual Meeting At Evelyn Hotel

Chevrolet Motor Co. officials met with dealers of the Thief River Falls district at the Evelyn hotel Monday, arranging for contracts for the coming year and discussing various business matters. Zone officials of the company were present and twelve direct and several sub-dealers were represented. T. F. Kinman, sales manager of the Fargo zone, presided at the sessions held throughout the day.

Other officials of the company present were M. A. Ahlfeldt, assistant zone sales manager; A. R. Carlson, sales promotion manager; W. E. Danielsenger, account manager; F. W. Collins, service manager, and F. L. Bayley, field representative.

Direct dealers represented at the meeting were: Certified Motors, Thief River Falls; Larson Motor Co., Red Lake Falls; Certified Motors, Crookston; A. Mellin, Warren; O. W. Younggren, Ada; Ole Hanson, Mentor; Hanson & T. Eide, Spooner; Denison & Hastings, Bemidji; Allen Chevrolet Co., Grand Forks; Ben Stein, Grand Forks; Peoples Auto Co., Red Lake Falls; and Thomas Motor Co., Thief River Falls.

The output of the Chevrolet Motor Co. during the first six months of the year was 751,266 cars and trucks, as compared with 774,749 for the corresponding period of 1927, according to Mr. Kinman. The latter said there is a positive indication that a new annual high production record will be made for this year and will be well beyond the three million mark. Three great factories are now building these cars, the two hundred thousand unit factory recently been opened at Atlanta, Ga., and the Kansas City plant.

Responding to the greatest demand in its history, Chevrolet established production records in every month this year. Like the five preceding months, June was the biggest month in the history of the company with a total of 182,791 units, as compared to 112,794 for June of 1927.

With its fourteen great factories at the peak of efficiency and precision production methods, the first six months produced a finished car every 1.2 minutes of every working hour. Daily production over the six months period averaged 5,315 units. All daily production records for 1928 have been established this year and will be well beyond the million mark. Fourteen plants, with a combined daily production capacity of 5,000 units will be used to meet the demand for the remainder of the year.

A new tennis court is being built at the Bridge street park, according to an announcement of the Park Board. This court will not interfere with the kittenball diamond, as there is ample room for both. No cars will be allowed on the court, the board says, as it is danger of damage to trees on the grounds.

S. R. Kirby Discontinues Medical Practice Under Threat Of Prosecution

S. R. Kirby, who for many years has had a large clientele of patients from all over the country who have come to his farm home three miles east of the city for treatment, announced Saturday closed his office under threat of prosecution by the State. Dr. Stanley Brent of St. Paul, attorney for the State Board of Medical Examiners, secured a promise from Dr. Kirby that he would discontinue his practice, which the state charges are both unethical and hereafter.

After repeated complaints from various sources, Dr. Kirby, who is not a licensed physician, last fall entered into partnership with J. A. Degner of Middle River, who has since then handled most of the medical work. Dr. Degner moved early this week to open an office at Winger.

If Dr. Kirby reconsummates practice, he will be prosecuted under the Basic Science law passed at the last session of the legislature, says Mr. Brent. There have been six convictions under the law since it went into effect, with sentence ranging from small fines to four years in the state penitentiary.

The meeting will begin at 7:30, and balloting for officers will begin after the reading of the clerk's report and the treasurer's report.

Council Committee Will Continue Negotiations On Power Rate Proposal

At a meeting of the city council Tuesday night the matter of engaging Wm. Skinner as consulting engineer to establish a new rate structure on electric power in the city was referred to the committee on water and light for further action. At the previous meeting of the council, Mr. Skinner suggested that new rates be established that would be acceptable to the Dow Line for its share in the city, and at the same time profitable to the city. Enough power is now going to waste over the dam to supply the shops if a proper metered and energy rate is applied to keep down the peak load, city officials feel, and the committee was convinced that a power contract can be worked out that will be advantageous to both the city and the Dow Line.

Several building permits were approved. M. V. Evenson was granted permission to remodel a residence at a cost of $600. G. J. Biddick will modernize a house on the east side at a cost estimated at $1,000. The St. Bernard's Church will expend $100 improving the church entrance.

The Rythm Boys were granted a permit to conduct dances at the Elks Hall August 1, 2 and 3.

Milk licenses were granted to H. O. Hoff and A. F. Hagen upon the recommendation of the city Dairy Inspector, Ed Gilbert.

Two city electricians, Kenneth Porter and Henry Olson, who have been employed by the city on a temporary basis, were placed on the payroll at $100 per month.

Washes with hand carefulness

A LAUNDERING process which is too harsh for your dainty garments is also hard on coarse clothes. The coarse clothes may not show the abuse as quickly, but their life is shortened nevertheless.

The Maytag washes dainty lingerie or coarse grimy work clothes equally well. The clothes are cleaned by the action of hot, soapy water in a satin-smooth, cast-aluminum tub. It is gentle, but thorough—even the stubborn edge-dirt of collars and cuffs is washed out without hand-rubbing. A big tubful is washed clean in 2 to 7 minutes, an average washing in an hour.

The Roller Water Remover removes both soap and water evenly from all parts of the garment. The large soft top roll working against a hard bottom roll does not harm buttons and buttons—do not bite into the rolls. It has a Safety Feed, the drainboard reverses itself, and the tension adjusts itself.

Phone for Free Washing

—Experience the joy of a Maytag wash-hour—the healthiest, fastest, most thorough washer—the washer that won world leadership. Test it, compare it in your own home. If it doesn't sell itself, don't keep it.

YES,
Dodge Brothers Standard Six is the famous car, with the famous pick-up, under a thousand dollars.

HOWEVER
That is only HALF the story. The IMPORTANT point is that this exceptional speed is made practical by Dodge ruggedness of chassis and body construction

OTHERS
Might succeed in building a car se this price with equal SPEED, but to do so successfully they would also have to build a car with equal STURDINESS.

AND
That is where Dodge Brothers, with years of experience in building a dependable low-cost producer, are years ahead of the field

YOU
Can buy the Standard Six knowing that it is not only the fastest car in its class but the sturdiest—and the one is every bit as important as the other.

Raw Milk Is Safe

Dr. W. F. Stone, Kansas City, Mo., says further in regard to the qualities of good raw milk:

The effort of all should be to see that the milk reaches the child in as nearly as possible the condition in which it came from the cow.

Dr. Wayne Munns says: "Pasteurization cannot atone atone for filth, carelessness and poor sanitation."

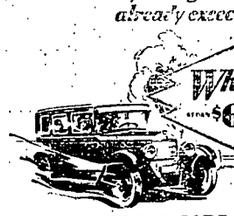
When milk is heated or treated it undergoes four changes:

1. The natural taste is lost.
2. Vitamin C is destroyed, thus losing an "invisible lifeguard" that holds resistance against disease.
3. The organic salts are changed into minerals the body cannot use.
4. The calcium is charged from structure-building food to worthless curd matter.

Fresh Raw Milk contains all the goodness of the tender green pastures, the golden grain of the fields, the crystal water, and the pure air of the sunny open spaces.

We bring it to your doorstep daily. It is often called bottled sunlight as it brings to the glowing health and vigor from the out-of-doors to you. Phone us today.

We recommend it to you unadulterated, unpasteurized, unstandardized. Its flavor and natural richness make it a delightful addition to any menu.



Respectfully submitted for your careful consideration,

Should green crops be turned under, fed, or sold. Many local factors are involved in this question, but generally speaking, where a forage crop can be grazed or advantageously fed to the land, this will be the most profitable. However, where a small number of livestock is kept, or where the soil is poor and in need of organic matter, it may be more profitable in the end to turn under a green crop than to sell it. The turning under of a green-manure crop may affect the yield of following crops one to the third year, and this fact should be taken into account when considering the question of selling a forage crop or turning it under.

PLAY GROUND OR INDUSTRY

The Trades and Labor Assembly of International Falls has issued a statement in regard to the proposed water power development on the international boundary that deserves consideration because it represents the attitude of a group of people living in the territory that is effected by this project. This assembly disagrees with the many organizations and individuals that have gone on record as being opposed to the development, charging that the facts have been misrepresented and urging that by such development the best interests of that territory and the people of that territory will be advanced.

The question involved in this controversy is a little broader than merely whether or not the raising of water levels in a few of the lakes will ruin the scenic effects or spoil the fishing for whatever Twin City sportsmen may drive that far north if roads are ever built up there. Although most of the noise that has been raised on the question has been devoted to a debate on this phase of the subject, this is not the real issue and is comparatively unimportant. The real question to be decided is whether that portion of the state is going to be permitted to develop industrially or retained in its primitive form as a playground for tourists from other states. It is this important question that the people of International Falls are interested in and it is this question that the entire northern division of the state is interested in.

If the entire north half of the state is going to be made a playground, then it is our impression that notice to this effect should be served on us natives at once so that we can adjust ourselves accordingly. If only parts of the north end of the state are going to be used to entertain visitors then those certain parts should be so designated at once in order that other parts may go back to work with some assurance that we will not be fined for trespassing should we invade the holy precincts of nature by swimming in some lake that has been reserved for fish. In other words, the important thing is to get settled once and for all whether the natural resources of Northern Minnesota shall be developed for the welfare of Northern Minnesota or abandoned for the pleasure of the Twin Cities and points south.

After this fundamental question has been settled then some thought can be given to the specific proposal of developing water power at International Falls. Then the Backus proposition can be viewed in its true form with the prejudices separated from the facts.

"NO DIFFICULTY IN SELLING STOCK"

According to the Baudette Region there is some excitement in that neighborhood over the possibility of finding oil. Oil indications have been found over a wide territory, says the Region, and a well will be drilled north of the town of Rainy River.

A company has been organized, of course. Companies are always organized on such occasions. Very often these companies are organized even before the indications of oil are found. It always seems easy for such companies to find "indications of oil."

The news item also contains the very encouraging information that, "Those in the company are enthusiastic over the prospects and confidently expect to strike a gusher."

And, last but not least, the story closes with the pertinent statement to the effect that, "The company has had no difficulty in selling enough stock to finance the drilling operations."

We have no objections to oil being found on the Rainy River. As a matter of fact we are in favor of it. We would be delighted if great gushers of the liquid gold could be opened up thruout this entire territory. We are heartily in accord with such a program.

But we are not in favor of wild cat speculation in remote possibilities as a popular program right now. Getting rich by the oil stock method offers many thrills evidently, but there are also too many disappointments.

There may be oil on the Rainy River. If there is there will be plenty of time for all of us to get rich after it has been definitely proven.

One thing about these oil well and other get-rich-quick schemes that is hard to figure out is the strange fact that almost without exception such enterprises are operated by men who want their friends and neighbors to do well—they always seem to want the whole world to participate in their good fortune. And another strange thing is that these geologists, these smart men who can tell exactly where the oil is and in what quantities, never seem to have to worry about paying income taxes.

Captain Roald Amundsen, the Norwegian explorer, who has commanded the attention of the world for many years by his daring adventures in the frozen north and who is credited with having discovered the south pole, flew to the rescue of the Nobile north pole expedition near Spitsbergen more than three weeks ago and has not since been heard from. He probably has conducted his last expedition into that frozen north from which he had emerged triumphant so many times. And what could be a more beautiful setting for the end of that eventful career than death in the action he so dearly loved, attempting to rescue those with whom he had been a companion in many previous exploits.

C. W. Young, director of aeronautics for the Department of Commerce, stated recently that 12,000 miles of airways are already being used in this country and that the Federal Government is engaged in a comprehensive airway construction program which will link, by air every important industrial center in the United States within the next few years. There are now 170 firms building planes in the United States and he estimates that at least 4,000 planes approved by the government will be put into service this year.

Aviation is a thing that is coming. It is a thing that is here now. Thief River Falls needs an airport.

THE COUNTRY PRESS
(New York Times)

Among the newspapers circulated by readers in the subways, elevated cars, the parks there are always a number of foreign languages. Nobody seems surprised at that, for the foreign readers are really recognizable as such. But New Yorkers are surprised to see an out-of-town paper, but they are not easily spotted as strangers. Even more numerous is the group long resident in New York but keeping in touch with things "at home." Country newspapers have been much ridiculed by such sophisticated minds as Mr. Mencken, but they have a remarkably firm hold on the affection of their readers.

At a recent meeting of the National Editorial association at Memphis, Mr. Merle Crowell, editor of The American Magazine took a few shots at "the cynical city journalists" who make fun of the social columns and other personal items in rural papers. He said that, these features are the most important. They are the news for which the community subscribes. Foreign, national and state news is, of course, given some space, but it can be read in the magazines or in the Sunday paper from the nearest city. Even the movie news (and the radio; which are as popular in the country as in town, are not substitutes for the neighborhood news supplied by the local paper.

There is no mystery about the success of such publications, nor about ridicule by "the cynical city journalists." Both come from the same fundamental cause—the wealth of intimate information they contain. It has been said that New York's most intellectual circles do not scorn a relish of gossip about absent members. Country and city people are, after all, very much alike. When a smart city editor or column conductor laughs at the personal items and points a scornful finger at those matters, he is taking an easy way to make a rather pointless joke and is in all probability envious of his country cousins.

PARK BOARD NOTICE

The Park Board has installed new tables and ovens at Tinsdahl Park for picnicking at beach and pool parties. During the busy tourist season it is well for everybody to remember that Tinsdahl Park is for tourists. Tinsdahl Park is a nice place for you all find with shade and breeze. For swimmers and bathers we have now put up a diving board. The danger line is roped off. Non-swimmers and children must not venture beyond ropes. Howard Gibson is the life guard, on duty from 10 a. m. to 12 and from 1 to 9 p. m. No swimming or bathing allowed except during these hours. A boat will be tied up at the beach during the season, also life belts and other rescue appliances will be on hand. These are for life saving purposes only, not to be used or disturbed except in case of emergency occurs. There is reason to expect that we may be able to put this beach in fine condition for swimming and bathing another year. Especially are we anxious to make it large enough with shallow water to accommodate little folks and non-swimmers. Much depends on sportsmen of those using this privilege. If dressing rooms, boat and properties are not damaged and the premises kept neat at all times this year, it will be an incentive to all of us to make of it a large, fine, safe recreation park next year.

At Bridge Street Park all automobile drivers are asked to park on the outside. Keep off the park with cars. Save the trees.

A tennis court will soon be ready for players and the horse shoe court will not interfere with the Kittenball games now in progress. Room for both. Will everybody cooperate, so that no cars drive on this park.

ANDREW HUTCHINSON,
Chairman Park Board.

CHRYSLER

New Chrysler "65" 4-Door Sedan, $1145

THESE two entirely new Chrysler Sixes—the "75" and the "65"—are deliberately designed and executed to inspire public admiration to such a pitch that they will immediately supersede all that has gone before and usher into existence an entirely new motoring vogue.

Striking new standards of beauty have been created in these new Chrysler Sixes, even when the artistry of a great industry has seemed to be at its height.

We believe that, at their new low prices, they demonstrate that Chrysler engineering, research and manufacturing again have greatly increased the buying power of the dollar when invested in motor cars.

We are confident that all who are even remotely interested in the progress of motor car artistry will find themselves amply repaid by their immediate inspection of these two new Chrysler style achievements.

VETERINARIANS TO MINNEAPOLIS FOR CONVENTION AUG. 7

Development of Livestock Industry Makes Profession Essential to Nation's Prosperity

One of the largest conventions to be held in the Northwest in many will be that of the American Veterinary Medical Association, which will take place August 7th to 10 at the New Nicollet Hotel, in Minneapolis.

Thousands of veterinarians, representing every state in the Union and a number of foreign countries, will come to Minnesota for this big convention.

Speaking of the importance of this convention and of the veterinary profession in general, Dr. D. H. Udall, director of Minneapolis, this week issued the following statement:

"The veterinary profession is absolutely necessary for a successful livestock industry, and a successful livestock industry is essential to successful agriculture. Diversified agriculture is vital for a prosperous nation. The veterinary profession therefore is one of the John Christianson of underlying national prosperity.

"The veterinary profession is absolutely necessary to assure wholesome animal food products, especially meat and milk. A wholesome food supply is vital to public health. The veterinary profession is, therefore, one of the few big factors responsible for human health and vigor.

"It made the Panama Canal possible. Very few people know this." It was one of the most thrilling stories in the history of science. Under the direction of Dr. D. E. Salmon, who was chief of the Bureau of Texas cause of Animal Industry, Smith and Kilbourne discovered the cause of Texas cattle fever. This quickly and naturally led to the control of cattle fever, and then, and not until then, it was possible to dig the canal.

"The importance of veterinary medicine in the United States is growing rapidly. The number now in the profession growing in numbers, while the value of livestock in the United States is increasing enormously.

In 1900 it was nearly five billion dollars.

In 1910 it was nearly five billion dollars.

In 1920 it was nearly eight billion dollars.

"In 1926 the estimated value decreased to five billion dollars, but the heavy cut is harmony with the general agricultural depression, so even so it was about sixty-six per cent higher than 1900. The next census probably will show another big increase in these values.

"The protection of this great multitude of farm animals against, diseases and the treatment of disease is the big job of the veterinarian.

"The veterinarians of the country ably led by Dr. Peter Olson of Animal dustry have on numerous occasions totally eradicated different highly contagious diseases of animals. In every instance where they have been given full control they have been one hundred per cent successful. Contagious pleuropneumonia and foot and mouth disease have appeared a number of times and always they have been stamped out. The same will undoubtedly be said of rabies and hog cholera when the veterinarians are given full control.

"Progress is being made, in the eradication of bovine tuberculosis. During the period of the first 14 years there were tested 23,982,623 cattle with 17,663 reactors, which shows 5.78 per cent infection. During the last five years or since area work has begun there have been tested 3,096,703, ratio which showed 2.16 per cent infection. The number of cattle tested since the control work started in Minnesota is 4,274,852. The indemnity paid by the state during this period is 2,326,148.04, and the indemnity paid by the federal government since federal co-operative started is $825,575.68. A retest of the first three counties that were certified as tuberculosis-free in Minnesota, after a period of three years disclosed a very low percentage of infection and the counties were re-accredited by State and Federal Government for another three year period.

"Minnesota is to be congratulated on being selected to serve as hosts to the American Veterinary Medical Association which will meet in Minneapolis at the New Nicollet Hotel August 7th to 10th inclusive."

Reduced Round Trip Fare To National Legion Meet

A trip, which costs only $61.84 for transportation and use of sleeper en route to San Antonio Texas via St Louis, New Orleans and Houston, returning via Kansas City, with stopovers and side trips on the way, is the good news for Minnesota Legion and Auxiliary members announced by Joe Stetzman of Benson, department transportation chairman. The convention will be held October 8th.

No Corn On Bill Of Fare, Bet N. W. School Calves Top Market

That calves can be bred, raised and fattened in the Red River valley on small grains and roughage most of which grows in the region, without ever knowing the taste of hard corn was demonstrated last year in feeding tests of animals for the market, and has been demonstrated anew in experiments completed and reported at the Northwest Experiment Station.

Furthermore, the calves sold on the South St. Paul market for $14.80 a hundredweight, which was the top price for cattle at that point up to that time.

Thirty Hereford home-bred calves of the average weight of 370 pounds each, were fed from late November 1 and fed for 224 days on local grown grains and roughage. All lots received oilmeal; corn meal and alfalfa hay, but 1 was given ground barley for grain, lot 2, ground barley two-thirds and ground oats one-third; lot 3, ground barley one-third and ground oats two-thirds; lot 4, ground oats only.

Common ground barley proved to be much superior to ground oats as a feed for fattening. The barley-fed group made more rapid gains, carried a much higher finish at the close during the feeding period, and returned a better profit, the margin per head over feed cost being $17.60 as compared to $7.07. Replacing a part of the barley with ground oats did not prove profitable. Grinding barley in the preparation of oats to barley increased the feeding value, reduced the rate of gain, lowered the degree of finish and lost money, the extra cost corresponding decrease in the margin of profit over feed costs.

The steers in lot 1 weighed 897.61 pounds at the end of the 224 days, or an average gain of 502.25 pounds. The second lot gained 483.54 pounds each, the third lot 458.57 pounds, and the fourth 429.46 pounds.

BORROWING LICENSE COSTS SHIPPER $107

Shipping furs on another man's license proved to be an expensive proposition for a young man at Sleepy Eye. Martin Foster was arrested in charge of borrowing Andrew Sperl's license to avoid paying for one of his furs, and fined $100 and costs total-ling $17. Sperl was fined $17.50.

FOLLOW RECOMMENDATIONS WITH SPRAYS

In connection with the use of Bordeaux mixture as a fungicide against certain plant diseases, the question sometimes comes up, "Can I afford to economize by using a weaker mixture than is commonly advised for the various diseases which require Bordeaux treatment? In some cases, where infection is mild a Bordeaux mixture containing considerably less copper sulphate than is usually recommended might give very good control; and it is also probable that even when infection is severe partial control would be effected by a weak mixture. However, spraying must be done in advance as a preventive measure, and the grower can not foretell whether the conditions will be, such that a weak fungicide will give satisfactory control. Spraying is a question of crop insurance and the grower must decide whether to insure his crop wholly or only partially against the disease.

SECRETARY

Become a private secretary. The Union Commercial College, Grand Forks, N. Dak. has trained many business men and women. Miss Mable Olson is now private secretary to Mr. Ole DeMille, the big movie producer and magnate. Eva Quigley is private secretary for Mr. Wm. C. Cloer, Division Supt. of the Gr. N. R. R. Both these people began back in the country more than the entire tuition cost. Send for free catalog and learn how little a course at this FULLY ACCREDITED school will cost.

Our Little Corner

No. 29 JULY 12, 1928 Vol. 2

Every year, along about this time, we meet the fellow who asks us, "Is it hot enough for you?"

The new maid was asked what she thought of the electric cooker. "It's just wonderful," she said "but I can't find out since I care three weeks ago."

A Sunburn Rug would be a real addition to any room in the home, besides being beautiful they give you years and years of wear—just as hard wear as the family needs to give it. Have you seen the new Sunburn patterns?

Another reason why we hate to have a photograph taken is because it makes us look as though we were having our photograph taken.

Take along a Kampkook outfit on your next trip and have the fun of cooking your own meals. A remarkable little outfit. Takes but little room in the car. Burns gasoline. And how it cooks! Come in and see the Kampkook outfit.

Sunday School Teacher: "And now what is the golden text for today?"

Would it help any to know that they are having very severe blizzards in the Argentine?

There is a certain friend of ours in this town who says he would rather be hard-boiled than bone-headed.

You can take clothes out or put clothes into a Maytag while the washer is running.

The handiest little picnic stove ever invented is the Kampkook. Folds up the size of a suitcase. Opens up and is ready to go in two minutes.

They're good to look at these new Sundura rugs. And they're good to walk on, too. Have you seen the new patterns?

If you like good looking dining room furniture, step right this way. We want you to see the new walnut dining suite that has just been placed on our display floor.

A New Car .. A New Car Style .. A New Zenith of Low Priced Car-Luxury and Performance

New slender profile chromium-plated radiator—Long, low bodies.—Generous room for 2 to 5 passengers, according to body model.—Luxurious deep upholstery and appointment detail.—New "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine, for use with any gasoline.—Smooth speed up to 60 and more miles an hour.—Chrysler light-action internal expanding hydraulic four-wheel brakes—no other car of this price possesses this feature.

All Chrysler research, engineering and manufacturing have been inspired by the fundamental motive of giving ever greater quality and value for each dollar of car cost. Public recognition of this principle, in four years advanced Chrysler from 17th to 3rd place in sales in the N. A. C. C.

With a new product—the Plymouth—Chrysler is the first to give, at so low a price, the advantages of performance, riding ease, dependability and full adult size which characterize fine cars of higher price.

The new Chrysler-designed and Chrysler-built Plymouth is so revolutionary an advance over other low-priced cars, it is such conclusive evidence that the past year's strides in the science of manufacturing have multiplied the purchasing power of the motor car dollar, that you will surely want to see it and drive it.

And above all, you must see its beautiful lines and finish, and stretch at ease in its deep-upholstered, full adult-size bodies, to comprehend how completely the Plymouth surpasses cars heretofore sold under $1000.

The Plymouth is today displayed by every Chrysler dealer. He wants you to see it and to ride in it.

Please submit the Plymouth to this trial. We believe you will discover there has never been a car anywhere near its price that can approach the Plymouth for power, pick-up, smoothness, easy handling, safety, quietness and roominess—nor that can equal it in beauty and style.

RESIDENTS OF CITY READ MORE BOOKS AT PUBLIC LIBRARY

Annual Report Shows 15 Per Cent Increase in Circulation For Past Year

Residents of Thief River Falls are reading more. This situation is revealed by the annual report of the Carnegie Library issued by the librarian, Mrs. Hazel Halgrim, this week. Whereas last year 2165 borrowers took out 29,216 books, during the past twelve months 2523 borrowers drew a total of 30,510 volumes. This is an average of more than twelve books per card holder. Just about half as many non-fiction volumes were drawn as fiction. The greatest increase was in the non-fiction class this group increasing from 7,296 to 10,102.

During the same period the number of volumes in the library was increased from 7,612 to 8,561. Of the present total, 1171 volumes are adult books and 1619 are children's. Slightly more than half of the total registered borrowers are children. While the number of adult borrowers increased only six, fifty two more children are registered than the previous year. There was a large increase in the number of volumes read by adults however, the increase being 3027 for adults and 1527 for children.

Estimating the total population served by the library at 6990, 12 per cent are registered as borrowers, 43 books, 62 the 2523 card holders, 104, or 16 percent, are from outside the city. Circulation per capita of the district served is five this year, as compared with four the previous year.

Average daily attendance in the reference and reading room increased from 50 to 54 or 7.5. The number of periodicals and newspapers currently received remain the same, 64 and 6 respectively.

County Escaped Serious Damage From Storms Which Swept State Last Friday

Pennington county and its outlaw streams escaped with very little damage from the storms that swept the Circles northwest last Friday night. Although cither parts of the state report damage to homes and other buildings known as cyclones and several people killed, nothing more serious than a few telephone poles and trees succumbed to the wind's fury in this community. The phone service was interrupted in several directions Friday, which nevertheless calling out the entire corps of trouble shooters to restore connections.

One fatality is reported near Lake Park, in Becker county. A woman had just completed milking, when the barn collapsed over her. The amount of damage to property is also reported from the neighborhood of Detroit Lakes.

In the vicinity of Moorhead 25 barns were blown down, and practically every windmill was leveled to the ground. Nearly a telephone of farmers pole remained standing in the area between Moorhead and Breckenridge. Cattle, too, in the barns were blown over and three cows killed between Badger and Argyle. Two farmers, fatally injured, were struck by lightning and were confined to their beds on Friday, but escaped without permanent injury.

Brainerd, Little Falls, Anoka and Zumbrota all report damage running into hundreds of thousands of dollars from gales that reached velocities of 70 miles an hour. Considerable damage was done to crops by the heavy rain accompanying the high winds.

Are Wives More Efficient Than Husbands?

Husbands are inclined to boast a little about the efficient methods they put in their shops and offices and forget that it takes even more brains to evolve a comfortable home and a well dressed family on a small pay envelope.

Women who are naturally "good managers" don't simply spend money. They invest it, and they insist that every dollar must pay them liberal dividends in Service and Satisfaction.

Many of those women are our customers because they know that our extensive buying resources enable us to offer them merchandise of excellent Quality at a rock bottom price. They have learned the lesson that Cash always secures a lower price than Credit, and they prefer to carry their purchases home and save money.

Co-operative Buying! Dividends on Investments! Cash Purchasing! Husbands like to talk about these business principles but their wives apply them every time they go shopping in a J. C. Penney Company store.

Highways to Red Lake Will be Given Special Attention Before Annual Picnic Sunday

Marshall, Beltrami and Pennington County Engineers Pledge Cooperation

TWENTY-PIECE BAND WILL ACCOMPANY TOUR

Red Arrows Marking Route Distributed Along Highway The Entire Distance

Co-operation of the highway engineers of three counties assures the best ever roads for the large number of people this summer who will take the trip to Red Lake next Sunday for the annual Red Lake Resort Association picnic. Communications were received yesterday by Dr. J. T. Bowers, representing the joint committee of the Resort Association and the Commercial Club, from Irving Quist, Marshall county highway engineer; W. H. Johnson, Beltrami county highway engineer, and Oscar Umland of Pennington county, indicating their active interest in the tour.

The pilot car will leave from Orr's corner promptly at 7 a. m. A service car from the Stevenson Garage will close the line of the caravan. It is expected that many cars will have extra room to accommodate persons who do not have cars of their own.

A 20-piece band will accompany the tour from this city, under the direction of Carl Swenson, new band leader. They are scheduled to play during the noon hour.

Congressman Selvig from the ninth district and Harold Knutson of the sixth district will be the speakers of the day. An extensive program of sports, with prizes for the winners, has been arranged. As the picnic will be held on one of the finest beaches in the state, water sports will be the major activity.

Reports returned from towns and communities in the seven counties that have been invited to participate indicate that a very large crowd will gather at the lake. Last year 2,000 attended, but this year, with much improved roads and a wider appreciation of the charms of Red Lake as a summer resort, at least 3,000 are expected.

Red arrows indicating the proper road to take have been placed along the entire route from this city to the lake, so that drivers who have never made the trip before need have no fear of losing their way. The route to be followed is as follows: East on the Elsworth road 17 miles, to Goodridge; north by way of Good ridge seven miles; east on the road commonly known as ditch 20 to the sandridge in Beltrami, and then south and east to the lake.

The Brage Chorus announced this morning that the members will attend in a body, and will contribute musical numbers to the entertainment program.

TWO DIRECTORS RE-ELECTED TO SCHOOL BOARD

Bennes and Mattson Returned Without Opposition At Annual Election

VERY LITTLE CHANGE IN OPERATING EXPENSE

Larger Percentage of Tax Levy Paid In, Financial Statement Indicates

E. M. Bennes and A. E. Mattson were re-elected to the school board without opposition at the annual school meeting of Dist. 18 Tuesday night. The vote cast was very light, indicating that voters and taxpayers are completely satisfied with the administration of the school system for the past year.

On account of the very small attendance, no formal business meeting was held. After the reading of minutes of last year's meeting, the annual report of the clerk and treasurer was submitted to the board. A total of 22 votes were cast before the polls closed. Last year 19 voters were registered, while in 1926 nearly 1,000 turned out for the meeting.

Bonds to the effect of $7,000 were retired during the year, reducing the total bonded indebtedness of the district to $216,000.

Audubon Man Succeeds Bergstrom As Manager Of Farmers Elevator

Theodore Olson of Audubon has been appointed manager of the Farmers Exchange Elevator to succeed Ed Bergstrom, who resigned July 16 to assume the management of the Red Lake Ice Company.

The annual meeting of the stockholders was held on July 12. A report of the year's business was presented and read by F. W. Holloway as auditor for the firm of Cristian Iverson, Halloway and Knutson company of Minneapolis, showing a fair profit for the year in accordance with the volume of business handled.

C. Reisinger was elected president to succeed T. F. Ryestad. Other officers elected are Emil Jahr, son, vice-president; T. H. Bjerke, secretary; S. N. Olson and Gust Bergsvig, directors. These men with Olson compose the new board of directors.

M. H. Ballcrud is the only director retiring this year.

The elevator will be closed until the arrival of the new manager, who is expected to be about August 1.

Ten years ago the average profit above cost of feed for a dairy cow in the cow-testing associations in the State of Missouri was $54.21 in a year. In 1927, the average profit had increased to $132.23 per cow. Over 95 per cent of the dairy cows of the testing associations of Missouri are producing purebred bulls.

Cow Testing Association Will Be Started In This County Soon After Fair

A Cow Testing association will be organized in Pennington county shortly after the County Fair, according to County Agent Douglass. Although Minnesota ranks a close second to Missouri in the number of cow testing associations, this county has had no chapter in the past. There are 171 active associations in the state at the present time, reporting a total of 8,215 cows tested in the month of June. One thousand five hundred and fifty-three herds averaged 25 pounds of butterfat or more; 4,219 cows produced 40 or more pounds of butterfat for the month, and 1,000 cows produced 50 pounds or more.

Cow testing associations were started in June, bringing the number of new units this year up to 13. Illness county started its record of cow testing in March.

Cow testing-association work will be made a major project in Morrison county, where there are five associations testing 130 herds. A plan is being worked out there whereby the county agent will co-operate with the cow testing association in the county in the movement, which will involve monthly visits by the agent to the herds, and monthly joint meetings of the testers to talk over their problems.

Gamble-Robinson Increases Capital Stock $1,500,000

Reorganization of the Gamble-Robinson Co., one of the largest dealers in fruits and produce in the country, was announced Tuesday by the new president, David F. Gamble, at their annual meeting in Iowa. A Gamble retired as president, together with other members of the Gamble family of the organization. A stock issue of $1,500,000 has been authorized for the purpose of increasing capitalization.

Gamble-Robinson operates 65 branches in seven northwest states, and in Ontario and Quebec. Last year the total volume of business passed the $22,000,000 mark, an increase of over $6,000,000 since 1922.

Two Goodridge Girls Will Represent This County In State Fair Bread Contest

Two Goodridge girls, Esther Hanson and Ruth McDonald, won free trips to the State Fair Sept. 3-8 at the bread making contest held at Lincoln high school Tuesday morning. Genevieve Sherberg of Thorhult, placing third, was selected as first alternate. The other girls entered in the contest were Celaine Pennegrad of Erie, Ruth Sherberg and Ruby Vaughan of Goodridge, Mamie Ai Fyrsum and Mildred Denhart of Hazel. Competition was very keen, only three points separating the highest and lowest scores. Miss Mildred Schenck of the University Extension department, State Club leader, judged the contest. Flour for the contest was contributed by the Hanson-Barnes Milling company. The girls incidentally initiated a new set of cooking tables recently installed in the high school domestic science room.

More than 150 club members of the county attended the Achievement day picnic at Kalhaff Tuesday. A number of Guernsey cattle were brought over from the Peter Dahrlind farm for the stock judging contest, in which Obert Bjerke, Stanley Lindsley and Wilson St. Hilaire and Gladys Enne of Erie won first, second and third places respectively. Leather tablets were awarded as prizes.

Several club members will all exhibit at the county fair, as many of the State Fair entrants are from this county. An afternoon of sports was enjoyed by the club members at the picnic. St. Hilaire came out winner in a 50-yard dash, defeating Ivar Ellingson, who lost the tug of war to Erie. Free candy was distributed by the Thief River Falls Candy Kitchen.

JUNE SETTLEMENT OF COUNTY TAXES SLIGHTLY REDUCED

Tax Burden Of County Decreased Annually Without Interruption Since 1922

In spite of a substantial reduction in the tax levy, payment of current taxes during the first six months of this year show an increase over the same period last year, indicating a more prosperous financial condition among the taxpayers of the county. Delinquent taxes have also dropped one-fourth during the period, which is considered a healthy condition, and is a small reduction for the total receipts.

Figures compiled by County Treasurer John Ellingstad show total receipts for the period from January 1 to June 30 of this year of $256,796.21, as against $254,175.76 for the same period last year. Current taxes paid this year amount to $162,968.12, compared with $187,052.86 last year.

Delinquent taxes paid in dropped from $25,585.46 for the six months period ending June 30, 1927, to $25,-194.15 for the corresponding period this year due, Mr. Ellingstad thinks, to the larger amount paid up last fall. Penalties, on the other hand, increased from $1,744.75 last year to $1,984.32 this year.

The amount of taxes paid in by private corporation was nearly double that of last year, being $10,850.85, as against $5,450.57 last year. Taxes on state lands decreased from $5,-414.61 to $4,455.34, while the latter dropped from $5,955.12 to $2,758.80. Teachers insurance and retirement fund receipts dropped from $978.50 to $83.500. Mortgage registration tax receipts increased from $176.75 to $210.70. Miscellaneous items show a decrease, from $731.17 to $424.

FOUR CASES GO TO JURY DURING COURT SESSION

Judge Grindeland Disposes Of Or Takes Under Advisement Five Of Thirteen

COURT ADJOURNS AFTER BEING IN SESSION WEEK

Jury Decides For Sheriff Ihle In Long Deferred Bradley Suit

Only four cases out of the twenty-four originally on the calendar were settled by the jury in the July term of district court, which closed yesterday after being in session one week. Of the thirteen cases still pending when court convened, five were disposed of or taken under advisement by Judge Andrew Grindeland, two are continued and one is settled by the litigants during a court recess.

The first case submitted to the jury was that of Mrs. Anna Bradley vs. Ole Ihle. It was alleged by the plaintiff that Mr. Ihle, while attempting to recover goods under a writ of replevin from her husband's tavern stock, used force resulting in physical injuries to herself, and seized goods belonging to her that were not covered by the writ. The position of the defense was that undue force had not been used and that the property in question had not been removed by Mr. Ihle. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the defendant.

A directed verdict in favor of the defendants was ordered by Judge Grindeland in the case of Phillip Hawkins vs. the City of Thief River Falls and the Great Northern railroad. Mr. Hawkins was attempting to recover damages sustained when he drove his car upon the Great Northern tracks at Duluth avenue, holding that the abandoned crossing was not properly marked. The court ruled that it was a case of negligence on the part of the plaintiff, and ordered a directed verdict absolving the defendants of blame. The plaintiff was given a stay of 90 days in which to file an appeal. The case was heard at the request of counsel for the plaintiff.

Ole Fortun was awarded $450 damages against Mrs. Louie Mandt, for minor services, while Mrs. Mandt was awarded $250 damages on her counterclaim. Fortun suffered a broken collarbone, and damages to his car.

The jury decided in favor of the plaintiff again in a suit brought by Mrs. Magdalena Hoffman against the estate of Mrs. Laura Berndt. Mrs. Hoffman had cared for Berndt's sister-in-law, Mrs. Berndt, for about six months shortly prior to the latter's death, for which she presented a claim against the estate of $1500, which the executors of the estate declared unreasonable. A compromise of $450 was arrived at by the jury as fair compensation.

Two Divorces Granted

Two divorces were granted by Judge Grindeland Tuesday. Ernest Stevens and Edna M. Peterson vs. Christian L. Peterson. The plaintiffs were awarded the custody of three minor children. Nora Williams vs. Arthur W. Williams, was heard by the judge yesterday morning and taken under advisement.

Attorney A. J. Valgel, representing the counsel Farmers and Mechanics State bank against Christian Iverson, was heard in motion to make the bank a party to the action, and the motion was granted. Iverson signed a note for $1,000 and sold note blank, which stated that interest was to be paid at the rate of 10 per cent, after a 6 per cent maximum interest rate law was passed. Iverson refused to pay the note, declaring that it was illegal because it bore interest above the legal rate.

The suit brought by Kohn and Fitzpatrick vs. E. Walker was submitted to the court for a decision later. Another action brought against Mr. Walker by Graf Soucet Company was settled by the litigants during a court recess.

Further time was given by the court for settlement of the contest case against Ole Ihle, city of Thief River Falls. If it is not settled out of court it will be heard then by the district court.

The jury, consisting of 22 women and nine men, was excused early yesterday morning. This was the first time that women had been called for jury service in Pennington county.

HAROLD OEN, ONE OF EARLIEST SETTLERS, VISITING IN CITY

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Oen of Anderson, Sask., arrived in this city last week for a short visit with Mr. Oen's brother, Rasmus Oen. Harold Oen was one of the earlier settlers in the Thief River Falls; opening a tin shop in partnership with Rasmus in 1903, near where the Ogamah Hotel now stands. He went to Canada in 1904, after closing out his interest in the Oen lumber mill.

Because the high cost of building makes apparently low wages make it impossible for young couples in Denmark to build their own homes, the government is now contributing half of the cost of new apartment buildings. Sometimes the apartments are built by a group of citizens who agree to share half the cost; others are built by corporations. No working man may marry as long as he is in debt to the government.

Here's a good menu for a summer evening party: Fruit salad, made from lettuce, oranges, pears, peaches, cherries, and sliced pineapple, dressed with whipped cream, and garnished with nut meats; crackers spread with cottage or Roquefort cheese; iced tea or a fruitade of any kind.

Rev. Lundell Sees Midnight Sun While Visiting Lappland

Editor Times:

I think it was from Smaland I wrote the last letter for the Times. I went thru Ostersetland to Stockholm. Stockholm was overfilled with visitors from all parts of Sweden and not a few from other European countries and America. As the King was celebrating his seventieth birthday the principal streets were decorated beautifully. As a member of the Covenant Conference I had the privilege to go along when the church sent to Borggarden to sing for the King. The King was well pleased and moved almost to tears when he expressed his gratitude to them. The Hargarden surely gave echo when that chorus of 2,000 voices was singing.

Sunday forenoon I went to "Leufgards landet" to attend the military services which the King and his family attend. I did not get near enough to hear, but I was close enough to see the soldiers from both the army and the navy paraded before the King. Although 70 years old he rides a horse like a young man. In the afternoon we rode through the streets in an open carriage with his family, and all along the route the people stood as packed as was possible. The King is surely popular with the people.

The Covenant Conference was very great. When the Covenant was organized 60 years ago the ordinary living-room was large enough for those who met. Now it was not a building in Stockholm large enough to seat all who wanted to attend. When the chorus gave the farewell concert on Monday evening the tickets cost $1.50, but 10,000 people attended.

Stockholm is a pretty city. In the parks you find tropical trees, mingled with spruce and birch. In the old town the streets are narrow, but the sewer part the streets are real wide. Nowhere any rubbish. It is kept clean everywhere.

To see flowers in the summer is to see a beautiful country. Around every railroad station is a park. I went from Stockholm to Gefle over night, the midnight sun. I was told I had to stay at least a week at Gefle if I expected to see the midnight sun from it, but to no addition clear there. I had not time to stay there more than one night, but to my great delight it was a clear and beautiful night all over saw. The man who had charge of the water tower I met was up there, and there we had a beautiful night during the midnight hour.

I was now nearly to the Polar Circle, in Lappland. The agricultural condition of this part of the country is very poor. If it were not for the mining industry none but the Lapps could live there. Norrland is noted for its enormous amount of iron ore which for quality is second to none in the wide world. Good wages and plenty of work marked the entire year, but the new year started with 8 strike which still goes on. Many of the workers (most of them, I was told) were against going on strike because this was a political strike. But a strike was declared, and now everything is standing still. The storekeepers had a conference a few days before I came there and decided to stop giving credit to the strikers. I understand the merchant has the same struggle in this country as in the United States. He has to get money for what he sells in order to pay his bills.

In Sweden the struggle between capital and the workers is reaching such people enormous sums, this strike bringing the losses, for the working men alone, into millions. I was told, by Premier Hikkland, enacted a law which I understand makes it compulsory for both sides to arbitrate when disputes arises. If this law solves the question, then this Hikkalg is worthy of thanks from both this and coming generations. The wisdom of this law is however disputed by many.

In Haden I met my brother who had been in Finland and now came across by Hoparanda. We now proceeded to Dalorna. In Mora we stayed a few hours but it rained so we preferred to stay under shelter. There would otherwise have been many places of interest to see. We had ordered rooms at Vilhelmsnet in Rottnik, right in the shore of the beautiful Siljon. Dalorna at this time of the year is visited by tourists from southern parts of Sweden and other European countries as well as a good number from America. To hear English conversation is not uncommon, also French and German. John (my brother) rested a few days at Rottnik, but I had to continue in order to convey the many greetings I had from Dalekka in the Valley to relatives in Dakota. I visited Falcrin, Ludvika, Nyhammer, Sogen, and Wansbro. In Fittinkaborna we met and conferred to Malung. When I inquired about the men I should greet there they told me he had been buried three days ago. The angel of death had gone faster than I could travel. But I can bring to his relatives and friends in the Valley the joyful message that Olaf Erickson was victorious even in death, because he was a true believer in Jesus Christ.

We crossed the mountain from Dalorna to Vermland in an automobile. Yesterday we had a glorious day in Amaljatio. We stopped in to a big summer meeting where the Gospel Story was the theme in both song and addresses. We met a few whom we know from the time we lived in Sweden. Ah, how the years have made them look old. A new generation has come to the front, and new faces and new customs meet you everywhere. Two or three days more we expect will bring us to the place of our childhood days. Hitherto the Lord has helped us. Greetings to all our friends in dear U. S. A.

Yours,
O. J. Lundell.

Alfalfa and clover are among the best pasture crops for the production of the great danger of bloating, however, sheep should never be turned on such pastures when wet with dew or rain. Moreover, sheep should be accustomed to clover or alfalfa pasture gradually by giving them a full feed of blue grass pasture or, legume hay before turning them on the new pasture. The danger from bloating seems to vary with different sections of the country, so that the accumulated experience of a neighborhood is usually better advice on the subject of bloating than are general recommendations from outside sources.

Considerable interest in purebred bulls was aroused last year in a contest in Mississippi through a "lottery" to encourage owners of scrub bulls to get rid of them. As purebred bull was purchased by one of the banks in the county. A scrub owner of each farm had his name on a slip of paper, and put it in a sealed box which was brought to the Abigore of the. Each name was drawn from the box to determine who would receive the purebred bull in exchange for his scrub. The other men were paid the market price for their animals. In another county in the same state five banks cooperated in making a similar offer to sellers of scrub bulls in that county.

Most persons do not realize what an enormous number of seeds are produced by weeds. The number varies with different plants, but most kinds produce from a hundred to several thousand seeds per plant. Weeds such as wild carrot, lambsquarters, and velvetleaf may produce 20,000 or more seeds. Not all of these seeds will germinate at once, but delay sprouting for several years. This fact is responsible for the old saying, "One year's seeding makes seven years' weeding." The only sure way to prevent annual weeds from coming in is to keep them from going to seed.

An old-fashioned remedy for a stain made by tar, pitch, grease, road oil, creosote, or any other oily substance, paint, is to rub lard thoroughly into the stain and then wash it out with hot water and soap. The treatment may have to be repeated. Otherwise use benzine or some such as carbon tetrachloride, chloroform, turpentine, or alcohol may be used.

Several small or moderate-sized pastures in warm weather and avoid waste. On warm days the application of salt seem as active as in the cold months. Choose cooling foods, crisp in texture, for part of the meal, and give considerable attention to the appearance of the food and the table. Meals-of-doors meals on the porch or lawn will be found popular and easy, if some of the preparation can be done early in the day.

A Minnesota Dairy Farmer Abroad

Letters written by W. F. SCHILLING
U. S. Delegate to International Dairy Conference

CHAPTER I

New York City, June 15.

I was awfully happy the other day to receive a wire from my big friend, Harry Blackstone, telling me that he would bid me bon voyage when I got to New York. Harry was concerned about me and wanted to be certain I got safely on board, having travelled considerably, so he had gained a few things from experience and by paying the price that he was willing and anxious to impart to me gratis.

Well, sure enough when I got to the Pennsylvania Hotel and after paying a porter seventy-five cents for carrying my two grip across the street (that's $47.50 per mile) I took up the telephone and called up the McAlpin Hotel and got Harry and was much relieved to hear his voice in that great city and to find one person that I knew.

Well, we got together and I'll admit very thankful for my friend's watchful eye on me when I was so far from home, and surrounded with all the complexities of metropolitan life. Can be grown, manufactured, produced in this big city. Paul Block, one of the owners of the old school, who in my early days gave me my first position as cub reporter on the "Sidewalks of New York." Little Annie Rooney," "Sweet Adeline," Mary O'Grady," and "Down in my cars today as I type this letter.

If there are any of my readers who have never been able to visit this convincing folks you were a statesman of high and discerning rank was to invite you to your relationship with a stockyards, Governor Elect.

Harry is a dealer in foreign woods and farms a bit for recreation and to keep from accumulating too much "jack" money. Some day I'll tell you his farming experiences and I presume will always consider it a privilege to be a guest of Harry's.

Harry is a great lover of nature and a great hunter and fisherman, with a great knowledge of birds and animals, so he brought up on a farm in Minnesota, where I was born, and I presume will always consider it a privilege to be a guest of Harry's.

Harry is a great lover of nature and a great hunter and fisherman, with a great knowledge of birds and animals, so he brought up on a farm in Minnesota, where I was born, and I presume will always consider it a privilege to be a guest of Harry's.

Well, Harry took me down to where the finest woods in all the world were taken off of our boats and piled in great neat lumber to decorate our tables, walls, etc. Then we were driven down on the old East River front in the ghetto district that I was born in and saw that the seething mass of foreign born humanity arrested, took aboard the fruit to seven steerages, and multiplied.

Then we went to Madison & Square and still, the first of its kind in America, established in 1876 and which is to huge tanks of boiling water and steam and permitted to stay for days to soften up so that they may be cut or shave without danger of their being cracked and also so that the saw can cut them without sparking, as many of these trees are deathly hard as iron. Every cut is placed in a certain position of the log and thus grains can be match with absolutely no confusion. These woods are sold by the foot or pound, and logs are sold for from $200 to $2,000.

Across the street and also on the river is located the firm of Willard Parker & Co. (1-17), of 42 years experience in the manufacture of tropical woods in this country, and it was with great pleasure that I was shown through this big yard by one of the directors, A. Knapp, the fire wire wire president of the company. Mr. Knapp is a splendid character and I feel sure he will be the prominent teachers on the Institute faculty.

From Park Rapids Rev. and Mrs. Schollberg and daughter Miriam went to Wadena, and will return here the latter part of the week. Ruth and Helen Schollberg went to visit friends at Itasca. The others returned Monday.

Gilbert Sandum of Holt was a business caller in the city Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Chamberlain and family returned this week from a short vacation trip into North Dakota.

DIP SHEEP TO KILL TICK

Dipping is the only practical method for killing sheep of both biting and sucking lice. Some kinds of materials that have proved effective against sheep lice are arsenical, coal-tar creosote, and tobacco or nicotine dips. An arsenical dip is the most efficient, although since it is so poisonous great precautions must be taken when using it. Tobacco dips are all right for dipping sheep for lice. Coal-tar creosote is also a suitable material when used with soft water and may be used warm or cold. This is the time when the ticks are there and the brothers have their turn at picking. Because no matter where the picnic is held, all good picnickers burn the papers and other refuse left from the meal.

A very simple, and delightful family picnic may be planned by preparing a substantial hot dish at home and carrying it to the back of the automobile, either wrapped in keep it warm or in a portable fireless cooker. Doesn't this sound like a nice one? Escalloped ham and potatoes for the hot dish, pickles, rye bread and olives, a basket of fruit, firecracker cookies and ice cream, with a fresh, cool milkshake to drink.

Scalloped Ham and Potatoes

In a well buttered pan put slices of raw scraped potatoes and a little pepper then a layer of ham cut in small uncrisped bacon; add another layer of potatoes and pour over enough milk to wash a thin cream sauce made by mixing a one tablespoon of flour to a tablespoon of melted butter, to which a cup of milk has been added and the lot and to light.

WHAT TO EAT AT THE PICNIC

To many, a picnic is a real rest and diversion while it is others, a hard preparation, and "stewing" in hot weather.

Whether the picnic be held in the city park or some beautiful spot along a creek where the air is fresh and the children may wade, the main idea of a picnic is the food. In planning for a picnic, however, it is always important to remember that it ought to be a vacation for the housewife, as well as the family, and everything should be planned as simply as possible, using paper plates and napkins, so that when the fun of eating is over there will be no drudgery of cleaning up. This is the time when the ticks are there and the brothers have their turn at picking. Because no matter where the picnic is held, all good picnickers burn the papers and other refuse left from the meal.

Raw Milk Is Called Best for Food

Pasteurizers Who Claim Safety for Product Criticized

Dairymen who pasteurize milk were described as "fosterers of insidious propaganda that tend to give consumers of their product a false sense of security" by Dr. H. Macy Stone, Health Officer-Treasurer of the National Milk Producers Association of America, Friday morning at the meeting.

"Raw Milk is God's only natural food," asserted Dr. Stone. He spoke at a joint meeting of the St. Paul Association of natural raw milk producers and a committee of independent milkmen at the Germania Club Dinner, 444 Illee Street. About 100 dairymen attended the meeting.

"Milk pasteurizers tell the public their treated product insures the safety of the milk supply, but the recent typhoid epidemic in Montreal was traced to a milk pasteurizing plant.

"There has been propaganda put out by milk pasteurizers against natural milk producers," Dr. Stone said, "that is unreasonable, unscrupulous and false.

"Pasteurizing does not kill the dangerous organism in milk. It merely destroys lactic acid organism. This stops the milk from souring, thus destroying the value of that warning signal of too old milk, and allows the milk to putrify."

Fourth of July Picnic

Mrs. Ida Bird—Did you have a good time at the picnic?

Mrs. Ima Bird—Yes, but I'm glad it's over. I'm tired of eating ham sandwiches.

Sandwiches

Cut whole grain or graham bread into slices; spread each slice with butter and on one slice place a lettuce leaf; on the other, any other kind of sandwich filling you desire.

Firecracker Cookies

Use your favorite cookie recipe, cut dough in long oblong forms like a firecracker, use a shred of coconut for the fuse and before baking sprinkle each with tiny red candies.

Strawberry Milkshake

Use two tablespoons of strawberry syrup to each cup of chilled milk. To make the strawberry syrup use one half as much sugar as there are of sliced and prepared strawberries, with one-fourth as much water. Strawberries. Cook until berries are soft, mash, and strain through cheesecloth. Strawberry milkshakes could be made at home, put on the ice and then carried to the picnic in a thermos bottle or fruit jars.

Home Methods of Setting Colors

Home methods of setting colors in fabrics, such as soaking them in salt water or vinegar, are worthless and are of no avail. Textile specialists of the Bureau of Home Economics point out the fact that if these methods were of such simple way of securing fast colors, manufacturers would use it. Dyes properly set, they say, will withstand ordinary, hard use and will not fade even after many months of exposure to strong sunshine. The only way to be sure that a fabric will be reasonably fast to water, perspiration, and light is to make a test.

Official Paper of the City of Thief River Falls and Pennington County.

We should all pretend to be a little better than we are, in public; we should have a display window as the store-keepers have, and exhibit our best goods. We should have ideals we cannot quite reach; we should all be a little high minded, and accomplish a little of the greater good. Every man should know a few lines of poetry; he should exaggerate every good thing a little, and hover cautiously around the various higher things, but he must not go so far from the shores of reality that he may not paddle back to safety. We can't wear our Sunday or company clothes all the time; we must put on working suits, and attack the weeds and the mud holes.—E. W. Howe.

THE AIR LINE IS COMING

Announcement is made this week in Minneapolis newspapers that a new transcontinental airmail passenger line is being organized and that this company will operate extensively thruout the northwest. One of the air lines that is proposed by this new company will extend from Minneapolis to Winnipeg. The Soo Line, the New York Central and the Canadian Pacific railroads are mentioned as being interested in this proposition.

Thief River Falls cannot afford to delay longer in arranging for a hanging field and other facilities necessary for recognition of this point as an airport. It is high time that steps be taken in this direction. This new industry, like all business, will go where the greatest inducements are offered. Other communities are making strong bids for this business and if we get any consideration whatever when routes are arranged it will be because we are prepared to handle the traffic.

THERE WAS AN ELECTION

Only a few citizens of Independent School District No. 18 took enough interest in the election Tuesday night to cast a vote. And while such a dearth of interest is not especially hopeful, it does indicate a passive satisfaction on the part of the voters with the past administration.

If all of the public's business was in as healthy a condition as the affairs of this school district property owners would have little reason to worry about future taxes. The indebtedness of the district is rapidly shrinking. If the present schedule is maintained all of the indebtedness will be wiped out in a very few years. The tax levy is shrinking too. It is interesting to note that the same levy that raised $61,102.71 two years ago raised only $48,000 last year. Tax collections have been good this past year thru the whole county, which is certainly an encouraging condition.

YES; YOU ARE INVITED—

The seventh annual community picnic at the Red Lake Narrows will be held next Sunday and indications point to another record breaking crowd in attendance. Each year these picnics have grown more popular and only with the people of Thief River Falls but thruout this entire territory. This year more people from neighboring communities than ever before will take part in the event. And with the roads in excellent condition the event will prove itself more enjoyable to those who take part than it has ever done before. Certainly these picnics are doing much to popularize the Red Lake Narrows as the ideal playground for Northwestern Minnesota.

A COMMUNITY PROJECT

"With the fine start that has already been made, it is not going to be long before Red Lake Falls will boast one of the finest community halls in Minnesota," says the Red Lake Falls Gazette in an appeal to citizens of that community to "put shoulders to the wheel." Nearly fifteen hundred dollars had been raised for this purpose last week and considerably more has been added to the total by now.

It is surprising how much can be accomplished by a community when there is a concerted action by any considerable group of its citizens. And Red Lake Falls has a group of citizens that not only knows how to pull in the same direction at the same time but is willing at any and all times to lend a hand to whatever community project needs pulling. We congratulate our good neighbors on the fine progress they have already made toward securing their community building. With the community building will come an even better community spirit that will lead to greater achievement.

A so called rodeo outfit has made several stops in northwestern Minnesota during the past few weeks and judging from the comments of the newspapers in the communities visited this attraction was not all that it claimed to be. "It is safe to say," comments the Marshall County Banner of Argyle, "that never in history have the people of this section been victimized in a more barefaced manner. The company put on an exhibition the equal of which is a familiar sight in the average barnyard when a colt is being broken in."

We hear much talk these days of the value of sunshine in building healthy bodies. There probably is something to this talk. Undoubtedly sunshine is a necessary diet. There must be many other things that are equally important however. We know many people who work in the sunshine day in and day out who do not appear to be half as healthy as some we know who feel the sun's rays only occasionally. The naked natives of the tropics get a lot of sun baths but they take few health prizes."

C. G. Matteson of Thief River Falls was elected president, secretary and treasurer of the Thief River Gun Club. Somehow or another he missed being elected vice-president.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

The first mixed jury to serve in Pennington county has completed its work. And the work was well done.

"Grandpa" Fuller observed his ninety-fifth birthday last Sunday by taking his usual daily two mile walk. As far as we know Mr. Fuller hasn't sold his prescription for a long and healthy life to any patent medicine company. If he were to offer testimony on the subject we suspect that one of the items emphasized as an essential would be regular exercise.

THE FIGHT THAT FAILED?

It is difficult to reconcile the attitude of some of Minnesota's country weeklies on the farm relief question with the general condition thruout the Northwest. For instance there are several papers in the state that are waging a spirited campaign against the organized effort to secure relief legislation, and they have become so enthusiastic in their desire to convince their readers that all is well with the farmer that they chide those who do not agree with them as either knaves or fools. These papers urge us to vote for Herbert Hoover because Mr. Hoover, they say, is the business man type of candidate who doesn't resort to a lot of flim-flam, but shoots straight from the shoulder and talks, not for votes but for results.

But Mr. Hoover says something must be done for agriculture. In his acceptance of the Republican nomination he told the convention, "You have manifested a deep concern in the problems of agriculture. You have pledged the party to support specific and constructive relief upon a nationwide scale, backed by the resources of the federal government. We will and must find a solution that will bring security and contentment to this great section of our people."

Were it not for the fact that these papers tell us Mr. Hoover never resorts to bluff and blarney we might question his sincerity. Under the circumstances, however, the only thing we can question is their consistency. When in one breath they berate the Northwest for asking for relief legislation and in the next breath laud Hoover as a proper ideal for the Northwest we are almost tempted to question their integrity.

We will not state that such papers are disloyal to the interests of their own state. Disloyal is perhaps too harsh a word. We would suggest, however, that they are decidedly out of tune with their state. The fight for recognition of agriculture by the federal government has extended over quite a number of years and only now is beginning to receive a little serious attention from those who have this recognition to give or to withhold. If this fight is dropped now then the efforts of years will be wasted. If it is continued just a little longer there is reason to believe it will be rewarded by very definite and very worth while results. The following discussion of this question of farm relief, published as an editorial in last week's Saturday Evening Post, is an indication that this fight which has been made to secure relief has very nearly accomplished its purpose:

> Signs are multiplying to indicate that farmers, throughout the country, South as well as North, and West as well as East, are gaining recognition to higher tariff duties as a possible factor in farm relief. Undoubtedly the next Administration, if Republican, will face the undertaking of enacting new tariff legislation carrying higher rates on agricultural products. Recently the subject was considered by a group of farm leaders delegated by organizations representing a number of farmers. Resolutions are now coming to appear from one cooperative association after another. We take it that so long as we are living politically under a McNary-Haugen regime, higher duties will be granted upon proper presentation of facts.
> Higher duties on imports will be urged on the basis of equalization of production costs for the same articles at home and abroad, in accordance with the theory of protection of the existing tariff. But it is also clear that protection will be required against exportations. The cheap labor production will be sought in and of objectively known, and presumably calculable, degrees of variation, subsidies considered from section to section. Thus the whole range of economics will be examined to protect properly current prices, or to correct protection in accordance with custom.
>
> The theory of the protective tariff implies the granting of the home market to domestic producers. The farmers in the East, South and West will require a complementary supported tariff legislation for manufactures, and a friend in the same position is likely to form against him in the South. The proponents of the national McNary-Haugen bill disclaimed any intention to oppose the present tariff protection for manufactures. The supporters of the export debenture plan rest their case upon the efficiency of high-tariff protection. It would seem that a protectionist regime will find itself neither in the mood nor in position to discountenance a properly presented high-tariff appeal by farmers.

THE FEDERAL ARM AGREADY TOO LONG

Milne-apolis Journal.

It was an eloquent plea for establishment of a Federal Department of Education, with a chair at the Cabinet table, which Miss Chart-sWilliams, Field Secretary of the National Education Association's department division, made before the Institute of Higher Education at the University of Minnesota the other day.

What most educators favoring such a change have in mind doubtless is, as she says, "efficient guidance, steering clear, to make available to schools throughout the country 'the best educational practices every today, from kindergarten through college."

But what they would find the schools saddled with, in the years to come, would probably be something entirely different, and not at all to their liking.

The first probable creation of the proposed department would mean no attempt at Federal dictation in the school management that should remain purely local. The government would only "advise." But how long before such advice, through the lure of Federal aid, would take the form of virtual dictation?

The country neither needs nor desires standardization of its schools. "The best educational practice" in North Carolina might not be the best educational practice in Minnesota. In the associations of educators and in the Bureau of Education there are already avenues aplenty for the exchange of ideas. But there does not exist today, nor should there, any power to compel, or even to induce, Minnesota to adopt educational practice that might be well enough suited to North Carolina's needs, but utterly unsuited to Minnesota's needs.

Let us beware of surrendering to Washington any more of the rights, privileges and duties of States and communities. Let us remember that the Interstate Commerce Commission, theoretically without power over Minnesota's local freight rates, nevertheless dictates many of those rates, over the protests of a State board that knows Minnesota's needs far better than any Federal agency will ever know them.

PUBLIC FORUM

Dear Editor:

Farm Relief Legislation has been the subject of much discussion during the last few years. So far the major parties have shown very little inclination to do anything along that line except talk. Special legislation to insure profits for transportation and other public service industries have been enacted. The Federal Reserve Act has protected and assisted the banking business and other industries have been helped by high protective tariffs.

But the basic industry on which all prosperity depends, agriculture, has pleaded in vain for legislation to assist and protect it. Following the inflation of currency, producing free and easy credit during and immediately following the war to encourage agricultural expansion the sudden deflation of 1920 has bankrupted thousands upon thousand of our farmers and depressed agricultural values until the remaining farmers are in a very precarious condition. Still the party in power at Washington has refused to recognize that agriculture is as much entitled to protection as other industries of the country.

Many different methods of solving these difficulties have been proposed. Among these the McNary-Haugen bills considered by the last few sessions of Congress have attracted the most attention and their adoption have been urged upon Congress by practically all active farm organizations. The main features of these bills have been to provide a sort of revolving fund to assist the farmers in the orderly marketing of their products including the exportable surplus but the farmers have not asked huge appropriations as subsidies but have insisted that the cost of operation and the perpetuation of the revolving fund be charged up against the products of agriculture by which it has been designated as an equalization fee, which would be collected from the products marketed for the product. Just how this would work out in actual practice is somewhat problematic and whether it would solve the farmers troubles can only be found out by giving it a fair trial.

And inasmuch as agriculture agrees to have the expense put directly upon its own shoulders it is difficult to understand just why there should be so much opposition to giving the plan such a fair trial.

It seems that the political overlords of the party in power are afraid to vote for legislation which agriculture is entitled to any favorable consideration at the hands of the government lest they should continue to demand more and more consideration. Undoubtedly the opportunities to regain the farmers markets for their own financial gains be finally taken away from them.

They tell us that the way to solve the farmers problems is by cooperation. That is fine. If the farmers were organized co-operatively 100 per cent strong to finance their operations, to market their products, and to buy their supplies that would have their problems solved. But if these same political overlords thought there was any immediate danger of such a thing happening, they would be busy legislating the farmers cooperatives out of existence. It is because they are certain that such a thing cannot per well be put over about that they are talking co-operation. They realize the difficulties of such a task.

Therefore, brother farmers: continue your efforts along co-operative lines. Build for permanency. Every successful co-operative venture will improve your economic condition and don't neglect to co-operate on election day. The candidates of the Farmer-Labor Party have consistently stood for real effective farm relief legislation and their platform declares for it this year too.

Respectfully submitted,
W. H. Quist, Sec. 5th Cong. Dist.
Farmer Labor Association.

How Does 20 x 32 Strike You?

THERE is a new member in the McCormick-Deering steel thresher family. The 20x32, after undergoing field trials for the past three years, has now been added to the regular line. This makes it possible for us to offer you a choice of three of the most convenient size machines for individual and neighborhood threshing—20x32, 22x36, and 28x46.

In a canvass made of thresher owners a few years ago, it was found that the 20x32 traveled farthest in custom work and handled the most jobs. The reason for this is obvious. It is light enough to pass quickly over all roads and bridges. It can be operated by a light tractor, and no job is too small to pay for setting the machine because of the ease with which the work can be accomplished.

In addition to grain threshing, McCormick-Deering threshers can be equipped for threshing practically all seeds, including beans and peas, with special equipment and recleaners for alfalfa and clover.

—More and more grain growers are finding that it pays to own a thresher.

Come in and let us show you the many advantages in owning a McCormick-Deering.

The tragic death of the little child has cast a gloom over the entire community. Judith and her brother, who is a few years older, were at home alone, while their mother and father were at work in a field some distance from the home. Judith was upstairs happily playing with her toys, when she managed to get hold of a box of matches.

A few minutes later her cries attracted her brother, who found the little girl's clothing a mass of flames. Terrified he ran to call his parents, but their arrival was too late to save the life of the little one. The flames were extinguished before they spread to the room. Besides her parents, the little child is survived by two brothers.—Hewitt Banner.

YOU CAN'T TELL

I have always noticed, fellows, it's a risky thing to do, to calculate according to how things look to you. The man who talks the nicest don't help you up the hill; the one that shows the loudest don't always pay the bill. Sometimes the biggest fish are the smallest bait; and mighty ugly women make the best of mates. The smartest looking fellow may be a regular fool; you are always kicked the hardest by the meekest looking mule.—Exchange.

SOME SAY THIS IS WET

Down in Indiana one of the hotels has the following notice to its guests, says the Grand Rapids Herald-Review:

This hotel is equipped with automatic sprinklers. Statistics show that loss of life has never occurred in a sprinklered building. In case of fire you may get wet, but not burned.

A guest came into the lobby one evening and said: "I'm going to bed now. Now I'm going to sleep. Statistics guard my slumber deep. If I should die, I'm not concerned, I may get wet, but I won't get burned."—Milwaukee Gazette.

If there's a queer girl in your neighborhood, you're pretty sure to hear about it. The most unique of a number of queer ones ever known to her own room. And we are sure that there are very many queer girls in the world—girls living and working in stores, offices and factories. But the queerest girl we've ever known is a certain freckle-faced, red-haired, snub-nosed, chubby-cheeked, bobbed-haired, blue-eyed, pink-and-white-complexioned, dimpled, curly-haired, slender, plump, tall, short, medium-sized girl we've ever known. She's the queerest girl we've ever known because she's the only girl we've ever known who doesn't believe—we have ever seen proof to the contrary—that she is all times any bright- or than they are right now. There are some conditions that need improvement, perhaps, but the average condition is prosperous. We look for mighty good times ahead.

We would like the fellow who knows it all much better if he would forget part of it.

AVERAGE TERM OF RURAL SCHOOLS IS NOW EIGHT MONTHS

Longer Term Has Many Advantages, Says Director of Rural Education

The average length of term for rural schools in this state is slowly increasing, having risen from 164 days in 1923 to 166 days in 1927, according to a statement just issued by M. L. Jacobson, Director of Rural Education for Minnesota. During the same period, average attendance increased from 127 days in 1925 to 127.4 days in 1927.

"The length of term in the rural schools is very important," says Mr. Jacobson. "State Department reports show that 76% of the pupils enrolled in the schools of the state have a school term of nine months or more, while the remaining 27% have terms of seven or eight months. During the school year 1926-27 2,476 of the total enrollment of 3,261 had a term of seven months and a seven months term of school, and 10,695 an eight months term.

"The most definite measure available of educational results in the rural schools of the state is the percentage of the total enrollment completing the eighth grade each year. A study of length of term and eighth grade graduation in these schools covering the years 1923-26-27 has been made. The results show that in the schools maintained for a term of seven months an average of 3.7% of the total enrollment completed the eighth grade each year. In the eight months term schools an average of 4.8% and in the nine months term an average of 6.3% of the total enrollment completed the eighth grade each year. This indicates that the pupils attending the nine months term schools have a very decided advantage to obtain an elementary education over those attending in schools having a shorter term.

"In general the rural schools of the state are holding the same standards as to qualifications of teachers and educational equipment regardless of length of term. For example, the length of term practically the only varying factor among schools of seven, eight, and nine months. Hence it is reasonable to assume that the length of term accounts for most of the difference between educational results in schools of different length of term.

"Another disadvantage of pupils attending shorter term schools, not shown by this study, is the age at which pupils complete the eighth grade. While retardation has not been studied for the state as a whole, it has been studied in a considerable number of counties. Whenever studied the retardation is shown to increase as the length of term is decreased. Hence it is evident that the pupils in the eight months term schools average older at graduation than those in schools having a nine months term, and those in the seven months term schools still older, with loss of time and increased cost of schools.

"An increasingly large number of rural school districts have been extending their term to nine months each year. The cost of this extension is relatively small inasmuch as the teacher's wages for the extra month is frequently the only additional cost. The percentage of pupils receiving each length of term indicates that comparatively few pupils are now offered as short a term as seven or eight months. The rapid extension of the length of term taking place during the last few years indicates that within a short time rural pupils generally will have access to a school maintained for a term of nine months, at least.

"When the relation of length of term to educational opportunities of the children, and importance of the longer term are fully realized by patrons of the rural schools, they will extend the term to nine months. Then children may enjoy, as near as possible, equal educational opportunities with other children of the state."

"Roundy" Erickson Will Meet Crookston Man In Grand Forks Tournament

Robert "Bloundy" Erickson, who was captain of the high school basketball team last year, is matched with Milton Schotzel of Crookston in the boxing tournament at the North Dakota State Fair at Official Yorks this week. Erickson has worked his way to the top of the welterweight division at the C. M. T. C. boxing tournament at Fort Snelling last summer.

FARM CARAVAN TO STUDY SOW THISTLE CONTROL METHODS

Leave Breckenridge Tuesday For Four Day Tour Of Northwest Counties

Pennington county farmers who have been bothered by sow thistles will be interested to know that a farm profits tour, with a primary object of studying weed control, is being organized by Dan R. Willard, agricultural agent for the Great Northern railroad, for July 24-25-26-27. The tour, which will be made up of farmers from all over northwestern Minnesota, will start out from Breckenridge Tuesday morning, arriving in Crookston that noon that day, and traveling the night at Warren.

The tour will visit farms where weeds have been successfully controlled in Minnesota, North Dakota and Manitoba. Only farms that are paying a profit every year will be studied, it was Felix county, the Coulter farm, where methods of weed control by use of harrows will be studied; the Ross farm, and others as far as time will permit, where sugar beets are being grown; the Enright Holstein farm, and the Jerry Baron Holstein farm at Grand Forks. In western Marshall and Kittson counties, farms at Alvarado, Stephen, and Halboy will be visited, after which the caravan will enter the North Dakota state to examine the Fort Kain farm (Minto) seen at Neche. Other North Dakota farms will display the value of rotation and diversification.

Besides the speakers, the caravan will pass thru the Mennonite villages, and the sow thistle first made its appearance in the Red River Valley thirty years ago. The night will be spent in the cities the tour may visit by the Dominion Experimental farms and other successful farms. Thursday night the tour officials will have a banquet at the Radisson hotel at Winnipeg.

Pennington County Men Almost Get Their Limit Fishing In Range Lakes

The Times is in receipt of the following letter from a former resident of this county who now lives in Hibbing. As it is a "fish story" The Times does not vouch for its authenticity, but present it as it was received:

Editor The Times:

Last week we had the pleasure of meeting Ben Kvestie of Highlanding, Ben Hovet of Erin down here, both old timers of Pennington county. They spent nearly a week calling on old friends and relatives and also visiting Duluth and other Range cities and with it did quite a stroke of "fishing" while down here. Neither one tried to tell us who caught the largest fish, as most fishermen generally do. However, they had one taken a turn at "roasting a fish" wrapped in the bark over a hot fire and the matter isn't settled yet who really came the nearest to getting the right taste into the fish prepared. Ben Kvesie said he had quite a time getting Mr. Hovet away from the lakes again. He didn't say if it was the lure of fishing altogether that was the cause of the trouble but Teller Hovet himself that he saw some pretty girls. Now then, who wouldn't want to stay and keep right on fishing?

Later: We have been informed that there was but one day that the fish really did take for these Pennington county fishermen, and they ranged within "it fish" each of collecting the limit allowed for the day. The rest of the time the fish just played with them. Come again boys, they are still some fish in the lake. By the way, 13 fish a day is the limit.

Yours respectfully,
W. A. Swanson.

Automobile Races Close North Dakota State Fair At Grand Forks Saturday

With the events thrown open to the world and no machines barred, final championship auto races will bring the North Dakota State Fair to a close at Grand Forks Saturday, July 21st. Liberal purses and wide open competition has attracted the largest field of dirt speedway drivers ever assembled at Grand Forks.

Although the speed merchants will headline the afternoon program and provide thrills aplenty, several feature attractions will be vaudeville, circus and hippodrome acts and musical specialties, and a motor cycle drill and parade. These will hold the attention of the speed and motor fans between the auto race events.

With such drivers as Collins, Peterson, Lockhart, Price, Mansfield, Ewers, Freeman, and others as drawing cards in a six event program, fair officials are predicting a record crowd for the climaxing afternoon of the 1928 State Fair for Grand Forks, Saturday.

"U" Specialist Speaks On Bee Culture At Commercial Club Room This Afternoon

Prof. J. W. Thompson of the University of Minnesota, who is in charge of bee culture at the University Farm at St. Paul, will hold a meeting in the Commercial club rooms this afternoon at 2 o'clock for the purpose of increasing bee culture in the county. According to County Agent Douglas Erickson Prof. Thompson's work in this line has scarcely been touched, although the large amount of sweet clover should make bee-keeping a profitable side line for Pennington county farms. Some special knowledge of bee culture is required for the best results, and it is for this purpose that the University extension department is co-operating with the county agent in bringing the most successful methods to the farmers.

Red Lake Falls May Oil Highway No. 32

Highway No. 32 may be oiled thru the city of Red Lake Falls this summer, if a voluntary subscription campaign now being carried on is successful. The State Highway department agrees to pay half the expense if the city will raise the other half. The highway would contribute a substantial sum, but most of it will be raised by subscription from business houses and shareholders at the next considerable damage is now done by dust to merchandise in shops, it is said, and applications of oil and gravel will entirely eliminate this nuisance. The highway between Moorhead and Beltrami has been successfully oiled by the highway department giving a surface that is practically free from dust.

Potato Freight Rates To Southern States Reduced 3 to 17 Cents a Bushel

A reduction of freight rates on potatoes of from 3 to 17 cents a bushel went into effect Monday on all potatoes shipped from the Red River Valley to five southern states, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, and Louisiana. Nearly 10,000,000 bushels of potatoes will be shipped out of the Valley this year, and this freight reduction means a large increase in returns to the grower.

A large percentage of Minnesota potatoes are now being shipped south on account of prohibitive freight rates to the eastern states. The reduction to the southern states was ordered by the I. C. C. May 24, following a hearing at Fargo two months ago.

AMPLE SUPPLY OF HARVEST LABOR IN MINNESOTA ASSURED

Prospect Of Big Grain Yield Reported From All Parts Of State

Minnesota's great annual harvest season now is on and from all quarters of the state reports of prospective big grain yields are being received at the headquarters of the Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation at St. Paul. Unless rust real heat prevents the havoc caused last year at this time, the 1928 Minnesota grain yield will be a very large one.

During the past week an army of harvest hands from the middle west has sped to the south began moving into Minnesota, traveling mainly in collegiate fliveries, equipped with barn lights in place of the usual auto lights.

From Lanesboro and Pipestone, well inside, Jackson, Fairmont, Blue Earth, Waseca, Wisdom, St. James, Mankato, Albert Lea, Rochester, Austin, and other points came news of the movement of the harvest hands, who traveling northward into the state by the hundreds. This peaceful invasion of thousands of farm laborers assures all of farm labor for August in all sections of the state.

A new element in this year's harvest hand army has come into Minnesota are several auto loads of Mexicans, who have worked their way northward from the border from old Mexico through Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska, and will work following the grain harvest all the way.

These thousands of farm hands will put money in circulation in every village they pass through, and in harvest time they are paid daily and weekly

Minnesota farmers will pay out more than two million dollars in harvest wages this year, according to information compiled by J. S. Jones of St. Paul, executive secretary of the state Farm Bureau.

With good crop prospects, farmers are feeling more optimistic and during the past few days there has occurred a sharp shift in the demand for farm labor, which had been at a standstill for more than thirty days.

Variety in texture makes the meals more appetizing. Have one food with a crisp crust, like corn fritters or scalloped tomatoes; another with a sauce; and a third simply cooked in its own juices, like potatoes en casserole. A raw vegetable, like celery or radishes lends still further variety.

We Make Money And Friends With "Quality"
Over a quarter of a century ago, when our first store was opened, it was decided to offer only merchandise of first class Quality to our customers. There were job lots and bankrupt stocks at that time, too, but Mr. Penney felt that merchandise which would not wear well was too expensive at any price.
That is why you will never find "seconds" or "cheap goods" in our stores. Select whatever article you will, the Quality is there—not mere surface pretentiness, but honest, built in ruggedness that wears and wears.
If you have never shopped in our store, we urge you most earnestly to drop in and prove these statements for yourself. Don't take anyone's word — it's too important a matter.
For 26 years we have sold merchandise of Superior Quality at Economy Prices. We have made both money and friends by doing it.

PENNINGTON COUNTY FAIR OPENS NEXT WEDNESDAY

BYE ADDRESSES RURAL PUPILS AT GRADUATION

Schools Represent Community Ideals and Aspirations, Graduates Told

DIPLOMAS PRESENTED TO 77 LAST SATURDAY

Certificates and Fair Tickets Presented To Pupils With Perfect Attendance

"The ideals and aspirations of a community are represented by its schools," Supt. Morris Bye told seventy-seven rural school graduates and their parents and friends who were assembled for the annual graduation exercises at the city auditorium Saturday afternoon.

"The value of education is best proved by the price of ignorance. The old world armies and war-lords were made possible by the ignorance of their people; their uniformed mind was a subservient mind. The conquerors of the new world are the leaders of education and of science.

"These boys and girls have achieved a commendable attainment in completing the eighth grade; but they should not feel that their education has been completed. They are now all lined up on the starting line in the race for further education and attainments in life. Although they are on the same starting line now, some will go farther than others, because they will take better advantage of their opportunities. I believe that a great deal of harm has been done by the old saying that opportunity knocks but once. Opportunity comes and again, but the individual must be prepared to recognize it and take advantage of it.

"The distance that each will go will depend as much upon character as upon ability. Our schools should help develop character—train pupils in the habits of industry, honesty, truthfulness, and reliability. Character is the most valuable possession one can have. Without it one is a failure, with it one is a success, no matter what his station in life may be.

"Be sure that your aim is high enough. Don't be afraid to aim high. Don't be afraid to work hard. Don't be afraid to be honest. Don't be afraid to be truthful. Don't be afraid to be reliable. Don't be afraid to be industrious. Don't be afraid to be thrifty. Don't be afraid to be clean. Don't be afraid to be courteous. Don't be afraid to be kind. Don't be afraid to be generous. Don't be afraid to be loyal. Don't be afraid to be patriotic. Don't be afraid to be a booster. Don't be afraid to be a success."

"Who is Herbert Hoover?" "Chief of Police at Thief River Falls."

This was the answer given Judge Grindeland by an applicant for citizenship at the court house Wednesday morning. The application was not granted.

Six applications were scheduled to be heard. One of the petitioners, Christ Kiark, had previously moved to another state, and his application was dismissed. Three residents of this city were granted naturalization. They were Alfred Edvard Olson, who was born in the United States but became a citizen of Canada; Christine Lawsen Olson, who came here from Sweden in 1922; and Fred Berthavist, an immigrant from Germany of 1921.

The applications of Ignacy Radzewsky of Okiee, who came from Poland in 1920, and Lars John Bratseth of this city were continued until they should be further prepared to answer the questions asked by the court.

Large Crowd Attends Resort Picnic Despite Wet Roads

Commissioner Seirig Says Farmers Must Be Represented By Single Voice At Washington

In spite of heavy rains Friday night and Saturday afternoon that made the clay roads almost impassable early Sunday morning, nearly a thousand people attended the annual Red Lake Resort picnic at the Narrows last Sunday. Scores of cars from this city returned when they saw the condition of the road going east north of Gentilly, but those who were hardy enough to continue on found the road greatly improved on the return trip and enjoyed the outing immensely.

One of the things that especially impressed those who had not been out to the resort for some time was the excellent road along the north shore southward across the reservation. Last year this was a narrow winding trail, but it is a broad gravel surfaced highway. The eleven miles east to the narrows was also in fine shape, considering the condition. This is a beautiful drive, with a fine view of Gentilly and Tamarack.

Due to the uncertainty of weather and road conditions, several people who were on the scheduled program were not present. Amongst were there, however, to keep everyone occupied and entertained during the entire afternoon. Congressman C. G. Selvig of Crookston arrived in time to give a short talk. Harold Knutson, representative in Congress from the sixth district, in which the Red Lake region lies, was unable to be present.

Mr. Selvig complimented the resort association on the beautiful site they had chosen, predicting that this would within a short time become the leading playground for all the north western Minnesota. Such a wonderful resort, he said, should be more easily accessible. Good roads must be built, and there should be full cooperation between townships, county

EAST SIDE SEWERS UNABLE TO HANDLE STREET DRAINAGE

Residents Petition Council For Relief When Sewers Flood Basements After Rain

A group of east side residents appeared before the city council Tuesday night with a petition for improvement in the sewage system on the east side of the river. During the recent heavy rains, as well as after previous storms, they said, sewage backed into the basements during, covering a number of floors with sewage to a depth of half a foot or more.

The entire east side sewer system empties into a single 12-inch main, below the dam. This has been ample, they complainants said, for the normal sewage, but is entirely inadequate when the rain water that drains into the mains after heavy rains is added. Several sewer districts are, before many of the present laterals were added, and were at that time large enough to carry the only immediate needs, to keep down the cost of installation.

The petition, filed by 105 St. Paul avenue south, said that the floor of the basement has been flooded often that his furnace, which is now in operation, is rusting to pieces. The refuse left by the receding sewage is almost impossible to clean up, and is a menace to the already unsanitary condition. A number of other residents on the same street reported the same conditions.

Similar reports were received from those who want to experience a similar situation again, the petitioners asked that the sewers be relaid, so that the present rain water from overloading the present system, pointing out that this was granted by the council, for the relief of marketing, and how it has helped the farmers and business men of Canada.

Mr. Ransom will speak at Warren in the afternoon, and at Ada in the evening. He will explain the Wheat Pool method of marketing, and how it has helped the farmers and business men of Canada.

Billings Confinement Plan Will Be Demonstrated At Fair By Special Exhibit

A special turkey exhibit, demonstrating the methods used under the Billings confinement plan is being arranged for the county fair, which opens next Wednesday. A miniature lot, showing pens, incubators, brooders, and other equipment will be installed in a special room, according to County Agent Douglas, who is supervising the construction.

This system, is being used with marked success in all parts of the United States under the personal supervision of Dr. Billings. It has been found impractical to allow turkeys to range on the ground, and several years in succession, on account of diseases that infect the ground, but the confinement plan permits pens to be moved from year to year.

TWICE AS MANY EGGS SHIPPED AS LAST YEAR

Poultry Association Manager Says Renewed Confidence Accounts For Large Increase

Renewed confidence in the egg and poultry industry is given as the reason for the large increase in the volume of eggs handled by the Farmers Co-operative Poultry Association, according to Manager Bjorge. More than twice as many eggs were sold by the association during the month of June this year as were sold during the same month last year. The higher price, averaging about 25 cents this June against 16 cents last year, resulted in a much larger return to the patrons of the association, totalling $27,645 for June, 1928, as against $12,000 less than was paid to patrons in May, when a record of $39,168 was reached.

The comparative volume of eggs handled, in number of dozens, this year and last year as follows:

A HOT WEATHER MEAL

(From Minnesota Unit of the National Dairy Council)

At the time of the year when an abundance of fresh fruits and vegetables are on the market, there is little need to spend much time cooking hot foods in a hotter kitchen. As an example, the following dinner may be prepared very simply and yet nutritiously:

Cold boiled ham
Tomato and lettuce salad
Whole grain cereal
Butter
Red raspberries and cream
Ice box cookies
Milk or iced tea

"Roasting ears," or corn-on-the-cob, are now in season and no matter how warm the weather, few of us can resist. Roasting ears remind me of the young housewife who shucked her corn all day long and anxiously worried because her fork would not penetrate the cob! Cook the corn in slightly salted water until the kernels are tender. Serve with plenty of butter.

Boiled ham or any form of cold meat is an inexpensive and satisfying supplement for the corn. A lettuce and tomato salad is easily prepared and is cool and healthful in hot weather. The berries need only be picked over, washed and placed in the refrigerator to chill. Ice cookies are delicious and are particularly attractive in hot weather as you only need to bake them as you need them, and the dough will keep fresh in a cold place.

Ice Box Cookies

2 eggs
2 cups light brown sugar
½ cup butter-substitute
3½ cups white flour-sifted before measuring
2 tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup walnut meats-chopped

Beat the eggs well. Add the sugar and melted butter and mix thoroughly. Mix the flour, baking powder and salt. Add this through a sifter to the egg mixture. Then add the vanilla and walnuts. Mix thoroughly and shape the dough into a rectangular cylinder. Place in refrigerator over night or for several hours. Slice off as needed in thin slices and bake on a buttered pan or baking sheet ten to twelve minutes in a hot oven.

Ten Thousand Lakes Ass'n and Greater Minnesota Ass'n Receive Many Inquiries

Officials of the Ten Thousand Lakes Association and the Greater Minnesota Association are pleased with the returns of agricultural inquiries received from advertising placed this year and believe that Minnesota is due for a new agricultural and industrial development. Since the opening of the 1928 advertising campaign 646 inquiries have been received for farm lands and more are pouring into the offices daily.

To take care of those asking for agricultural information on Minnesota a new agricultural booklet and map is now being printed and will be ready within a few days. This map shows the railroads and roads of the state, the county lines and all important towns. It also shows the type of agricultural pictures and some splendid material concerning farming opportunities here.

The returns from advertising placed this spring, Otto C. Newman, president of the Greater Minnesota Association, declares, is evidence to the eyes of the nation are turning to Minnesota as a place in which to live. Speaking of the campaign he said; "The response from the campaign thus far is unanticipated and there is every indication that Minnesota will gain thousands of new citizens during the coming months. An interesting feature is that not only nearly all states in all parts of the nation there is a growing interest in Minnesota, but many of the inquiries received at headquarters came from Florida, California and other states of the south and west, something which points to an increase in the number of new citizens coming to our state."

Better Sanitation Needed To Prevent Diseases On Farms

Typhoid fever is twice as prevalent in rural sections of the United States as in cities, statistics show, says the research department of the Sanitary Division of Johns Manville Manufacturers. In addition, the number of people per thousand suffering from tuberculosis has been smaller in the cities than in the country during the past four or five years.

Sanitation, which Dr. L. L. Lumsden, chief of the state board of health service defines as "The common sense application of the principles of cleanliness", breaks the lines of transference of disease germs from person to another, by means of disposal, of which typhoid fever is a notable example, are transmitted from one person to another by means of human waste. Purification of the water supply and proper sewage disposal are the two most important factors in preventing this transference, in the opinion of Dr. Lumsden. "There is no better investment for the rural home than a sanitary water supply and sewage disposal system," says Dr. Lumsden. "Wells should be equipped with tight plank forms and curbs which will prevent contamination from the top, at that is the place from which most of the contamination enters the water supply. Sewage should be disposed of by a septic tank or some similar means in such a manner that it does not enter the water supply or be transferred by flies."

ALEXANDRIA RED CROSS TO GIVE SWIMMING LESSONS

Life-saving, swimming and first aid instruction will be given free to the people of this community starting August first for one month at the City Park as the result of the arrangements made by the local Red Cross executive committee.

The Alexandria Red Cross chapter has secured and will pay for the services of John Floor, a University of Minnesota student and a Red Cross swimming life-saving and first aid instructor, who will have charge of each one of the classes that will be organized—Alexandria Citizen-News.

A weak solution of formalin makes a very good fly poison and is less dangerous than an arsenical preparation. Three teaspoonfuls of the commercial formalin are used with a pint of milk or water sweetened with a little brown sugar. The poison may be used conveniently by partly filling a drinking glass with the solution and inverting a saucer or plate, filled with blotting paper cut the same size, over the glass. The glass is then turned upside down quickly and a small slit or notch placed under the edge of the glass. When the solution evaporates from the blotting paper, more will leak out from the glass thus renewing the supply, automatically.

If she married the preacher, she could be dead for nothing.—Progressive Grocer.

A Romantic Story of the Minnesota Permanent School and Trust Fund—Which Is Distributed Annually to Every School District
Written for the Minnesota Historical Association
By JOHN STONE PARDEE

SWAMP LAND FINDINGS

Next to the school lands in volume and perhaps even more productive to future trust funds are the Minnesota swamp land grants. By rights, it should have come to 2,500,000 acres on a completed list. 2,000,000 were to the school lands, but a lot of it got away by one ally or another, and the state grew away nearly 2,000,000 acres of its railroads and other promotions. What is left is a trust fund of $10,000,000 and much more in sight, and while clearly not the income from the school fund and the remainder is divided for state purposes and the state institutions.

Swamp lands were given in the first instance to the state of Missouri because something ought to be done with them and the federal government was not supposed to have the lands as a place in which to live. Speaking of the campaign he said; "The response from the campaign thus far is unanticipated and there is every indication that Minnesota will gain thousands of new citizens during the coming months. An interesting feature is that not only nearly all states in all parts of the nation there is a growing interest in Minnesota, but many of the inquiries received at headquarters came from Florida, California and other states of the south and west, something which points to an increase in the number of new citizens coming to our state."

Outside of that experience with the railroad land grants and the internal improvement lands, Minnesota has fared singularly well in the care and protection of its trust funds.

THE BUSY ROADS

Many herald the fact that endless processions of motor cars now cover the "open road" meaning by that the main highways. That is true, and it can't be helped. In fact that is just what makes these roads main highways, the fact that traffic gravitates to them. They certainly carry an enormous traffic during busy hours—too much for pleasure, and sometimes too much for safety.

But the case is not so bad, after all. Such complaints come largely from two classes of drivers. One is the tank car driver, who pays little to suggest except that traffic is lightest after midnight and that motors run better at night also. The other class is those who like to saunter along, slowing up traffic and annoying everybody. These might be reminded that the open road is also the by-road on which one may ramble at a 12-mile gait without disturbing anybody.

Of course we like to have beauty, interest, safety and ease in our thoroughfares, where drivers "get where they are going" in reasonable time, but in certain roads are naturally business thoroughfares, where drivers "get where they are going" in reasonable time, where as directly as possible, by the most direct and level route. Trunk line roads exist for that kind of traffic. It makes them, and they make it. On such roads one ought to be content to join the parade and travel at something like its average speed. If we dawdle we are a nuisance; if we go speeding about we everybody we invite trouble. Let slowly driving on such roads, except on very quiet hours, be out of the question.

But there are other roads, many of them. There are the secondary improved main roads, not so broad or level as the state highways but excellent going. Then there are many miles of less highly improved roads but still good enough to be very comfortable. Finally many of these roads are pleasant and interesting. With modern cars and good roads Sunday or holiday afternoon, the motorist has a chance to get out of the rush and to find the only place where one can drive and still take it easy restfully—Harmon.—Mich., Evening News.

Harvesting Begun Near Northfield

Harvest is in full swing on many Northfield farms. Most of the rye and winter wheat will be cut this week. Crop damage amounting to 100 per cent on many farms resulted from a severe hail storm near Willmar, in Kandiyohi county, late Monday when stones fell for from ten minutes to half an hour, and in many places would be picked up by the shovelful.

MORE AUTOMOBILES BUT LICENSES NET LESS ROAD MONEY

Heavy Traffic Wears Away Highways Faster Each Year, Babcock Says

A total of 626,465 motor vehicle licenses had been issued in Minnesota up to July 1. A year ago at the same date the total registered was 614,356.

In spite of this increase of 12,222 cars, the license receipts were $110,509 less in 1928 than up to the same date in 1927, due to the lower rate on many trucks. Total receipts up to July 1 were $9,854,922 in 1927 and $9,560,423 in 1928.

The increased registration, according to Dan Babcock, secretary of state, is the full growth of the traffic burden on the highways. More machines travel more miles, travel at higher speed, carry larger loads and travel more months in the year than they did a few years ago, yet they contribute less revenue to the state, Mr. Babcock says.

There is only receipts for the balance of the year are from new motor cars and trucks registered after August 1 pay only half the regular rate the funds which will go to maintenance of the roads will be greatly increase the highway fund.

Two Ripe Bananas, Grown And Ripened At Crookston, Received At Times Office

Bananas are grown in the tropics. That is known to most of us. We all. A few, at least, are grown in California—Yes—even in northern Minnesota, less than a hundred miles from the Canadian border.

Tuesday morning The Times received two plump, ripe yellow bananas in the mail. They bore a Crookston postmark. A note accompanying them read: "After Monday's edition that they were grown by Prof. Harry M. McCall, Horticulturist at the Northwest School and Experiment Station, in the Crookston greenhouse.

These bananas are not the largest we have seen, being about five inches long and an inch an a half in diameter; but they do prove beyond a doubt that they can be successfully grown in this territory. A sucker from a dwarf banana plant was secured from the Iowa State College Greenhouse, Ames, Ia., on Sept. 1, 1925, by Prof. McCall. The original plant together with two suckers from it were brought to Crookston. The plants bloomed at 27 to 28 months of age. Fruit required seven months to ripen. The full-grown bananas were taken from the greenroom of Finch-Winslow-Carlisle company at Crookston. Five days were required to ripen the fruit in storage.

Needless to say, bananas will not be grown in orchard fruit in Pennington county farms. They must for some years to come, at least, until a method similar to steam heat is developed, be confined strictly to greenhouses where humidity and temperature can be kept in close proximity to that prevailing in the tropical regions.

New Dollar Bills Out Oct. 1 Smaller In Size

The new $1 bill, which will make its debut about October 1st, greatly curtailed as to size, will be a much better position to battle the worst of counterfeiters, Elmer Stark, Washington correspondent for the Minneapolis Journal, declares, according to a hearing held before the house committee on appropriations. The new bill will be approximately one inch narrower than the old bill and will be made of a composition containing 75 per cent linen and 25 per cent cotton. A recent check-up made shows that once in every seven times a bill changes hands it is expended by a motorist for-oil or gas, and that in this operation the bill picks up grease spots that shorten its life. The government estimates that by strengthening the stock and reducing the size, it will save $216,717 annually.

Official Paper of the City of Thief River Falls and Pennington County.

A credit association in southern Minnesota is arranging to place eight thousand head of breeding ewes on the farms of that community. The farmers of the older and more settled sections of the state are looking more and more to cows and poultry and alfalfa and sweet clover and sheep. They are turning to these things in an effort to make their high priced land pay a profit. Here in Pennington County we also have gone in heavy for cows and poultry and sheep and such things. And there is an acre of alfalfa for every cow too. But we are more fortunate than Southern Minnesota in that up here land is still cheap and taxes are lower. Our mortgages are smaller which means that interest is less of a burden.

THE WELCOME SIGNS

The News-Messenger of Marshall calls attention to the fact that "every tourist and visitor who comes to Marshall from now on will receive the city's official welcome as he enters town through the medium of the signs erected during the last week." Coming into Marshall the visitor will be greeted with the words, "Marshall, population 4,009, Welcome. Industries Invited, Soft Water City." On leaving the town he will see, 'Thank You, Come To Stay Next Time."

Somehow or other these welcome signs on the outskirts of a town have never appealed to us a great deal. They always remind us of those motor tour orders you in smiles over "Home Sweet Home" placards that still adorn a few living room walls.

There is a difference in signs too, of course. The wording at Marshall doesn't sound bad. Perhaps it would be all right to erect a few around our city, but if they are, great care should be exercised in expressing the sentiment. The sentiment should not be sentimental. A few outstanding facts concerning the community would probably prove interesting to many tourists and would give us some valuable publicity. Perhaps the idea has some merit.

THE DECLINE OF CREDULITY

In the June issue of Harper's Magazine Ben Ray Redman makes some interesting observations on the "Decline of Credulity." Pointing out that "it is a hackneyed boast that we, the children of the twentieth century, are living in a most wonderful age," Mr. Redman wonders if life is this age of radio, airplanes and television really offers as many thrills per minute as were afforded Algernon minded men back in ye goode olde days when witches and wizards performed magic that science can never hope to duplicate and, "hodge, podge, properly employed, were an antidote to nocturnal fever."

"What poppycock," he says, "that science has taught us nothing is too marvelous for belief. The first men on earth learned that lesson, and their descendents have been gradually unlearning it. What was there that the savage could not believe? What is there that he will not believe? Science has really commanded that we have faith in only a few things while denying us the pleasure of credence in a million and one alternatives. Every fact that it has fished from the sea, dug from the earth or plucked from the thin air thrusts itself as a barrier across a dozen avenues of speculation which were previously open and inviting."

It is perhaps true that a present-day thunderstorm, the natural result of natural physical conditions, is less romantic than were those storms of a few centuries ago that were brought on by the anger of the terrific Thor. The noise the merely to the sudden expansion of the air in the path of a lightning discharge is not nearly so terrifying as the awful reverberations of a hammer heaved across the heavenly household of a wrathful God. And the thunderclap is only one of thousands of things that probably added more spice to the lives of our ancestors than all the modern Edisons, Lindberghs, and Burbanks have contributed toward the novelty of life in the present age.

The scientific truths that have given us freedom from delusion and superstition have placed us in bondage to reality.

FIRE INSURANCE RATES

The state insurance commissioner is considering applications of fire insurance companies for increase in the rates on dwellings in this state. In commenting on this situation the Minneapolis Journal recently stated:

"The fire insurance companies have announced a substantial increase in the Minnesota rates on dwellings. The new rates are subject to review by the state insurance commissioner, George W. Wells, and he has set a hearing for July 25. He is quoted as saying that the companies will have to prove their case, before he will permit the increase to stand.

In addition to a general increase, there is proposed a wider spread between dwellings with shingle roofs and those with "approved" roofs held to be more nearly fireproof. The justice of a differential based on the varying character of roofs as to inflammability is obvious. But there is a question about the justice of doubling the differential by the process of raising shingle roof rates—almost—and leaving slate, tile, or, indeed about the justice of any raise at all.

There is involved here the competitive rivalry between shingle makers and makers of "approved" roofing. But the paramount interest is that of the home dweller. His bill for insurance should not be increased, unless it can be demonstrated that it is now being written at an actual loss.

Overhead in the fire insurance business is notoriously high. Judging by the appreciation of insurance stocks, the business is quite profitable. Can the companies not reduce the expense of doing business, instead of increasing the rates? That is a question Mr. Wells can and should require answered.

It is our impression that the applications of the insurance companies are ill advised at the present time. As the Journal points out these companies are making substantial profits under the present scale in spite of the fact that they have burdened themselves with "unfortunately high" overheads.

Fortunately this is not a problem over which the public need become unduly alarmed. If there is any sleep to be lost it should be by the old line companies themselves. Their problem during the next few years is going to be, not how much can their rates be increased, but rather how much can their rates be decreased in order to meet the competition of the mutual companies. Farmers thruout the state have demonstrated that they are able to operate their own insurance companies very efficiently, and if it becomes necessary the property owners of the villages and towns of the state can organize for their own protection.

If our government becomes more socialistic as time goes on it will not be because of the oratory of a few soap box spell-binders but rather because private business has failed to render a satisfactory service.

PublicForum

DEAR EDITOR:

Periods of industrial depression are caused by productivity exceeding consumption and over-production. The surplus products pile up in the warehouses until industry is forced to close down. The blame is put on over production but in fact it is caused by under consumption. Instead of curing the difficulty it is made worse by throwing the workers in industry out of employment and bringing on further reduction of their power to buy and consume.

The Farmer Labor Association declares for relief of unemployment by suitable prosecution of public works at such times in order that workers may earn the means to furnish themselves and their families with the necessities of life thus allaying the suffering common to such periods of trouble. But incidentally such employment and such maintained consumption would lessen the relentless of the piled up surplus of industrial products so that industry could again resume normal operation.

Compulsory Workman's Compensation Insurance as we now have it is a great improvement on conditions before the enactment of that law. But frequently it happens that these private Insurance Companies, who furnish this insurance and are run primarily to make profits for their stockholders, because of some irregularity or minor circumstances refuse to pay the workman who has been hurt or the family of a workman who has been accidentally killed. The result is a total loss of the compensation or at least a delay entailing suffering, anxiety and expense in effecting settlement of the claim.

In view of the effective service and material savings effected by the pension plans of states and by the adoption of State Fund Workmen's Compensation Insurance Laws the Farmer Labor Association declares for the passage of such insurance for the speedy and substantial relief of injured workmen and their dependents.

We urge on our district and state to should consider carefully these platform declarations and compare them with the resolutions issued by the old parties in the hope that they may be considered worthy to serve the exploiters of labor instead of serving the interests of the whole.

Sincerely yours,
W. H. QUIST
Sec. Ninth Congressional District Farmer Labor Association.

New Pastor Installed By Goodridge Church

Rev. O. O. Dhrgrau was installed as pastor of the Goodridge charge of the Norwegian Lutheran church last Sunday by Rev. Factors in the Prevention Of Tuberculosis

Part I

The old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure", stated years ago, still rings true. In reference to tuberculosis we dare say that an ounce of prevention is worth many pounds of cure. All many of the recent medical meetings it has been the consensus of opinion that the great future of medicine lies in the prevention of disease. Such prevention is by no means a tiny plant-like germ, which, finding lodging in the body of susceptible, weakened, or "run down" individuals, begins to grow. After this germ, technically known as the tubercle bacillus, becomes accustomed to the body of its new host, it generally causes at least a certain amount of destruction of tissue and, in its progress of growth, sets free certain poisons which tend to sap the vitality of the infected person.

As long as we can live in an environment entirely free from the germs of tuberculosis, there is no danger in being stricken with the disease. Man is infected from two main sources: (1) man (the consumptive) and (2) tuberculous cattle. Other domestic animals such as horses, sheep, goats, etc., suffer with tuberculosis, but, generally speaking, they are used mainly as producers of food in the form of meat. When these animals are killed in the large abattoirs before they reach the market, all of the organs are inspected and those found diseased are thrown out.

From eight to twelve per cent of the tuberculosis found in man is caused by the germs acquired from cattle through milk, cheese, butter and similar products. There are two methods of preventing the failure of tuberculosis, derived from this source. The first is tuberculin found in milk will be rendered innocuous by thorough pasteurization. All herds, supplying milk for human consumption, should be "tuberculin tested". When this test is applied to a herd it will help pick out the tuberculous cattle and these can then be disposed of. Minnesota can be justly proud that as a state she ranks among the foremost in the number of "tuberculin tested" herds.

Rosean Farmers Want Siberian Ditch Closed

A mass meeting was held at Greenbush Monday by a group of farmers and business men with plans to close what is known as the Siberian ditch in Roseau county, running west from Greenbush. This ditch, it is claimed, floods a settled area with waters from a large district that is not settled and should not be drained, but made into a game reserve. The farmers along the ditch maintain that unless the ditch is closed, they will have to move out of the country.

Great Northern Speeder Strikes Car At Crossing

Two men narrowly escaped serious injury at Red Lake Falls a few days ago when the Great Northern speeder struck a Chevrolet sedan on a railroad crossing. The speeder, operated by E. Sampson, was approaching the crossing at about 20 miles an hour when the car, driven by Archie Marcel, attempted to cross the track, and a collision resulted. Sampson was thrown from the speeder thru the front door of the car, but suffered no ill effects other than scratches and bruises. The frame of the speeder was bent and broken, while a bent front axle was sustained by the Chevrolet.

Eleven Year Old Boy Is Killed Driving Hay Rake

An 11 year old boy was killed while raking hay on a farm near Porter, in Yellow Medicine county, July 16. The boy, Edward Beck, was driving the rake while his father was loading hay. The wheel of the rake collided with the hay rack, breaking the rake tongue. When the horses became frightened and ran half a mile through a barbed wire fence, dragging the boy and overturned rake. The boy was unconscious when found, and died two hours after.

AMERICA ACCEPTS
AND ACCLAIMS THE NEW PLYMOUTH

It Discovers at Last Real Size, Style, Performance and Safety in the Lowest-priced Field

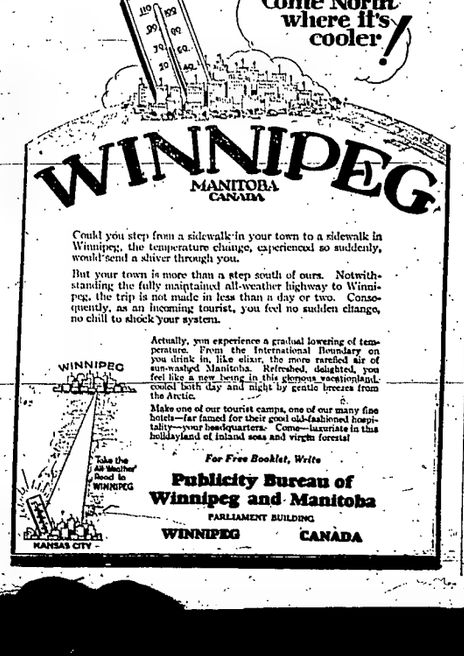
The sales record of the new Plymouth, established in two weeks' time, is without parallel or precedent for a car in this field—not in a few retail centers but all over the whole country.

Hundreds upon hundreds of thousands—yes, millions—eager to see the new Plymouth, built by Chrysler to compete in the lowest-priced field, throng Chrysler salesrooms everywhere.

They compare it with the three or four other cars catering to the same great market.

They see contrast in size, style, performance and safety so sharply in favor of Plymouth that curiosity bursts into enthusiasm, enthusiasm is transformed into sales.

In fine, the millions seeking a low first cost now discover in the new Plymouth the one car in the lowest-priced field which is and does everything that they have long hoped a low-priced car would be and do.



You, too, owe it to yourself to see it, ride in it, drive it. All doubt as to the highest dollar-for-dollar value in the lowest-priced field ends right there.

A Minnesota Dairy Farmer Abroad

Letters written by W. F. SCHILLING
U. S. Delegate to International Dairy Conference

LIFE ON THE LEVIATHAN

On Board the Leviathan.

One of the prettiest sights in the world is the farewell greeting of two ocean liners at the North Atlantic piers as they leave the port of New York. The boat we are all carrying over these thousand passengers—in all, counting the crew, some 5,000 souls. Then there are from five to twenty people to each passenger and are just what they seem. This down at the dock to say good-bye. Conservatively that means fifty thousand people and easily all of these have to go aboard to carry flowers, fruit, candy, kids and barrels, for they all want to see where you live and what shelf they put you in to sleep up.

There will have to be a step put in this some day and its greetings will have to be exchanged out on some rare track or flying field as the jam settling in and out of a boat is too risky to be enjoyed. It seems that the government takes no chance up with putting the food supply in the boat that way. They use a derrick and slings and put it over the heads of the seething mass of humanity dals have money, and country passers whose congregations want to go in the lake for a rest and do not have all you could do was to say you that you enjoyed reading the story the passengers and look well. In the evening the romp began and formality was thrown to the winds and a celebration that continued for the two small hours. Then I went to bed. A sea gull on my a cast picked on the boat that had been collected by a professional stage director. Then there were piano solos, some of them very good, some of them—well, one would be very hard to please if he could not find something to like in some of the fellows gave this little stunt.

We have no wives with us. We have no women with us. Some of the guys they brought their wives.

But we have no wives with us.

Then the ladies came back with

And we left our husbands home.

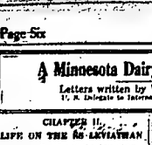
Well, but

We left our husbands home.

Traveling on a big ocean liner is not like being six days in any occasion or six Thanksgivings. All you have to do is eat and rest and try and find some kind of exercise that you can get some more. On the "up" they load up with everything in the world that is good to eat. Then ring the bell, blow a whistle, pound on a tom-tom and try to get rid of it all.



Talk about eat! Well, they just keep it up. I believe that a man with his stomach full will give them no trouble. If you are not eating fast enough to suit them they wake you up at six a. m. and introduce you to a tub full of sea water and then get out and let the next ship.

Bathing in salt water is great but you must keep your mouth shut. The first trouble that I found in it is that it has so much buoyancy that it is hard to keep from slopping out of the tub. The fellow who has charge of our section has no more friends than a big Ben alarm clock. You see you go to bed at eight o'clock and you go to rest as much, and at twelve they turn the clock ahead one hour every night, and then the lash steward, or the chambermaid, with a mouth full of hot mush, pounds on your door at six to tell you that your Hash is ready. If you pretend that you don't hear him and roll over for the other shove you are out of luck, your train is gone, and you have to put up with two day's dust and dirt flowing off the great Atlantic.

Bathing in salt brine is rare, but their farmers, and if you don't believe it then the next time that you fix a bagel of brine to pickle your pork in just get a bar of ant-acid soap and get in and try to embalm or the decision is reversed by a future court.

with the mail and silver bullion (there was $20,000,000 worth aboard). Congress should pass some sort of a McNary-Haugen bill with no equalization fee attached to special case classes.

One of the things that is agitating the minds and stateliness of the Second class passengers who are objective to the Dairy Congress is her refusal to call those suits and garments. I remained for big, tall 2-milk and $60 quarts of cream for a one-way trip. This product is delivered at the port of New York and is placed in the main ice box. There are fifteen other main ice boxes in which repose forty-five tons of meat and 10,000 quarts of ice cream, carbonated beverages and 200 pounds of 93 score butter are kept. In addition to these there are 25 auxiliary ice boxes.

Experiment Stations Will Conduct Tests On Hay Measurement

Hay stack and mow measurement investigations are being carried on in several states, including Minnesota, by experiment stations in co-operation with the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The project is to collect measurement and weight data to determine the number of cubic feet required per ton of the various kinds of hay. The data will be used in working out formulae in order to find which one or more will serve as a guide in developing a new formula for determining the amount of hay in stacks or mows.

About 100 tests will be made in Minnesota this year, it is said by Mr. Parker, hay marketing specialist of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, who spent several days recently at University Farm and in the field in connection with the project. Most of the tests will center in the Benson and Chatfield districts, he said, in southeastern Minnesota. Not only will hay, but alfalfa, timothy and clover stacks and mows will be tested.

Only a comparatively few measurements will have been recorded in this country, it appears, so the government studies is said to be the only publication bearing on the subject which is now available and the information supplied by it is held to be inadequate. In the present investigations information gathered will be analyzed, summarized, and tabulated for the purpose of working out formulas and rules adapted to geographic regions having similar climatic and hay production conditions.

Deer Will Be Pursued By 45,000 Hunters This Fall
Game Commissioner Says

More than 45,000 hunters will take the field next fall in Minnesota's open season on deer, Carl Klanke, deputy commissioner of the game department of Ada and now declared recently when nearly 50,000 licenses were forwarded to county auditors for sale.

The open season on deer will be from November 10 to 20, he said. In the last open season in 1926, when nearly 20,000 deer were taken by hunters, according to state records, but deer are just as numerous this year as ever, Mr. Klanke said.

Only one deer may be taken by each hunter and an enlarged corps of wardens will be on hand in the north counties to see that the law is enforced."

Only Resident Owners, Along Ditch Need Sign
Petition, Court Holds

That under the drainage law passed by the 1925 legislature petitions for a new ditch require only the signature of 51 per cent of the resident owners of the land over which the proposed ditch passes, rather than of 51 per cent of the land owners benefited and assessed, is a decision recently handed down by the state Supreme Court. This interpretation was placed on the law in the case of "Judicial Ditch No. 75, Polk County," and will undoubtedly be adhered to until a new line is drawn or the decision is reversed by a future court.

In a few minutes time the entire home can be freed of mosquitoes. With an improved FLY-TOX Hand Sprayer, spray FLY-TOX directly toward the ceiling, also in the fireplace, in the closets and on the screens. It will not leave a stain on the most delicate of wallpapers, hangings or fabrics. Spray upward until all parts of the room are filled with the fine atomized spray. Within a few minutes all the mosquitoes in the room will be dead, regardless of whether the windows and doors are open or closed. In addition to being stainless, FLY-TOX is fragrant, is absolutely harmless to people but sure death to all household insects. Every bottle guaranteed—safe.

Minnesota's Share Of Federal Road Aid Fund Largest In Northwest

Minnesota's apportionment of federal aid for highways has been fixed at $2,112,505 for each of the years 1929, 1930 and 1931, by the Bureau of Public Roads of the Department of Agriculture. This is more than is allotted to any other state in the Northwest. Wisconsin receives $1,864,212, Iowa $2,055,291, North Dakota $1,132,410, South Dakota $1,223,081 and Montana $1,522,576.

Three factors are considered in the allotment of funds: area, population and the mileage of rural mail routes and star routes. Federal aid funds must be matched with an equal amount of state highway funds, except where more than five per cent of the land is untaxed. South Dakota, Montana and eleven states farther west come in the latter classification, and the minimum state share is less than the federal aid.

Six Victorious Months of the Victory Six

When the Victory Six was announced six months ago it was the talk of the industry.

It was a great car then. It is an even greater car now. It has stood the test. Each month has seen a substantial increase in Victory Six sales.

Not because of what we have been saying for six months. Or because of what we say now.

But because of what the Victory Six is.

A Family Affair

The telephone is a family affair, says the Literary Digest. The children, as well as father and mother, use it.

Groceries are ordered, parties planned, engagements made or cancelled and other matters disposed of conveniently over the telephone.

There also is a feeling of security when a telephone is at hand to summon aid quickly in case of sickness, fire, or other emergency.

The value of the telephone to every member of the family is worth much more than it costs.

SECTION MEN NEW DESIGNATION FOR HIGHWAY WORKERS

Avoids Former Confusion Of Maintenance Men With Police Patrols

There will be no confusion hereafter as to the duties of "highway patrolmen" in Minnesota. The term "patrolman" will no longer be applied to the maintenance men on the trunk highways, Commissioner C. M. Babcock says. From now on they will be known as "section men." The change is made to avoid confusion with the law enforcement officers. A number of counties employ deputy sheriffs to patrol the traffic on the trunk highways and they are generally known as highway patrolmen. The state also employs a force of the state "highway patrolmen" to enforce traffic conditions. This has sometimes, but trying to have maintenance men act as police officers has never been practical.

The change from team patrols to truck units is another reason for the change of name. The name "patrolman" is really a misnomer as applied to the men with teams and graders. Hereafter the man responsible for a piece of road will be a "section man," directly in the sparsely settled districts, a truck or a power grader. Every mile of road in the state's system will be under the care of a "section man" responsible for its maintenance. Where there are two or the "sections" are about seven miles long, the maintenance will be under about twenty-five miles long. The section man will be employed the year around, though he may be laid off for a time in winter. Usually he will have help when he has to be laid off. He will be given a truck which will pull a blade grader in summer, push a snow plow in winter, a small gravel and stone spreader when needed. In some places, especially in the sparsely settled districts, sections may be longer, up to sixty miles, and the section man will have more than one helper.

Sections on paved roads generally will be longer than on gravel roads. The section man will make frequent inspections of the pavement for any cracks if needed. He will make shoulder repairs, keep the ditches and the roadsides, and keep drains and drains open. In winter he will be furnished with a snow plow and a truck for his section open.

Changing the name from patrolmen to section men will not affect wages or the size number of men employed. Motorization is expected slightly to reduce the total number employed.

MARIONETTE SHOW TO DEMONSTRATE HEALTH AT FAIR

Minnesota Public Health Association Presents Novel Entertainment For Children

Pennington County Boys and girls will welcome the announcement that there is to be a Marionette Show at the County Fair in Thief River Falls, August 1, 2 and 3. The show has been secured by the County Agricultural Association from the Minnesota Public Health Association, which books it as a part of the statewide educational work.

Health plays, parades and dances, and a variety of stunts are included in the program. The clay puppets, which will be directed by Miss Virginia Hansen, who has won widespread attention in the Twin Cities and State for this work. A recent feature article on Miss Hansen's work appearing in a Minneapolis paper said in part:

"She is the biggest family in Minneapolis. Ninety-five children exactly, as she says. They are those she tells them to, and are all very polite. Of course, they are not actual children. They are weird, gaudy, jerky figures, operated by strings. Marionettes are made of papier-mache and balsam wood and clothed from remnants.

"She began giving marionette shows as soon as she left school. Since last September she has worked for the Minnesota Public Health Association, which sponsors the Christmas Seal campaign. She gave shows in St. Paul, appeared in Minneapolis twice a day with her marionette family, with another girl and two men, to attend a dance. On the way to Minneapolis one time grocery while travelling at high speed, started to topple and turned over several times, landing on the other side of a ditch, on its wheels.

All the dropsies of the car were thrown out, but only the girls were injured. Miss Will was taken to the Alexandria hospital, where an X-ray showed two fractured ribs, and a bruised shoulder. Miss Alma Leith, the other girl, also suffered fractured ribs, but in a more serious nature, necessitating a longer confinement to the hospital.

Miss Will was graduated from the local high school here and for several years was known in the employ of the Minnesota Wheat Growers at Minneapolis.

Two State Officials Here To Investigate Blind and Deaf Cases

Miss M. Ada Turner, field worker for the Department of the Blind in the Children's Bureau of the State Board of Control, and Miss Josephine F. Quinn, field representative of the Minnesota School for the Deaf at Faribault, were in the Supt. G. M. Gunderson's office Tuesday in regard to the blind and deaf children in this county. Rural teachers are instructed to report any cases of defectives among school children that may be due to blindness or deafness. Such cases are then investigated by state officials, and if serious enough, provisions made for care by state institutions.

Mr. Gunderson reports a number of cases where low scholastic achievement has been due to physical defects rather than mental inferiority or laziness. In many instances, medical attention can relieve the difficulty. Where this does not help, however, it is to the advantage of both parents and child that expert care in a state institution be accepted, he says.

While there it is said that no perceptible condition is serious, it is thought several injuries is expected to result.

GAS TAX AMENDMENT COMMITTEE TO WAGE VIGOROUS CAMPAIGN

Amendment Would Permit Part Of Money To Be Used For Secondary Roads

A vigorous campaign, advocating the adoption at the general election in November of State Constitutional Amendment No. 1—the gasoline tax amendment—will be started September 1, according to an announcement made in St. Paul this week by Stanley L. Johnson, of Bemidji, President of the Gasoline Tax Amendment Committee, Inc., formed especially to conduct this campaign.

Amendment No. 1 provides for placing one-third of the state gasoline tax in the hands of the County Bridge fund to be used in improving secondary roads. Under existing provisions of the state constitution all of the gasoline tax money now is applied on the state trunk highway system, in addition to the money collected from automobile license taxes.

According to Senator Johnson, speakers will be sent into every county in the state to explain Amendment No. 1.

The members of the executive board of the Gasoline Tax Amendment Committee, Inc., are: Senator Johnson, Senator Iver J. Lee, of Glenwood; State Representative Oscar A. Arneson, of Ada; State Representative Andrew Finseth, of Kragero; Ole Lansburgh, of Evansville, and Harrison Hatton, of Pine Island, who will preside at weekly meetings at the St. Francis Hotel to block out final details of the campaign.

Substantial support for the campaign has been secured from farmers' organizations and it now seems probable that all farmers will have an opportunity to hear Amendment No. 1 explained.

The Minnesota Farm Bureau Federation, The Minnesota Rural Letter Carriers' Association and several other organizations are actively aiding the committee in planning the fall campaign.

BEE CULTURE WOULD INCREASE PROFITS, FARMERS ARE TOLD

Specialist Says Every Acre Of Clover Can Support Colony

"Every acre of clover and alfalfa in Pennington county could support a colony of bees, producing not less than an average 17 pounds of honey, with practically no extra cost to the farmer," Prof. J. W. Thompson of the University of Minnesota told a group of farmers at a meeting in the county agent's office last Thursday afternoon. "Not only are you letting a considerable direct income go to waste, but you would find that pollenization would give you a much better seed crop."

There are two major problems in bee culture, Prof. Thompson said. One is winter housing, and the other is marketing. Bees want to be housed during the winter in a room where the temperature will be fairly constant and not too cold. Two methods are used, one a cellar partly covered with earth and the other an outdoor system of packing the hives in straw and tar paper. Ventilation without light, drainage, and provision for sleeping space for bees are essential to success.

Without an organization of some sort, marketing honey has proved to be a difficult problem, Frank Hamilsky, one of Pennington county's pioneer bee keepers, says. A home market has certainly been established, but needs to be developed.

Marquillo Wheat Produces Big Yield At University

Visitors to University Farm on Farm Crops Field Day were particularly interested in a five-acre field of Marquillo wheat. They were told by station staff men that during the past year of 1927 Marquillo wheat yielded 31 bushels to the acre and showed only 4 per cent infestation of stem rust as compared with a 19-bushel yield from Marquis having 17 per cent infestation of 35 per cent; also that Marquillo outyielded Acres by two bushels to the acre on the average at all university stations in 1927.

THE DEWALDS

The DeWaldos are recognized as entertainers of the highest class, having played the best vaudeville circuits thruout the country. They are making a swing of the county fairs this summer and the local management was fortunate in securing them for the Pennington County fair, which will open here next Wednesday.

The DeWaldos contribute two separate acts to the large program of entertainment. The first of these acts will be what is known as a tight wire and double-contortion novelty—and unicycle act which is certainly sensational.

Specialist Says Every Acre Of Clover Can Support Colony

"Every acre of clover and alfalfa in Pennington county could support a colony of bees, producing not less than an average 17 pounds of honey, with practically no extra cost to the farmer," Prof. J. W. Thompson of the University of Minnesota told a group of farmers at a meeting in the county agent's office last Thursday afternoon. "Not only are you letting a considerable direct income go to waste, but you would find that pollenization would give you a much better seed crop."

There are two major problems in bee culture, Prof. Thompson said. One is winter housing, and the other is marketing. Bees want to be housed during the winter in a room where the temperature will be fairly constant and not too cold. Two methods are used, one a cellar partly covered with earth and the other an outdoor system of packing the hives in straw and tar paper. Ventilation without light, drainage, and provision for sleeping space for bees are essential to success.

Without an organization of some sort, marketing honey has proved to be a difficult problem, Frank Hamilsky, one of Pennington county's pioneer bee keepers, says. A home market has certainly been established, but needs to be developed.

Local Trap-Shooters Win High Honors At Crookston Tournament

J. C. Jackson and C. G. Matson, local trap-shooters, won high honors at the Trapshooting tournament at Crookston, Jackson winning the 16 yard event with a score of 98 out of a possible 100 and Matson the handicap event with a score of 98 out of a possible 100. Jackson then investigated by the state officials, and if serious enough, provisions made for care by state institutions.

Mr. Gunderson reports a number of cases where low scholastic achievement has been due to physical defects rather than mental inferiority or laziness. In many instances, medical attention can relieve the difficulty. Where this does not help, however, it is to the advantage of both parents and child that expert care in a state institution be accepted, he says.

state and the federal government in building them.

Stating that as superintendent of the Northwest School and as representative in Congress his interests always have been and will continue to be agriculture, Mr. Selvig addressed himself to the farmers and business men whose welfare, he said, depends upon the prosperity of agriculture. A county that spends sixteen billion dollars a year on luxuries can afford a prosperous farming industry, he said, continuing with a prediction that congress will within twelve months pass some measure that will be a step towards placing agriculture on a basis more equal with that of industry.

The lack of unity in the voice of agriculture at Washington has been painfully apparent, Mr. Selvig said. Whereas labor speaks thru one voice, the American Federation of Labor, and business is represented by the United States Chamber of Commerce, two national farm organizations demand a hearing when the voice of agriculture is to be heard. One great national organization must speak for the united farmers of the nation if they are to have an equal chance at beneficial legislation.

Several hundred Indians, some of whom live near the resort and others from Red Lake, White Earth Lake Agency and Bemidji, joined with the white people in the picnic. Tribes represented on the program by Superintendent Gunderson, of the Red Lake Agency, who speaking thru an interpreter, extended greetings and a hearty welcome to all visitors. Indians who won the land on which the resort is situated.

Theodore Quale, president of the Thief River Falls Commercial Club, spoke briefly on behalf of the committee who had planned and sponsored the picnic. "We did not expect to have a road," he said, "that is why this beautiful place is only accessible to everyone."

Following the president over the speaking program, C. C. Noper made a valiant attempt to distract attention from the beautiful scenery long enough to join in a few community songs. An orchestra from Thief River arrived in the afternoon and provided entertainment near the community store for those who did not care to witness the water sports along the lake shore.

A kittenball game in the water provided a great deal of amusement to the spectators, and stresses were in store for those participating, bench slopes outward gradually, permitting the entire team in the field to stand in water to their waists. The large rubber ball was difficult to catch as it was for the base runners to half run, half swim, from one base to another. The team captained by Floyd Anderson won over Eichart's nervers by a score of 3 to 1, earning a prize of $5. A large cabin boat took scores of swimmers out over the lake thruout the day.

With the exception of a Ford sedan from Grygla that was driven off the road into the ditch a short distance on this side of the lake, the outing was enjoyed without mishap. The one accident was caused by high weeds along the road making a sharp ditch, making it impossible for the driver to see that he was getting out too far to safety. No one was hurt in the turnover, as the car was going very slowly at the time.

RECORD ATTENDANCE EXPECTED AT COUNTY FAIR TODAY

Twenty Towns In Northwestern Minnesota Visited Thursday and Friday

LIGHT RAIN FAILS TO DAMPEN ENTHUSIASM

Members Of Tour Well Satisfied With Results; May Go South Next Year

The god will caravan which left this city last Thursday morning for a visit to eighteen towns in northwestern Minnesota, returned Friday evening half an hour ahead of schedule, reporting a very successful trip.

As the caravan of twenty-three cars carrying eighty local business and professional men, pulled into the city in the afternoon it passed a thrift blast of the city fire siren, heading horns and shouting voices, chairman Dahlquist called on A. E. Jacobson, Mayor Dye and Paul Lambert to give an account to the "home town" of what they had seen and what they had done.

Starting out with a schedule of 18 towns on the itinerary, several more were added as the tour went on to Bandette. Progress ranging from ten minutes to half an hour-in length were presented at each stop—one speaker representing the city of Thief River Falls, and another the county fair. A twelve-piece band, under the direction of Carl Swenson, accompanied the tour and played several selections at every town visited.

Newfolden, Argyle, Stephen, Donaldson, Kennedy, Hallock, Lancaster, Thomas, Hazlet, Strathcona, Middle River and Warren were visited Thursday. Part of the company spent the night at Red River Valley Park, and another the night at Lake of the Woods, while others went on to Baudette. The tour re-assembled at Baudette at 10 o'clock Friday morning, and a half hour program was given.

On the return trip Friday, programs of music and talks were given at Williams, Roseau, Greenbush, Badger, Greenbush, Strathcona, Middle River and Holt, returning to this city at six o'clock.

The speakers committee for the tour was composed of Dahlquist, Carter, Robert Lund, Morris Dye, Dr. A. E. Jacobson, Supt. Gunderson, Dr. Langseth, H. O. Berzer, Dave Gustafson and E. M. Bennes.

Souvenirs in the form of caps and balloons advertising the Pennington county fair were distributed among the children at every town on the route. Mrs. Andrew Anderson, assisted with flags to meet the caravan as it entered the town, and marched back in with them.

A light rain began to fall during the program at Badger, making it necessary for the speakers to don slickers. Fortunately the rain only wished to avoid soiling their spotless uniforms sought shelter in hospitable doorways, and by the time the ole fell, however, which failed to dampen the ardor of the enthusiastic members.

No less satisfied are the leaders of the excursion that they are already making plans for a similar tour of the neighboring towns to the south next year.

42 Car Owners In County Fail To Pay License Fee, But Not All Violate Law

A list of 42 delinquent automobilists upon which the license tax has not as yet been received by clerk of court Adolf Ecklund. Not all of these are chiselers and violators of the law, however, as many of them have been wrecked without an sufficient having first with the secretary of state, and others have been laid up by the state.

Warrants for the prosecution of violators have been issued with the sheriff, who is empowered to make a levy on personal property to collect the tax, if necessary. After August 1, licenses are issued at half rates, for new cars and cars brought in to the state after that date.

All Claims Of Evicted Mud Lake Settlers Are Approved By Department

The claims presented against the state by the farmers who settled and improved land in the former lake bed of Mud Lake in Marshall county, all have been approved, according to a letter received by Congressman Stefan.

When Mud Lake was drained some years ago, the new land was opened for settlement and a number of homes were built there. Later it was decided that the reclaimed land belonged to the state, however, and the new settlers were ordered to vacate. A special act was passed by the state legislature in May, 1925, authorizing compensation to those who were forced to surrender their property.

Twelve Year Old Stephen Boy Injured When Thrown In-Front Of Mower Sickle

Clifford Benson, a twelve year old boy of Stephen, suffered painful injuries while mowing hay on his father's farm, near there. The lines became entangled in the hames, and Clifford walked forward along the mower tongue to disentangle them. The horses became frightened, and started to run, throwing the boy in front of the sickle. He was dragged a considerable distance, receiving a number of large gashes about his head. Clifford unconsciously owes his life to the fact that the horses stopped in a mud hole. At the Warren hospital it is reported that he is recovering nicely.

GRYGLA CAR LIFTED OUT OF DITCH AT RED LAKE NARROWS

The Annual Community picnic at the Narrows was attended by a good crowd notwithstanding the heavy roads. Many cars that started from south and west gave up and went back. The road from Thorhult south and east is fine at all times, but one accident occurred and that was caused by a car being crowded too close to the ditch. A Ford containing eight passengers was turned flat on its side in the ditch about four feet deep but escaped before the car and no one was hurt. It was surrounded by helping hands and picked up bodily, set in the road and went home all right. That's the Ford of it.—Gryggla Eagle.

PEACHES

Strawberry shortcakes
Are things of the past,
They were a blessing,
But blessings don't last.
Apples won't ripen
Till the fall wind blows
So let's take peaches
And concentrate on those.

How to make a cherry pie
Schools seldom teach,
But even the worst cook
Can't spoil a peach;
Good peach recipes
Shouldn't be extreme—
Very little sugar,
And not much cream.

Peaches in a fruit jar,
Peaches on a plate,
Peaches with coffee
At half past eight;
We for the diet sharps,
Bother what they say!
I can eat peaches
Eleven times a day.

Spooning in automobiles has become an American custom. Many a happy marriage has been founded on a motor courtship. There's romance galore in driving. Factors In The Prevention Of Tuberculosis

Part II

The most dangerous spreader of tuberculosis is the carriess or ignorant consumptive, and it is principally by means of the sputum (material coughed up from the lung) that tuberculosis is spread. Tuberculosis is broadcast and thus affords an opportunity for his friends and his own household to become infected with his disease. What must be done with such a patient? This question has long been a serious problem to those desiring safer lives for the general welfare of the public. It may be partially solved by sending the patient to a sanatorium where the disease will be treated and where he will be taught the principles of hygiene that tend to reduce this danger to a minimum.

There are many patients, who on account of financial or other reasons, are unable to enjoy the benefits of sanatorium treatment. For these patients there are some simple rules which should be followed. Remember that the sputum is spread from a diseased lung and that it may contain the "elements of death" Clifford walked forward along the mower tongue to disentangle them. The horses became frightened, and started to run, throwing the boy in front of the sickle. He was dragged a considerable distance, receiving a number of large gashes about his head. Clifford unconsciously owes his life to the fact that the horses stopped in a mud hole. At the Warren hospital it is reported that he is recovering nicely.

Sputum that is spread over the floor and after being used sh uld be washed in boiling water. All rags and other dust catchers must be removed from the room occupied by the patient, and there should be no dry dusting or dusty sweeping. Bed linen, washable clothing, etc., used by the patient, should be handled as little as possible, kept separate from other laundry and thoroughly boiled in water.

It is indeed a cheerful thought to know that every man who gets the germs of tuberculosis into his body does not have the disease. In other words, he is in such good health that his own resisting powers overcome the germs before they can secure a firm foothold. As for any reason that natural resistance against consumption is lowered by overwork, worry, poor food, poor air, bad housing conditions, intemperance, or other diseases, the germs of tuberculosis may get into our bodies and begin their deadly work. The man who follows closely the laws of Nature at all times will rarely develop tuberculosis.

In this connection, it is wise to reflect on the penalties that may be inflicted on us from failure to live up to these same principles. The eminent authorities, in a recent publication, reach the following conclusions: "Without sputum and dairy hygiene the supply of dangerously infected young people will be kept up; without earlier diagnosis, education and favorable conditions of life for preventive viction, clinical tuberculosis will continue at an irreducible minimum.

By B. C. Bernard, M. D.
Superintendent and Medical Director, Oakland Park Sanatorium.

Golden Text: Psalms 143:10. Teach me to do thy will; for thou art my God: thy spirit is good; lead me into the land of uprightness.

From the Bible, Job 33:4. The Spirit of God hath made me, and the breath of the Almighty hath given me life.

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, p. 331: 18. God is individual, incorporeal. He is divine Principle, Love, the infinitely good. He is the only creator, and there is no other self-existence. He is all-inclusive, and is reflected by all that is real and eternal and by nothing else. He fills all space, and it is impossible to conceive of such omnipresence and individuality except as infinite Spirit or Mind. Hence all is Spirit and spiritual.

THOSE WHO WILL NOT SEE

The Rock County Herald takes exception to a statement it made a few weeks ago in regard to the attitude of some of the newspapers of the Northwest on the question of farm relief. The Herald maintains that:

> While the McNary-Haugenites are diligently broadcasting the idea that friendship for the farmer must be measured by one's attitude towards their pet fetish, such argument is the crankist kind of nonsense. There isn't a person in the whole Midwest who is not in favor of placing agriculture on an equality with industry. On the other hand, there are hundreds of thousands of people in the Midwest who, while no less friendly to the farmer than the advocates of the McNary-Haugen bill, nevertheless cannot bring themselves to support the McNary-Haugen monstrosity.
> To charge that because a person is against McNary-Haugenism he is opposed to all "relief legislation" is about as sensible as it would be to claim that because a person doesn't like sugar in his coffee he is opposed to the production of sugar.

We agree with the Herald in this particular sentiment. We do not believe a citizen of the Northwest must necessarily support McNary-Haugenism to prove his loyalty. We are even willing to concur with the Herald in the opinion that many of those who have opposed the McNary-Haugen bill are better friends of agriculture and the Northwest than many of those who have actively supported this measure. As a matter of fact it is our impression that the affairs of agriculture have been managed wretchedly by the representatives of agricultural sections of the country in Congress. Yes, we are convinced that the friends of real relief legislation have blundered terribly. We do not differ with the Herald on this point.

The thing that is hard for us to understand however is the attitude of some of the papers that only those who have actively opposed the McNary-Haugen bill are friends of the farmers. These papers would have us believe that the negative leadership of the opposition to the proposed farm legislation is all-wise, all-virtuous and all-benevolent, while the positive leadership of those who offer a definite solution to the problem is all-vicious. These papers see no virtue whatsoever in the pleading of those who propose a definite remedy, and see nothing but virtue in the actions of those who oppose every definite solution that is offered.

The purpose of all this argument against the McNary-Haugen bill is of course, to justify the opposition of the present administration. It is the cost of whitewash. And there is need for several cans. There is need of a lot of whitewash. As far as the Northwest is concerned the present administration has been practically a total failure. Our freight rates, jacked full of inequalities and injustices till they smell to heaven, have been given absolutely no consideration in spite of the fact that we have prostituted ourselves several times in an attempt to get a few necessary adjustments. The Great Lakes waterway development has been successfully pigeon-holed and the relief which this waterway will bring to the Northwest delayed because this relief will be secured at the expense of the East and of the railroads. And all our demands for relief legislation have been defeated on one pretext or another.

Friends of the administration point to its fine financial record, its debt and tax reduction. A few years ago Andy Mellon stated that the country would go to rack and ruin if the adjusted compensation legislation were passed. He stated that tax reduction would be delayed many years if the government should undertake to spend so much money unnecessarily. The developments of the past few years prove that Andy Mellon either guessed wrong or lied. The chances are that he didn't guess wrong. And this influence of Andy Mellon has dominated the administration for seven years and has directed the course of government action into those channels best suited to the interests of Andy Mellon.

And there are newspapers in the Northwest that are urging the election of Herbert Hoover on the strength of the record of the present administration.

Hoover probably will be elected. Very likely he will carry the state of Minnesota by a large majority. Perhaps he will make a good president after he is elected. There is some reason to believe, at least, that he, himself, will be the president if he is elected. There is some reason to believe that he is both honest and capable. He has expressed himself, in a statement that sounds sincere, as being of the opinion that immediate steps should be taken to place agriculture on the same plane of protection as industry and transportation. If he is an honest and sincere and capable as we think he is there is good reason to believe that the Northwest will become recognized in Washington as a part of the United States again.

But those newspapers of the Northwest or those statesmen of the Northwest who apologize for the demands that the Northwest has made and who seek support for the Republican party by ridiculing those who do not agree with the dictation of the Republican party that now dominates it, certainly do not represent the best interests of the Northwest. Right now, more than ever before, there is need for a solid front in the Northwest and a more united and a more determined demand than ever for such legislation as is necessary to bring economic relief. It is possible that there isn't a great deal to choose from between the candidates of the two major parties, but let's not take the craven attitude that the Northwest is always wrong and the East is always right. Let's pretend, at least, that we have confidence in our own ability to think in a straight line. In this present situation either the entire demand for farm relief is wrong and the present administration is right or the present administration is wrong and the demand for relief is right. Even Hoover says the Northwest is justified in its demands for relief.

None are so blind as those who will not see but even those who refuse to use their eyes should sense the advisability at this time of a concerted action thruout the Northwest in a demand for recognition. Our attitude this year will determine to a large extend the attitude of Washington during the next four years. If we indicate we are in a hand licking mood we probably will continue to be a yellow hound for four more years. If we indicate a determination and a resolve to get what we are entitled to or know the reason why, the chances are we will come pretty close to getting those things we feel we should have. When it becomes a question of kicking or being kicked we prefer to be on the delivering end.

E. M. Bennes returned last week from a trip to Florida on which he covered more than four thousand miles of country. He reports that in that entire journey he saw no community that appealed to him as offering greater opportunities that this section of Northwestern Minnesota.

Dear Editor:

Among the advantages of the so called Australian ballot system used at our general elections is the secrecy secured to the individual voter. Many people do not want anyone to know how they vote. In many cases that is the only way in which the individual can really express his or her views without undue influence or duress because unscrupulous employers will often use every means within their power to force their employees to vote the way the employer wants them to vote. However, no such safeguard has been provided for our Primary Election. There each voter is required to declare his party affiliation before he votes. This many people dislike to do so they either stay away from the polls on Primary Election Day or they prostitute their political convictions and call for some other party ballot than their true choice.

Therefore the Farmer-Labor association declare for a "Uniform and Secret Primary Election ballot to afford the voting security in the sacred right to vote their convictions without interference or coercion."

This can easily be done by printing all the party tickets on the one ballot and allowing each voter to choose the party ticket he will vote in the privacy of the voting booth. However, voters should be registered as voting but there would be no record as to their individual party affiliations as there is at the present time. This we are sure would result in a far better attendance at the Primary Election and the candidates elected by such party would be more representative of the will of the rank and file.

Sincerely,
W. H. Quist, Sec. Farmer-Labor Assn. Ninth Congressional District.

Two Year Old Child Drowns In Water Jar At McIntosh

A two year old girl, Avis Morine, was drowned in a water jar at her home near McIntosh a week ago Tuesday. The little girl had been playing about the yard during the evening, when she was missed by her mother. A search revealed the body doubled up in a large jar, with the head submerged in six inches of water. It was evident that the child had attempted to play in the water with her hands, overbalanced and fallen in, head foremost.

If there is a better washer than the Maytag we have not heard of it.

RED RIVER VALLEY FARMERS URGED TO POOL WHEAT CROP

Canadian Pool Leader Says Land O' Lakes shows Way To Co-operative Marketing

"You have co-operated in livestock in cream and in milk distribution. You can cooperate in wheat. Hop right to it and build your Wheat Pool," was the message F. W. Hanson, Secretary of the Manitoba Wheat Pool, brought to farmers and business men of the Red River Valley at meetings sponsored by the Minnesota Wheat Pool, and held at Ada and Warren, Tuesday, July 26.

"Do not depend on business institutions, banks, railroads or political parties. Do the job yourselves. Other interests will come to you when they see you helping yourselves," said Mr. Hansen, who continued, "there is one thing we in Canada will not do—mix politics with our pools. If we, as an economic organization, were to enter the political arena, we would soon go to our downfall.

"You can find just as capable men among the farmers as any where else. I believe your Pool Officers, Delegates and Directors to be men of industry and generous spirit. They have confidence in yourselves and you can organize. Last year we built 200 grain school house meetings. You did it with the 'Land O' Lakes,' you can do the same thing out here.

"In Canada every pool member believes that his Pool has secured better price for the products of his farm. We have all told, 140,000 members in the three provinces now marketed, this year, 220,000,000 bushels of wheat valued at $150,000,000. We own 1,300 country elevators and 18 terminals with a total capacity of 72,500,000 bushels.

"We did the work of building our Pool largely voluntary effort. The co-operation spirit was and is very real. We lay all our cards on the table. We in Canada stewed the point that the Pools must be run from the bottom—not from the top down. The farmer owns—he must control."

Minnesota Wheat Pool Officials accompanying Mr. Ransom included Sec'y. G. W. Connell, Asst. Sec'y. H. T. Fandis, and Treas. L. H. Roberts. They announced that the Minnesota Wheat Growers is out for a 200,000 member sign-up by September 1. Both the Warren and Ada meetings were well attended by representative business men and farmers gathered in from the entire Red River Valley.

Kittson County Man Burned To Death In Store Fire

Martin Oxenvurd of Robin, in Kittson county, was burned to death at 2:30 ago in a fire that destroyed his store. It is believed that Oxenvurd, who is in the seventies, tipped over a kerosene lamp and was unable to extinguish the flames. A chemical engine from the Drayton, N. Lincoln Said $10,000 Was Too Much!

They say that Lincoln was once offered a $10,000 a year job, but declined because lie thought it would be impossible for one man to earn such an enormous sum. Today a salary of $10,000 a year would awaken no comment.

The worth of anything — whether it is a man's services, or a piece of merchandise, is entirely a matter of opinion, and changes from day to day. That is why we never quote comparative prices. When a dress is marked down because it has been in our stock for several weeks, we do not mention its former price because it is no longer worth that much. Its style-value has depreciated.

Yesterday's prices, like yesterday's ideas of salaries must be revised to meet today's needs.

Motor Trucks Replacing Railroads For Freight Service on Short Runs

That trucks are gradually replacing freight trains for certain classes of service is apparent from actions taken in two different parts of the state recently. A week ago the Northland Greyhound Corporation was granted permission for a motor truck freight line running from Minneapolis to Sauk Centre, as a result of railroads serving this territory refusing to withdraw a local freight train running between Kelly Lake and Grand Rapids. The North land bus company, a Great Northern subsidiary, offers to take over the business. The train will continue to haul ore and heavy freight.

DUDLEY BUILDING FIRE HELD DUE TO WOODEN AIR FLUE

A fire that caused more excitement than actual property damage broke out in the attic of the Dudley building Friday evening, about 5:20. Prompt response from the fire department brought the flames under control within an hour, although not until the entire attic had been flooded with water.

Occupants of the upstairs apartments first noticed smoke, and reported the fire department. The source unknown reason the whistle would emit only a weary squeak, and it was only by a collect call that Chief Paul Middaugh happened to hear it faintly from his home. Three fire hoses were soon brought to play on the blaze, and several holes had been cut in the roof and the upper walls. The attic, which is only about three feet high at its eastern end, where the fire started, was filled with smoke to permit firemen to enter.

Although the cause of the fire has not definitely been determined, it is believed to have started with a chimney fire brought in a defective ventilating flue which connects into the chimney. Flames had been burning for some time before the fire reached the attic, burning off the top two layers of brick and the surrounding wooden supports.

Damage is estimated at $1,500 by Mr. Dudley, the owner of the building. Some water damage was done to the ground floor. Furniture and other household goods were removed from the rooms of the apartments at the outset of the fire.

Repairs will be made immediately, according to Mr. Dudley, and the building rented for the winter months company, which will occupy it September 1.

COUNTY HAS THREE ENTRIES IN LAMB RAISING CONTEST

Will Find Breeder Who Produces Most Pounds of Lamb Per Ewe in 135 Days

Four Pennington county sheep breeders are entered in the lamb production contest, inaugurated this year by the University extension service. They are H. C. Swanson and Peter Engestad of Thief River Falls and N. E. Beebe of St. Hilaire.

Records kept at the county seat quarters at University Farm show that 26 flock owners in 21 counties have entered the contest which was started to locate, the most efficient sheep raisers and to demonstrate the best methods of breeding, feeding, and marketing sheep. Roseau county has four entrants, Polk, Pennington, Clay, Kittson, and Lake of the Woods counties have three each. Three counties lead the 21.

The classes have been arranged—flocks of 25 to 50 ewes, 51 to 100, and 101 or more. The sheep growers who produce the largest average number of pounds of lamb to the ewe at the end of 135 days will win the prizes. The champion flock will be selected from the winners in the three classes. Cash prizes will be given in at least the top three in each class.

Feed and wool records must be furnished by each contestant. These records must include names of the ewes from breeding to lambing and from lambing to weaning; the kind of pasture each lamb was given; started on feed, and the kind and amount of feed used; the weight at time of the fleeces, and the price received. Efficiency of sheep flocks will be kept, grams made, and the degree of success of the enterprise will be considered by the committee in making the awards.

Four large trucks and busses passed thru this city last night, carrying "General" Clarke's Oregon Trail tour of fifty-eight boys from Cleveland, Ohio. They stopped in this city to buy groceries, and drove to the Red Lake Falls, where they spent the night.

This modernized covered wagon train left Cleveland July 1, under command of William H. Clark of the Cleveland Y. M. C. A., who was assisted by four other "Y" men as leaders. Going west they visited Buffalo, Iowa South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, they spent four days in Yellowstone Park and five days in Glacier National Park. From there they went west into Canada and came across country to Winnipeg. Their return trip will take them by way of North Dakota and the south shore of Lake Superior, across the Sault Ste Marie, and back by way of Detroit. In six weeks the expedition will have covered 7,000 miles of travel.

The boys, who range from twelve to eighteen years, were all dressed in Khaki, and carried regulation army kits. Complete equipment is carried in camping out, so that camp may be pitched anywhere on the prairies or mountains. Tourist camps are rarely avoided, Mr. Clarke said, until recently, when the boys had all spent the night in the open. Hotels they would not be under undue temptation by passing the night in town.

One truck is outfitted as a cook car, with a complete kitchen and refrigerators, four large milk cans for fresh water, and a large shelf or platform for cooking on each side. During meal time, the boys all lined up with their mess kits, and marched by the plates in hand. The cook is an Oberlin College student.

Each truck and bus has a canvas "covered wagon" top, that can be stretched out to each side to provide shelter for the cots during the night. After the boys had gotten herded out, Mr. Clarke said, many of them have preferred to sleep on the ground in the open sky.

Leaving Thief River Falls this morning, with another stop planned for the noon hour, the boys had gotten as far as Fosston, where they were to camp for the night.

SCHOOL BOARD OFFICERS ARE ALL RETURNED

Principal Hand Arrives to Prepare for Opening of School Sept. 4

OPPORTUNITY ROOM FOR SUBNORMAL IS DEFERRED

Students Entering High School First Time May Register August 20-25

Plans for the opening of the city schools, which will take place Sept. 4, are rapidly being completed under the supervision of Superintendent Morris Hyre. H. C. Hand, principal of Lincoln high school, returned to the city this week, and will complete arrangements in the high school during the week of August 20 to 25.

The majority of the students who will be enrolled this year are already registered. For the convenience of pupils from the rural schools who have not already registered, however, Mr. Hand announced that he will be in his office during registration week from 2 a. m. to 4 p. m. Rural school graduates entering for the first time are advised to bring their eighth grade certificate and diploma of graduation with them. Pupils transferring from other districts of the pupils see him at the time of registration.

Students who have already registered but find changes necessary may do so at the same time. Parents, if any, changes will be permitted on or after Sept. 3, says Mr. Hand.

School Officers Re-elected

All the officers of the school board were reelected at the organization meeting Saturday night. The present board continues the same as last year: E. M. Benson, president; C. E. Roper, vice president; Frances R. Larson, secretary; A. L. Mattson, director.

The teaching staff will not be formally completed until it is approved by the board at its monthly meeting next Monday. The same number of teachers will be employed as last year.

Opportunity Room Deferred

On account of not having met the necessary requirements for a special for that purpose, the schools will not establish opportunity room for subnormals as announced last spring. The state will extend a grant of $100 per pupil enrolled in the department, provided that the teacher who shall be appointed to that position was not taken by the school until May of this year. The state will also pay $1000 per year salary to the teacher who shall be appointed, provided that she was not taken by the school until May of this year. In order to get a state department examination for the position, the teacher who shall be appointed will be required to attend a summer session at the University of Minnesota. They will be kept at the expense of the school district.

The Agricultural Credit Corporation will extend credit to 80% of the cost of the sheep, or not to exceed $10 per head, on a three year payment plan as follows:

30% payable Oct. 1, 1930
50% payable Oct. 1, 1931

Anyone wishing to buy any of these sheep may apply to T. M. Thronson of the First National Bank, or County Agent H. M. Douglass.

Four large trucks and busses passed thru this city last night, carrying "General" Clarke's Oregon Trail tour of fifty-eight boys from Cleveland, Ohio. They stopped in this city to buy groceries, and drove to the Red Lake Falls, where they spent the night.

This modernized covered wagon train left Cleveland July 1, under command of William H. Clark of the Cleveland Y. M. C. A., who was assisted by four other "Y" men as leaders. Going west they visited Buffalo, Iowa South Dakota, Wyoming and Montana, they spent four days in Yellowstone Park and five days in Glacier National Park. From there they went west into Canada and came across country to Winnipeg. Their return trip will take them by way of North Dakota and the south shore of Lake Superior, across the Sault Ste Marie, and back by way of Detroit. In six weeks the expedition will have covered 7,000 miles of travel.

The boys, who range from twelve to eighteen years, were all dressed in Khaki, and carried regulation army kits. Complete equipment is carried in camping out, so that camp may be pitched anywhere on the prairies or mountains. Tourist camps are rarely avoided, Mr. Clarke said, until recently, when the boys had all spent the night in the open. Hotels they would not be under undue temptation by passing the night in town.

One truck is outfitted as a cook car, with a complete kitchen and refrigerators, four large milk cans for fresh water, and a large shelf or platform for cooking on each side. During meal time, the boys all lined up with their mess kits, and marched by the plates in hand. The cook is an Oberlin College student.

Each truck and bus has a canvas "covered wagon" top, that can be stretched out to each side to provide shelter for the cots during the night. After the boys had gotten herded out, Mr. Clarke said, many of them have preferred to sleep on the ground in the open sky.

Leaving Thief River Falls this morning, with another stop planned for the noon hour, the boys had gotten as far as Fosston, where they were to camp for the night.

A fire that caused more excitement than actual property damage broke out in the attic of the Dudley building Friday evening, about 5:20. Prompt response from the fire department brought the flames under control within an hour, although not until the entire attic had been flooded with water.

Occupants of the upstairs apartments first noticed smoke, and reported the fire department. The source unknown reason the whistle would emit only a weary squeak, and it was only by a collect call that Chief Paul Middaugh happened to hear it faintly from his home. Three fire hoses were soon brought to play on the blaze, and several holes had been cut in the roof and the upper walls. The attic, which is only about three feet high at its eastern end, where the fire started, was filled with smoke to permit firemen to enter.

Although the cause of the fire has not definitely been determined, it is believed to have started with a chimney fire brought in a defective ventilating flue which connects into the chimney. Flames had been burning for some time before the fire reached the attic, burning off the top two layers of brick and the surrounding wooden supports.

Damage is estimated at $1,500 by Mr. Dudley, the owner of the building. Some water damage was done to the ground floor. Furniture and other household goods were removed from the rooms of the apartments at the outset of the fire.

Repairs will be made immediately, according to Mr. Dudley, and the building rented for the winter months company, which will occupy it September 1.

STRENGTHEN YOUR LUNGS

Do you breathe deeply when you get out into the country where the air is pure and laden with the scent of newmown hay, clover blossoms, honeysuckle or buckwheat?

If not you are missing a wonderful opportunity to strengthen your lungs and improve your health. Whether walking, riding, driving or motoring, see to it that every once in a while you stop a moment to draw great draughts of pure air through your nostrils, hold your breath a moment, and then allow it to come out slowly through your lips.

The more you practice this, the more air you can take into your lungs, the more lung cells will be awakened, and the more you will appreciate the health value of deep breathing. If you must cramp your lungs for air, do it in town—but in the great open spaces breathe deeply.

"U" Professor Will Hunt for Records, Issue Book on Norwegian Immigration

Dr. Theodore C. Blegen, assistant superintendent of the Minnesota Historical society, will leave for Norway early in August, to collect records and to complete a book on Norwegian immigration to the United States. He holds an appointment as a fellow of the John Simon Guggenheim foundation of New York, for the coming year and has been given leaves of absence both by the historical society and by the University of Minnesota, where he is a member of the history department.

"Approximately one-sixth of all emigrants in America in the nineteenth century," said Dr. Blegen recently, "sent to their relatives and friends in Europe letters or diaries in which the stories of their experiences in the New World were put down in black and white. We have reason to believe that such documents, frequently preserved in Norway, are probably numerous and thousands of such simple, historical records are now in the hands of Minnesota and the Middle West. Professor Boisrag has written with great success, for example, a novel entitled "Giants in the Earth." Let us find as many such historical records of the giants in the earth of the Middle West."

Dr. Blegen will read a paper before the International Historical congress, meeting at Oslo, Norway, in August, on "The American Letters of Norwegian Immigrants to America: Immigration."

He would be glad to receive suggestions about places and families in Norway where old immigrant letters or diaries may have been kept. Wherever such documents are found copies will be taken and the original, if possible, will be turned over to the historical society in Oslo for permanent preservation. Dr. Blegen may be reached through the Minnesota historical society, St. Paul, which will forward letters addressed to him.

Shoe Studies

Each of us buys, theoretically at least, three pairs of shoes a year. This means some 350,000,000 pairs annually. Half of the hides and skins that go to make leather for these shoes are imported, principally from Asia, South America, and Africa, where people do not wear shoes so much. The United States is not self-supporting in the matter of leather and leather goods, and in case of war it is obvious that many of us would have to go without shoes if imports of raw materials were interrupted. The U. S. Department of Agriculture believes that our dependence upon foreign supplies can be very greatly reduced through better practices in the domestic production of leather-making raw materials, through more judicious or economic selection by the public of leather goods, and finally through greater care of such leather goods, with elimination of their abuse and misuse. The sale, leather, and tanning investigations carried on by the department all aim at conservation along these lines. Each year millions of dollars are lost in this country in hides and skins, much of which can be prevented by the application of correct methods of preservation and marketing, which would result in making available to the tanner not only more hides and skins but better ones, from which in turn would result more and better leather.

Mrs. Jennie Carter of St. Hilaire was a caller in the city on Wednesday.

Washed in the MAYTAG in 2 to 7 minutes

SUCH remarkable washing speed was unthought of before the Maytag originated the Gyrofoam washing action and the heat-retaining cast-aluminum tub, yet it washes the daintiest garments as carefully as if done by hand—washes by water action alone—a torrent of water passing back and forth through the meshes of the clothes.

This effective but careful method washes the stubborn edge dirt from collars and cuffs, the ground-in dirt from play-clothes or overalls without hand-rubbing. An average washing takes about an hour.

The New Roller Water Remover

The Maytag Roller Water Remover has large rolls, the top one soft, the bottom one hard. They exert equal pressure on all parts of the garment regardless of folds, lumps and seams, remove both soap and water evenly from all parts of the garment and spare the buttons.

PHONE for a Trial Washing

You may use a Maytag for your next washing without cost or obligation. You will find that it brings wonderful happiness. You will discover why it won world-wide leadership. If it doesn't sell itself, don't keep it.

The Safety Feed, the automatic tension adjustment, the self-reversing drainboard and the instant safety release remove the last bit of effort from the weekly washing.

PublicForum

Dear Editor:

The Power Trust is rapidly acquiring ownership or control of water power sites in this country to say nothing of their operations in other parts of the world. They are extending their high voltage lines from their central plants into every available hamlet and town. They utilize high pressure propaganda to disassociate village or city from possessing itself with municipal power plants and the people with electric energy at a reasonable cost. They resort to every trick to induce cities and municipalities that have power plants of their own to sell or dismantle them and buy current from the combine. They will furnish current in such cases at less than cost in order to eliminate the publicly owned plants for at least two reasons: First, in due time their contract will expire and they will be in a position to raise the rates so as to recover lost or losses besides making good profits; Second, by eliminating the publicly owned power plants they reduce the available demonstrations of the efficiency and economy of such public ownership and operation. They safeguard themselves against further development of the plan for the public ownership of public utilities.

They have learned the value to themselves of organization to promote and protect their interests, to advance their common interests. They make liberal contributions to the campaign funds of all political parties so that they will agree to leave them unmolested, and as a result when the suitable time comes they will be found backed-in the paternalistic government board whose duty it will be to fix rates as to give the stock holders a reasonable return on their inflated values set on their properties.

With a full understanding of the power trust's methods and of the public sentiment, at least to a great extent, the people have decided to a policy before it can be safely imposed upon the people, they are spending large sums of money in educational propaganda. They endow departments and professorships in our colleges and universities to warp the youthful minds while in the plastic process so that many matters and also minds of the coming generation will see things pertaining to the power question of the power trust. They are also subsidizing and endowing text books for our elementary schools with the same object in view.

Therefore it behooves the people of this state and nation to wake up to the impending danger and to take effective steps to protect educational freedom as well as their industrial and economic welfare. This can be done without impeding modern progress along the lines of developing industry, agriculture and the homes, by the inauguration of a program of public ownership and operation of a limited system of interstate power plants and transmission lines all over the state and nation.

Therefore be it resolved that in order to bring this matter squarely before the people of this state for their consideration the Farmer-Labor association has declared for the submission to a vote of the people of a constitutional amendment enabling the state to develop hydro-electric power for its people.

A mighty effort will no doubt be made to prevent the submission of such an amendment because power trust will not yet ready for a test of their strength among the common people. Now is the time to precipitate this fight, before they shall have had time and opportunity to administer their "dope" to the masses of the people.

The Farmer-Labor candidates for state offices are favoring such a program and if elected and supported by enough progressives in the legislature they will initiate this move to deliver us from the clutches of the Power Trust by forcing the issue. It is vital matter and the voters should consider it well and vote to elect an administration that stands pledged to grant their interests.

Must Sign Temperance Pledge Or No Wedding

Judge J. N. Sanford, formerly of Elbow Lake, now of Cloverdale, Ind., believes that he has found one way to keep marriages from getting into divorce courts. Before he performs a marriage ceremony he makes both bride and groom sign a temperance pledge.

He is the only justice of peace within seventy miles, and he did not want to have any couples make a long trip to have a nuptial knot tied under any misapprehensions. So he advertises the fact that these couples would have to sign up not to overindulge in liquid that contained more than the regulation one-half per cent.

He received a lot of publicity from the stand, including articles in the Denver Post and a lot of other western newspapers.—Grant County Herald.

1000 YEARLING EWES FOR SALE

An unusually fine lot of breeding ewes has been shipped in here under the direction of the Soo line. They are being pastured at the Fair grounds and may be seen there by anyone who is interested in buying a few head. It is the opinion of several experienced sheep men that we have failed to find this group of yearling ewes is the best group of its kind they have ever seen and that the price asked is reasonable considering the quality.

There is no longer any question about this country being well suited to sheep raising and there are comparatively few farmers in the county who do not have at least several head. Sheep have been a profitable item in recent years. There is some question, however, as to whether this is the proper time to enter this business or to increase the size of the flock. And this is a question which none can answer with certainty. It is a question which every farmer must answer for himself.

We are reprinting elsewhere in this issue an outline of a report on the prospects for the sheep industry issued Monday by the Department of Agriculture, as it appeared in the South St. Paul Daily Reporter. This report will be interesting to those who are interested in sheep.

Taking the present prices into consideration it would seem that this is not the proper time to speculate in sheep. For the farmer who feels inclined to add sheep as a permanent item of live stock on the farm, however, there is no good reason why the first step should not be taken now. The purchase of a few head will not break anyone if there is a crop failure this year, but the purchase of a few head at this time is a start toward a flock that should be large enough to be profitable a few years from now. The person who buys only what he is sure he can handle isn't going to lose any money and stands a good chance to earn a profit.

THE GYPSIES ARE HERE

Several troops of Gypsies are touring this section of the state, one of them being encamped at the present time south of this city. Judging from the reports of newspapers throughout the state these roving bands are doing a great deal of thieving. They may not all be thieves but certainly they will bear close watching. It is only when they are forced by absolute necessity that they do any manual work but live almost entirely by their wits. The Halstad Journal gives the following interesting account of these wanderers:

Halstad was not the only town visited by Gypsies last week. Many surrounding towns reports of visitations from the wandering Nomads. The band visiting Halstad last week consisted of five automobile loads—mostly women, many whose beauty seems through the dirt and grime. There were others who were plainly "there", but all garbed in the bright, at times gaudy, colors in place to place their beauty. Fortune telling for future, while from these is the showed a consistent chatter and when this became displayed their tongues would drive the toughest cattle wrangler to shame.

Watching for an opportunity they steal anything that could be covered in the folds of their bright garb. Dignaite Nomadic and unabated in their habits, they are believed to come from Persia, Africa India, or Bessarabia. At the present time the various bands are headed for the festival city of their King. It's the Epworth League session, and the "negro-minstrel-in-person" features and hymn-a-thons, meals are scheduled for the yearly re-union of the tribe. Good eats, good songs, no without lack of energy, but with the touch of the Gypsies' unique style of finesse. The women are still outright in the rear as to the highest heller skelter accomplishments in the race. The continent is to be part of the fun.

Although vagrancy is still a crime the Gypsies are confirmed, but the nature of their work does not point to good one. Petty thievery is noted everywhere, and recently, but they are so very clever one of all trade and they cannot be caught.

We are trying with all our might to enjoy this weather cause we know it isn't going to be long now till we will need coal.

THE COUNTY FAIR IS OVER

The twenty-seventh annual Pennington County Fair is now gone down into history. It has the distinction of being the largest fair in point of attendance that has ever been presented here.

Attendance is important of course, but not all important. More important than the size of the crowd is the attitude of the people as they leave the grounds. A small crowd that is satisfied is a better result than a large crowd that is dissatisfied. But judging from the comments we heard the large crowd that attended the fair this year went home well satisfied with the outing, so all is well.

One item that causes the management a lot of trouble each year is the gambling that is done in the booths along the midway. In spite of the fact that these booths are watched constantly and the operators warned that they will be closed up if they are caught playing for money or in any way departing from the regular rules of the game, there are always a certain number of violations. This year was no exception and several places were closed up.

Contrary to the general opinion it isn't the flick from out in the sticks that gets hooked on these games either. More often it is some smart fellow from town here—a wise boy who figures he's too clever to get caught at any skin game.....And what an awful howl-he-does make when he comes to and discovers that he has been out-smarted. This class deserves no sympathy. They deserve to lose.

Why is it that breeders do not care to bring their livestock to the fair? If some one will answer this question and will devise some plan that will arouse interest in this department of the fair he will do the association a worth while and appreciated service.

One of the things that is needed on the grounds is additional seating facilities—a new grand stand. The present stand didn't begin to handle the crowd the second day. And that's another thing. Why do so many people come to the fair on the second day and so few on the first and last days? If a three day schedule means a one day fair would a four-day schedule result in a two day event? Something must be done to divide the crowd.

The horse racing was good this year, especially the third day. The track was heavy but in spite of this the horses made good time. In the free-for-all there were four horses with marks of better than 2:07. The time for this race Friday was around 2:15.

The Red Lake Falls Juvenile Band is a snappy outfit and we don't wonder a bit that the natives of that city are proud of them. They not only make good music but also make a mighty attractive appearance. They added much to the program the third day.

The main building was very attractive this year. The exhibits were both interesting and well arranged.

There is one thing about this fair that everybody should bear in mind and that is that it is a community proposition. It isn't a money making scheme. The stock doesn't pay dividends—never can—and there aren't any salaries. The purpose of this fair is to advance the best interests of this community and provide an annual celebration for all of the people. If you have any ideas that you believe will help the fair accomplish its purpose, don't keep them to yourself but send them along to the management. And if there is anything about this fair that you think is pretty good why just pass the word along to some of the neighbors. It's a surprising thing how fast a good word will go sometimes.

(Brindig Sentinel)

Drownings are making among the items of daily news. From city beaches to rural swimming holes, pleasure and refreshment at take their toll of human life.

Many of these tragedies could be avoided by the exercise of some precautions should be observed. In addition to such safeguards as workers, teachers, and education in life saving should be given. Parents should exercise caution over their children. Every city swimmers should exercise unnecessary chances or attempt feats beyond their ability. Boating should go hand in hand with the science of safe swimming strokes. The general precautions need not be gone into in depth, and suffice it to say that at any water where treacherous holes or rocks or currents may be concealed, not staying in water at all is safest, not playing practical jokes on fellow swimmers, not shouting for help just for fun.

Swimming is a joyful and healthful sport when properly indulged in. Like traffic, however, it needs the regulation by the authorities and the use of common sense by individuals.

Immediate Prospects Good For Sheep Industry, Says Agricultural Department

(South St. Paul Daily Reporter)

Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—Increased marketings and slaughter of lambs, accompanied by an improved consumptive demand for lamb and a continued good demand for mutton and wool are indicated during the next nine months, according to the mid-summer sheep and wool outlook report of the bureau of agricultural economics, United States department of agriculture. With reference to the long-time outlook the bureau says: "sheep production in the United States has been rapidly readjusting and suggests a need for considerable caution in regard to further expansion."

"The lamb crop of 1928 as indicated by the January survey," the bureau says, "was 8 per cent larger than in 1927. Practically all of the increase was in the western lamb states. The largest increase in western lambs were in the early lambing areas of the states and in the late lambing states.

To Slaughter Few Ewes

The keen demand for ewe lambs, as shown by the high reported prices current in the West, says the report indicates that few ewe lambs of desirable type for range breeding flocks will be shipped for slaughter this fall. An increase of around 800,000 head of sheep and lambs, both native and western, in shipments, either to markets or direct to feed lots, from August to November seems likely. This increase of 800,000 head will be reflected in federally inspected slaughter of sheep and lambs during the nine months, August, 1928, to April, 1929. How this increase will be distributed during this period depends upon the proportions of the western supply that go to immediate slaughter or to feed lots.

"The view of the favorable prospects for an increased production of feed grains this year over last, and the scarcity and higher prices of feeding cattle, a good demand for feeding lambs is anticipated this fall.

Consumer Demand Stable.

Some improvement in the consumer demand for lamb is indicated according to the report, which states that "with the probable purchasing power of consumers better than in the last six months of 1927, with smaller supplies and higher prices of competing meats, and an apparent upward trend in the demand for lamb per capita and that due when some increase in lamb supply to population growth, a better consumer demand for lamb seems probable during the last half of 1928 and early in 1929 than during this period a year earlier.

"The relatively high prices of live lambs this year as compared with increase prices may be largely attributed to the increase in wool and pelt values. The present relationship between price and the quantity of lamb moving into consumption indicates that the higher general price level of all commodities may be a contributing factor in supporting the present level of prices of dressed lamb."

Reviews Wool Situation.

Summarizing the wool situation, the report says that "the world demand for wool in 1929 seems likely to continue as good or better than in 1928. Increased business activity, growth of population, a continuation of the economic recovery of European countries, and increased industrialization of the Orient will tend to strengthen the demand for wool. According to the latest reports, stocks of wool in the important exporting countries are but slightly larger than at the corresponding date last year. While the world's supply of wool during the next twelve months, therefore, seems likely to be somewhat larger than last year, the total supply will probably be little larger than the supply available for the 1926-27 season."

NEW MAP FOLDER AND BOOKLET TO BOOST MINNESOTA

Advantages of State Outlined By Ten Thousand Lakes Association

Telling of the advantages of Minnesota as a place in which to live is the purpose of a new booklet which has just been published by the Ten Thousand Lakes Association and the Greater Minnesota Association.

The new publication is in reality an agricultural map folder. On one side there is a map of the state showing the various counties highways, railroads and giving other information that would be desired by a prospective settler. On the other side the agricultural advantages of the state are set forth.

"Attention of the prospective settler is called to the fact that there will never be a better time than the present to invest in Minnesota; that prices are low and that all kinds of farms from the fully improved to the wild undeveloped lands are available at attractive terms.

The new folder tells of the progress Minnesota has made in recent years in farm development while many other states have been going backward agriculturally. It tells of the markets which are afforded in the busy smaller cities of the state as well as the great terminals, Minneapolis, Saint Paul and Duluth. The educational and cultural advantages in which Minnesota leads are set forth and information is given concerning the fertility of soil and the various crops which do well here.

Attention is called to the fact that transportation facilities are the best with more than 9,000 miles of railroads and 100,000 miles of public highways, 7,000 miles of which are included in the state trunk system. The dependability of Minnesota as a place in which to live because of her splendid educational system, her fine cities, her healthful climate and her recreational advantages is also brought out.

The first of the booklets were sent out to more than 600 sub-boosters which were received from advertising placed by the association in national publications during the months of May and June.

17 Horses Die From Eating Wet Clover

Cass county's 1st famed clover fields spelled hard luck in capital letters for Maurice Carney of North Dakota, who shipped 17 head of horses to Walker July 31, expecting to feed them at public auction, Monday, July 23, when 17 of them died from clover bloat before Monday noon.

The horses, as fine a looking band of western stock as ever came into the village, were apparently in fine condition when they were unloaded at the stock yards on the M. & L. For the most part they were in very good flesh and made an interesting and pleasant picture as they were driven through the village to the farmman Hoveleen farm on the edge of [illegible] where they were to spend the weekend.—Walker Pilot.

MAN GIVEN TEN YEARS IN PRISON FOR STEALING $35

On complaint of Stanley Walukeviez, Steve Boyda, a poor man of this county, was arrested and charged with stealing $35 from the former. Boyda was taken in Judge Grindeland's Court, at Warren on Tuesday. Boyda pleaded guilty to the theft and was sentenced by the judge to 10 years imprisonment in Stillwater at hard labor. When a man is poor and without friends the law is hard, very hard, but if a man is rich and has made millions by bootlegging or by stealing U. S. government all reserves he can get away only a nominal sentence, as shown by the case of George Remus, bootlegging, who killed his wife and walked out from the Lima, Ohio hospital a free man; and Fall, Sinclair and Doheny, who stole large oil reserves from U. S. government and escaped with comparatively slight fines or imprisonment. Is this justice?—Halliek Peoples Press.

Medical Association Gives Advice On Proper Methods Of Artificial Respiration

Because 170 were drowned in Minnesota last year a campaign is being launched by health and medical societies to force this death rate down. While "caution" is urged by the organizations, simple methods for restoring breathing so that all will understand how to apply them is the keynote of the campaign.

Recent progress made in recent years in the methods to be employed. The educational committee of the State Medical Association approves what it considers the method which has the endorsement of the American Red Cross and other kindred organizations.

As soon as possible free with your fingers in the mouth of the patient and remove any foreign body that may be present. Draw the patient's tongue well out, pry the jaws attention to it until later. Do not stop to loosen it in patient's clothing but immediately begin artificial respiration. Follow these instructions even if the patient appears dead.

1. Lay the patient on his belly, one arm extended directly overhead, the other arm bent at elbow and the face turned outward and resting on hand or forearm so that the nose is free for breathing.

2. Kneel, straddling the patient's thighs, with your knees at a distance from the hip bones. Place the palms of the hands on the lower part of the back with the fingers resting on the lowest rib, with the thumb and fingers in a natural position, and bear the weight of your body slowly forward.

3. With arms held straight, swing forward slowly so that the weight of the upper body is gradually brought to bear on the patient. The shoulder should be directly over the heel of the hand at the end of the forward swing. Do not bend your elbows. This operation should take about two seconds.

4. Now immediately swing backward so as to remove the pressure completely.

5. After two seconds, swing forward again. Thus repeat deliberately from twelve to fifteen times a minute the double movement of compression and release, a complete respiration in four or five seconds.

6. Continue artificial respiration without interruption until natural breathing is restored, if necessary four hours or longer, or until a physician declares the patient is dead. As soon as this artificial respiration has been started and while it is being continued, an assistant should loosen any tight clothing about the patient's neck, chest or waist. Keep the patient warm. Do not give any stimulants whatever by mouth until the patient is fully conscious. To avoid strain on the heart when the patient revives, he should be kept lying down and not allowed to stand or sit up.

CHAPTER III.

LONDON, WE ARE HERE

On the morning of the sixth day as we arose we hailed land once more and this time it was at Cherbourg, France. Here, at a distance, we viewed the green-carpeted hillsides of a people who many years ago presented us with a gift of the Goddess of Liberty and had it placed in New York harbor. The pretty, light-green grass carpeting, with the darker green foliage of the trees on the hillsides, made a refreshing panorama to our vision after the long days of seeing nothing but sky and water. There was a smile on every face that came on deck in the beautiful morning the small fishing boats were putting out of the harbor for the day's duty.

The monster engines of the "Liver" gradually began to cease their heavy breathing that marked the steady and arduous task of pushing that great hulk of 60,000 tons thru the seas at the average rate of twenty-seven miles per hour for the entire distance. As the engines ceased their motion for the first time I noticed that the water about the boat was of a different color and this was due to the fact that our forty-two foot draft was now down in the clear blue waters of the harbor of Cherbourg and in a few moments we sighted the lighters coming to our assistance. These boats came up cautiously on either side and as one took on the passengers and their luggage, the other took off the mail for the continent of Europe. Here it was that at least three-fourths of the passengers got off.

I will never forget my first sight of the French lighter with its smiling captain as he waved his hands to the others as he gave them orders and at the same time with profuse salutations and a hearty bonjour discernible in his pretty blue eyes and ruddy complexion, so marked on the features of those who follow the life of the sailor. His wore a beautiful seafaring beard, and his well-decorated uniform, spotlessly clean, was cheerful to behold. I noticed that with every word or command there was a characteristic French gesture and it occurred to me that if that captain's hands were tied for five moments he would choke.

Talk about system in the putting off of the 2,700 bags of mail for the continent! The entire time that was consumed in transferring passengers and baggage to the lighters was not over two hours and then the anchor was raised, a slight toot of the whistle and we were again off for our final destination, Southampton.

We struck Southampton harbor at about three o'clock in the afternoon but here we had to proceed at half speed owing to the many sharp turns and islands in the Solent river. Once a tug had to come to our assistance and a hawser was thrown to the tug and the stern of our boat had to be pulled around in order to get on the right course. Then we were again off for slow speed the short turns were behind us more than the "Liver" could push along. At four we docked and I surely did wish a stiff upper lip for us landlubbers who had only seen in print something of the shipping activities of the British Empire. I know now why the smaller nations respect the British Union Jack when it floats from the mast of a dog of war or a merchantman. There is the enough to wear petticoats. "Why," said I, "they have been living since 1922." But another lady said that she would have put them, all on. And still another said she would have loaded the balloon with them all on, and so it went, and the ladies in distress did not get anything very cheering for their feeling a good old-fashioned kind.

It was a sight to see the little coaches. They are about one-half the size of an American railway coach and less than half the weight. The aisle is on the side; you enter and the conductor closes the door. You go thru a narrow, yes, very narrow door and find your compartment. This holds six people comfortably and eight in a pinch—we got the pinch. As we were past six as the train pulled out of the station for London, seventy miles distant. Everybody was smiling the hungry, tired, no new, or rather so old and different. We wondered what the tiny little engine would do with ten coaches. We found out for in a jiffy that train was being hurled thru space at a speed far ahead of the best American flyer. It was a sight to see the little fields and villages as we flashed by, and it was

Many alfalfa growers, who cut the hay at full bloom or in the early post-stage of maturity—a practice especially common in the North Central and Rocky Mountain States—could produce hay of better quality if they would cut it when 1-10 to 1-5 inches of new growth starts from the crowns, irrespective of the bloom. This would advance the time of cutting a week or so for the first cutting and increase the season's tonnage because of the longer period given to subsequent cuttings. Large quantities of leaf-cut alfalfa are marketed annually in the United States and most of this type of hay grades only U. S. No. 2 or No. 3 because of insufficient leaves or lack of color. Late-cut alfalfa also has hard and somewhat woody stems, which, although not very objectionable to horse or beef cattle feeders, are not wanted by dairymen who are the chief buyers of alfalfa hay.

Ten thousand men will be sent to Canada from England to help with the harvest this fall, according to two governments. Recruiting agencies for harvest laborers will be opened in the mining areas, where there is great distress due to unemployment.

GOVERNMENT WANTS ENGINEERS FOR NEW BUILDING PROGRAM

Civil Service Board Announces Openings in Many Branches Of Federal Service

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced a large number of vacancies in engineering positions of various kinds in the Federal service.

Applications will be received until August 15 for positions of assistant and associate architectural, construction, electrical, mechanical, and structural engineers in the Office of the Supervising Architect, for employment in connection with the $165,000,000 public buildings program. Entrance salaries are $2,000 and $3,200 a year.

Junior engineers are needed in a number of branches of the service. Applications will be received until August 15. The entrance salary is $2,000. This examination offers an opportunity for recent graduates or senior students in aeronautical, agricultural, chemical, civil, mechanical, mining, marine, or structural engineering.

The engineer Department of the Army is in need of assistant and associate civil engineers. Applications will be received until August 15. Entrance salaries range from $2,600 to $3,700 a year.

Full information may be obtained from G. Legvold, Secretary of the United States Civil Service Board of Examiners at the post office in this city.

By turning under crimson clover grown with the corn crop, C. E. Edgecombe County, N. C., carrying on a demonstration in soil improvement in cooperation with the county agricultural extension agent, secured an increase of 65 bushels of corn per acre over the corn crop where the clover was cut for hay. By so doing in 1926, when one crop of clover was turned under, in 1927, a second crop of crimson clover was turned under and an increase of 22 bushels of corn per acre was secured. The type of soil in this county was Norfolk sandy loam, and 100 pounds of a home-mixed 6-3½-4½ fertilizer were applied to an acre.

Careful handling of potatoes, particularly those that are to be held for storage, will largely prevent loss from Fusarium rot. This rot is also responsible for the loss of from 5 to 10 per cent of the annual crop, and in some fields where it is severe may have lost 50 per cent of their crop.

Mechanical injuries such as cuts, bruises, and skin abrasions, caused by improperly handled seed are a source of Fusarium rot. Even minute skin abrasions may become the seat of fungous infection. Even minute sharp edges of the forks, shakers, or of the diggers by rubber or burlap will reduce mechanical injury.

CREAMERY MAY GET REBATE

(Lake Park Journal)

Congressman C. G. Selvig and Martin Midsten of Glyndon were in Lake Park Tuesday evening, conferring with the Board of the Lake Park Creamery.

The creamery has been paying income tax for several years, since it was not raised as a cooperative concern for income taxation. Its records showed that there were about 24 percent non-producing stockholders, or 24 percent more than is allowable. Investigation brought out the fact that most of these non-producers were retired farmers, who had been patrons of the creamery.

This information has been sent in to the income tax officials, and Mr. Midsten stated that it was reasonably certain that the claim would be allowed. This would mean that the creamery would not only be exempt from the income tax, but would be able to collect for any taxes paid in years previous. Since the tax amounts to about $400 per year, this will result in considerable saving to the creamery.

U. S. GOVERNMENT WILL USE RADIOLA DIALOGUE AT FAIR

Imaginary Conversation Will Demonstrate Method of Successful Farmer

Seizing upon a popular idea in moving picture and radio worlds, the United States Government will use a radiola dialogue next year in reproducing the discussion of Tom and Henry, two imaginary characters, as the central feature of its exhibit at the Northwest Livestock Show to be held Sept. 1 to 8 in conjunction with the Minnesota State Fair.

Using lifelike models, the government's office of exhibits in the department of agriculture is preparing this feature to show methods followed by Tom, the successful farmer, and Henry, who is not so successful, in feeding dairy cattle, feeding and testing the milk, and keeping milk clean.

The exhibit will cover nearly 1,000 square feet of floor space adjoining the educational exhibit of the state at the Northwest Livestock Show Committee representing insure more education and railroad leaders throughout the Northwest.

Other features include visual representations entitled: Some Factors Affecting Fertility in Dairy Cattle; the Under-Source of a Rich Milk Supply; Feeding Dairy Cows Are the Basis of Successful Operation of Milk Utensils; Dairy Cattle Feeding; Dairyman's Helper; Butter Price Curve (covering 17 years); Feeding Silage and Alfalfa Hay; Low Grade Legume Hay on Milking Cows; and Profitable Dairy Cattle, news and for distribution to market information.

For the convenience of the farmer during the busy season our cream station will be open Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

The use of temporary pastures for sheep aids greatly in the prevention of infection by stomach worms and other internal parasites. Most flocks have some degree of infection from stomach worms and in seasons of high temperature and excessive moisture these parasites are most likely to spread. Young lambs are especially susceptible to injury from parasites and will be exposed to less danger if moved to fresh ground at intervals of about two weeks than if permitted to remain longer on the same fields. Two weeks is the longest time that one piece of ground should be grazed by lambs during the warm part of the season. Older sheep are less susceptible than lambs and may be allowed to use pasture left in fields from which lambs have been removed.

Ike "Did you get damages for the week you were in?"

Sol: "Sure, I got $5,000 for myself and $2,000 for Sara."

Ike: "But the wife wasn't hurt."

"To Be Continued In Our Next"

Just paying for an article and carrying it home, doesn't complete the transaction in our store. An invisible part of your purchase remains to be delivered — Satisfaction. The story of the sale is "continued in our next." Six months—a year later, perhaps—you will know whether Satisfaction or Discontent, was the ending.

That is why we cannot afford to sell "seconds," imperfect goods, or bankrupt stocks. Articles that are a frequency and weakened by substitution, hid away where the buyer cannot detect them, wouldn't make a very good "ending." Quality must have its price—and Quality alone determines whether that price is economical.

Twenty - six years ago we began business in one tiny store. Today we have over 1,000, scattered from coast to coast. Apparently our customers have been satisfied with the "ending" of our merchandise story.

SCHOOL BOARD ADOPTS ANNUAL PROMOTION PLAN

Beginning This Year No New First Grade Pupils will be Admitted in January

WILL NOT AFFECT PRESENT MID-YEAR CLASSES

Abolition of Mid-Term Promotions Will Allow Greater Teacher Load

Beginning this year there will be no new first grade pupils admitted in the city schools at mid-term in January, according to a resolution passed by the school board Monday night. This action was taken upon the recommendation of Supt. Morris Dye, who has been considering alterations into semi-annual promotions since the beginning of his service as supervisor of 57 schools in the state having an enrollment of over 400 enrolled that 41 have annual promotions, 12 have semi-annual, and four January promotions. Dr. Dye has also been recently changed from semi-annual to annual promotions.

This ruling will not affect those pupils who are already on a mid-year promotion basis. "It will therefore take several years before the change is completed.

"The tendency since 1929 has been away from semi-annual promotions because it complicates the high school curriculum and interferes with ability grouping, especially in cities with small grade schools scattered throughout the city," said Mr. Dye in advocating the change.

Mr. Dye submitted to the board the results of a study made by Supt. H. W. Kircher of Sheboygan, Wisconsin, from which Mr. Kircher had drawn the following conclusions from 1. Regular five month ability groups do not exist between successive half grades.

2. The five months or semi-annual promotion plan has no advantage over the annual promotion plan as regards the demotions and promotions.

3. It is easier to adjust the teacher's load under the annual promotion plan.

4. More efficient use can be made of available school room space under the annual promotion plan.

5. Teachers have a better opportunity to become acquainted with their pupils under the annual promotion plan.

"Our chief difficulty with respect to semi-annual promotions in Thief River Falls," says Supt. Dye's report to the board, "is in respect to teacher load. The classes that start school in the first half of the year average between 25 and 30 pupils, while those that start in January average between 30 and 35. Our average pupil load per teacher in the grades this year was 32. In order to increase that we would have to assign to a teacher a class of 25 to 30 and one of 10 to 15 pupils. This would mean that she would have to have three groups in some subjects, which would allow too little class time for each. I believe that with annual promotions the teaching load could be increased somewhat because we would not have these small mid-year groups to take care of, or those that start in January will, of course, logically finish the eighth grade in January. This will complicate matters in the high school temporarily.

To enter school this year, a child must be 7 years old before March 1, under the new ruling. The semi-annual promotion plan pupils admitted in September were required to be six before December 1, while those entering in January were required to be six by June 1. March 1 was chosen because it is half-way between Sept. 1 of one year and Sept. 1 of the next year. Thus no child entering in January, 1929, will be 7 years old before he is allowed to enter school.

Minneapolis Firm Will Open Auto Parts Branch Store on Main Avenue

The Twin City Auto Parts company, Minneapolis-wholesale, will open a branch store here, to be known as the Thief River Falls Auto Parts company, about September 1, in the building on Main avenue near the Standard Oil station formerly occupied by the Stageberg second hand store.

This building has been owned for about twenty-five years by M. J. Abrahams, who will be the resident manager. Mr. Abraham has been associated with H. R. Vaughn in the management of the Minneapolis office, at 212 Second avenue, for four years. The parent firm was organized in 1917 by Mr. Vaughn.

Both Mr. Vaughn and Mr. Abraham have been here this week, supervising the remodeling of the building. While they have done a mail order business in this section for many years, this will be their first branch store. Several others are under contemplation. Both new and used parts for all popular cars will be carried in stock.

Black company spoke on the extension of the Thief River Falls community, while E. M. Bonnes gave an interesting talk on his recent trip to Florida.

Vm. Sandeen Purchases Building Occupied By Reliable Motor Company

A deal was completed this week whereby Sandeen's Garage becomes the owner of the building now occupied by the Reliable Motor company, at 316 Main avenue north. Sandeen will take possession about October 1.

The Sandeen Ford agency and garage has occupied the old Fenson building at 116 Second street west since March, 1927. Their new building, which is one of the largest and finest garages in the city, has been completed since the spring of 1928 by Reliable Motors, Chevrolet dealers.

As soon as the present lease made by the proprietors of the Reliable Motor company as to their plans for the future.

The new home of Sandeen's Garage was built by Alfred Rasmussen, and for many years housed the Jefferson Highway Garage, operated by K. A. Sundahl. Later it passed into the possession of the Polk County Seed Co., from whom Mr. Sandeen purchased it.

FARMERS ADVISED TO KEEP SHEEP IN PENNINGTON CO.

One Carload of Montana Sheep Already Placed on Local Farms

The 1,500 head of yearling ewes brought in from Montana and for sale here are selling well and any farmers in the county who wish to keep sheep should see about them right away.

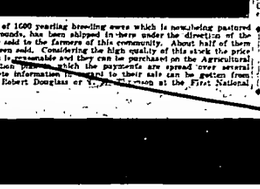
The following men have purchased flocks of these ewes and a few more applications are on file which, as yet, have not been approved:

Louis Nelson, J. B. Heller, Osmund Grindahl, Fred Urdahl, V. J. Cote, Harry Myrom, Freeman Allen, Lyle Simunk, Wanke, Bill Wilke, Chas. Hagen and Ben Selseth.

"It is the consensus of opinion that Pennington county will carry as many sheep as possible in Pennington county," declared Agent Douglass. "Many farmers have plenty of room for them and a small band of sheep will fit in to the program of diversification. Sheep that are not taken up in a very short time will be moved to other parts of the state. Selection from the flocks of 250 head to go out north, 250 head to Red Lake Falls and Viking, and 500 to two men came up on Monday from territory around Trail and Mentor with 300 of them. These sheep can be placed easily but we are not in need of them in Pennington County, so any one thinking about sheep in this territory should act as soon as possible.

"There have been many reports from men who have made from 75 to 100% on their investment in the first year. This is a splendid type of sheep this is not very hard to get.

"Applications for sheep on the above plan can be obtained from the County Agent or at the First National Bank. If you are thinking about sheep, now is the time to get busy on it. This is about the last time of the year to bring sheep into this county as they have plenty of time to get accustomed to their feed and to get in condition for breeding and the winter. These are all yearling ewes and have their whole life ahead of them and are good breeding stock for any man. Use good Pure Bred books on these ewes and the banks should be the kind to lay the market. Selection from the flocks could be used to increase the herds.



"We can't keep the 6" sheep much longer as we are interested come in and see about them."

Mary Biskey Goes to State Fair As Winner of County 4-H Club Sewing Contest

Mary Biskey of St. Hilaire will be awarded a free trip to the state fair, as a result of winning first place in the county 4-H club sewing exhibit. This exhibit was not judged at the county fair, as owing to the large number of exhibits it was impossible to judge them all without disarranging the exhibit. The entire exhibit was shipped from Forts Ferry to the Northwest School at Crookston, who made the awards this week.

In placing Mary Biskey first, Miss Leslie said in a letter to county agent Douglass: "Mary's choice of color combinations was by far the best and her work practically perfect. She wrote very pleasing young seamstress and they are doing good work." Mabel and Gladys Hines and Alma Kjelland were given blue ribbons for their close competition. Miss Biskey is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Biskey of St. Hilaire.

1600 FINE YEARLING EWES AT FAIR GROUNDS

This flock of 1600 yearling breeding ewes which is now being pastured at the fair grounds, has been shipped in there under the direction of the Soo Line to be sold to the farmers of this community. About half of them have already been sold. Considering the high quality of this stock the price asked for them is reasonable and they can be purchased on the Agricultural Credit Corporation plan, under which the payments are spread over several years. Complete information can be obtained from their sale can be gotten from County Agent Robert Douglass or from Mr. Johnson at the First National Bank.

Sharp Drop in Horse-drawn Vehicles Offsets Increase in Foreign Cars

The annual traffic check was conducted on highway 32 and 33 during the week from August 6 to 12 inclusive, under the supervision of County soldier T. T. Anderson. Data showing the number of each of the various classes of vehicles passing each way from the intersection of 32 and 33 west of the city were mailed by H. H. Sewell of Crookston, district highway maintenance superintendent.

Traffic on both highways was heavier than during the week in 1927 last year, the greatest decrease being on 33. The increase in foreign cars is greater than offset by a decrease in horse-drawn vehicles from 248 last year to 57 on both highways this year.

The total number of vehicles, including automobiles, trucks, wagons, and buggies on both highways this year was 7,720. In 1927 it was 7,620; in 1926, 5,931; in 1925, 6,250. Following is a summary of the enumeration on both highways, according to classes of traffic. T. H. 33 goes to Warren, and T. H. 32 to Holt).

	T. H. 32	T. H. 33
Total	3,704	3,720
Minnesota	1,410	1,002
Minnesota "B"	1,287	1,297
Foreign	272	332
Wagons	11	23
Buggies	1	325

Monday was the peak day this year, as it was a year ago. The total on both highways was 1,264 this year, and 1,250 last year.

Forrest Anderson and Nittie Anderson were employed to count and classify the vehicles passing each way. Each counter was provided with a car for the seven days.

An exact count of traffic is conducted every year on highway 32 in this county, so any one thinking about building a highway in the state during the same week. The highway engineers will make maintenance program is thus planned accordingly.

SOO LINE PARTY VISITS VALLEY POTATO GROWERS

Seek to Stimulate Production of Certified Seed For Southern Markets

After a potato inspection trip thru Mc Dak. and the Red River Valley, fifty railroad agricultural agents and southern potato buyers arrived in this city on a special train Friday night.

Under the leadership of F. E. Johnson, general agricultural agent of the Soo Line, the party left Fargo on August 7, for a two weeks' visit to the Red River Valley potato growing region. The purpose of the tour was to stimulate production of certified seed for sale in southern markets. Potato growing has been developing rapidly in the south than in the northern states, consequently the seed must be shipped from places as possible.

Stops were made at Lee, Carrington, Harvey, Burlington, Arnamoor, Rockville in South Dakota and Rugby in Minnesota. At Arnamoor the party inspected the 1,500 acres of certified Triumphs on the C. F. Moorehead farm. Mr. Moorehead is one of the largest potato growers in the state, having this year 3,500 acres in all. Fields of Prince Edward Island Cobblers were inspected at Carrington and Rockville, and the banks at Rugby. A short stop was made at Minot, west of Velva, and Sow Line, has a farm.

Included in the party making the tour were, in addition to several railroad agricultural agents, a number of potato buyers and university professors.

EQUALIZATION BOARD MEETING SET FOR MONDAY

City Assessments Completed Later Than Usual on Account of New System

ENGINEER RECOMMENDS EAST SIDE STORM SEWER

Electric Power Users Petition Council for Adjustment of Rates

Next Monday, August 20, was set as the date of the meeting of the city equalization board at the city council meeting Tuesday night. City Engineer Ellis stated that the work of the field work was completed last week, and that the property records would be available by Monday. On account of a new, more complicated and exacting system in use this year, completion of the assessment has been considerably delayed.

Engineers for the Jacobson Engineering company appeared before the council and reported the progress of their work in surveying Thief and Red Lake rivers. They are being employed to determine the amount of land that would be flooded by raising the city dam in the rivers, and the obstructing underbrush along the banks. The engineers find that they cannot complete the survey as soon as had been estimated. Four contour lines are being drawn, at the 1,112, 1,115, 1,117 and 1,120 foot levels. The engineers were instructed to extend their survey to the mouth of Quiet Creek, Marshall county engineer, reported to the council the results of his preliminary survey of the sewer system on the east side. Some weeks ago a group of residents complained that their basements were flooded after every heavy rain, because the sewage outlet is too small to carry the added street drainage. Mr. Quist was engaged to determine whether it would be practicable to build a separate storm sewer system for the east side, or simply install a larger outlet for the sanitary system. Following his preliminary report to the council, a storm sewer main could be built to Birch street, and then follow the present outlet to the outlet below the city.

A petition bearing the names of 17 electric power users was presented to the council by Dahl Anderson, requesting a readjustment of power rates. The matter was referred to the water and light committee, which will meet with representatives representing the petitioners.

HEAVY RAINS THIS WEEK DAMAGE CROP, DELAY HARVESTING

Three-inch Rainfall Monday and Tuesday Flattens Heavy Grain Fields

Considerable damage was done to standing grain and harvest delayed for several days by heavy rains that fell in this section Monday and Tuesday. Early rumors of heavy hail damage have proved for the most part unfounded, although several farmers over a widely scattered area report some hail. More grain was flattened by the heavy rains than by hail in most parts of the county.

As harvest was about half completed, more on the east slope of the town but less on the lower lands, the damage to the oat and brittle is stand up under the heavy downpour of Monday morning. Monday afternoon, Tuesday forenoon, and Tuesday afternoon, Conklin, Three and a half inches of rain fell during the two days, according to the local weather bureau representative, R. H. Haynes. Many fields were ready to be cut are covered with water, or are so soft that it will take several days for the harvesting to be resumed.

Crops in general are better than for several years past. Barley and oats especially are heavy, and wheat are spotted, averaging a fair yield everywhere in places where the crop escaped the hail. Many fields cut the crop.

Nearly as much rain fell Monday and Tuesday of this week as during the entire month of July, when the total precipitation was 4.76 inches. The highest precipitation in July was 1.24 inches of rain fell. On Monday, August 13, the precipitation was 1.26 inches, and on Tuesday, 1.91 inches, making a total for the two days of 3.17 inches.

Sunday, August 12, was the hottest day this year, when the temperature reached 92 degrees. The warmest day in July was the 19, with a temperature of 87. The mean maximum for the month of July was 78.74 degrees, and the mean minimum 55.24. The lowest temperature during the month was 42 degrees, on July 27.

When about five or six miles from the Narrows they discovered in the middle of the road, at some distance, what appeared to be three good sized black calves; however, on closer inspection the animals were found to be three black bears. The brutes were so engrossed in some object found in the middle of the road that they took no notice of the approach of the tourists' car until it was within five or six feet of them. At this distance the car had been brought almost to a standstill in order not to run into the bears who then took a hasty departure, some taking refuge in a tree and the other two seeking cover in the brush.

Governor Suspends Open Season on Partridges In State Because of Scarcity

Game Warden August Tabor calls the attention of sportsmen in this section to the fact that the partridge season which, according to the statutes, is open this year, but which is changed on account of the special order of the governor.

The partridges which were decimated by disease and worms last year were so scarce that game leagues in the southern part of the state asked the governor to issue a special order suspending the open season on partridges.

In May, 1928, the governor issued the order which will close the season until 1930. Gene Warden August Tabor says that observations of many young partridge have been made this year, but that he has no way of knowing as yet whether or not the numbers have increased materially from this years hatch.

In the South alsike clover is recommended for creek bottoms and other wet lands.

Why Teeth Are Defective

Because we have violated the law of life. Defective teeth are a true sense life and health and are the plainest proof of disease, or changed function. They are aimed for replenishment. Every human having defective teeth is diseased and cannot be healthy until the condition is changed. The time to look after your teeth is all the time—not merely to keep them clean, but radiate a clean teeth will decay, unless the normal requirements of the life cells of the body are maintained in the blood stream.—Motto

DOGS MUST HAVE MUZZLE OR LEASH TO ENTER CAMPS

Outbreak of Rabies Lead to Stringent Order from Health Dept.

Owing to an outbreak of rabies last year that threatens to recur this year unless extreme precautions are taken, the State Department of Health has issued stringent regulations governing care of dogs in tourist parks.

Rules have been placed both at the local tourist park and at the city auditorium, which is the official tourist rest-room, stating the rules which must be adhered to before dogs may be taken into tourist camps. The outbreak of rabies last year was traced to a dog brought into a tourist camp, and resulted in several deaths.

Attention is called by the posters to Regulation 101 of the Health Department, which says shall be permitted to enter upon the grounds of a tourist camp in the State of Minnesota unless such dog is wearing an effective and satisfactory muzzle or muzzle or is held in leash, the length of the leash not to exceed six feet; and strictly confined to owner's car, the length of the chain not to exceed six feet."

Railroads Offer Reduced Round Trip Rates During State Fair Week, Sept. 1-8

Reduced rate of a fare and one-third for round trip has been granted by railroads for the Minnesota State Fair and Northwest Livestock Show, Twin Cities, September 1 to 8, inclusive. Sales will go on sale Friday, August 31, and can be purchased up to and including September 8, with the return limit set for Monday, September 10.

Fair officials also call attention to the advance thrift ticket sale which is in operation every day throughout the state. These tickets will sell for fifty cents, a saving of twenty-five cents for those who buy them. More than 40,000 persons took advantage of thrift tickets at last year's State Fair.

The same plan as was followed last year has been adopted for this year's sale of tickets. Persons desiring to take advantage of the thrift sale can purchase tickets singly or in numbers, a ticket will admit adult automobile to the outside enclosure; adult or child to unreserved section of the grandstand to the heaviest or Evening Horse Show, or can be purchased as a value of fifty cents in the purchase of reserved or box seats in the grand stand or Horse Show. These tickets will be good on any day of the Fair.

A grade holstein cow owned by Hans K. Berg holds first place for the month of July in the Fertile cow testing association with a production of 1,264 lb. milk and 52 lbs. of butter fat. The report covers 356 cows in 8 herds. Average production in the association was 671 lbs. of milk and 27.85 lbs. of butter fat per cow with an average butter fat test of 3.7%.—Fertile Journal.

Stubble Burner Proves Success as Weed Killer On North Dakota Farms

Use of a stubbleburner last fall on several fields in the vicinity of Crosby, N. D., which this year give promise of producing bumper crops, has convinced a number of farmers that they have hit upon a successful plan for the growing of practically weed-free crops, as well as causing a big decrease in the amount of damage from insects.

The fields where the burner was used, it is declared, will this year yield considerably more grain than those where the machine was not operated.

Fred Haas, living five miles south of Crosby, is among those who are enthusiastic over the use of the burner.

"Last fall we secured the services of a stubbleburner, and burned off three of our fields," Mr. Haas said, "and the three, one was only partially treated in this way, owing to the coming of wet weather, and as affords a striking example in the difference.

"The burned portion is absolutely clean of all weeds, and is free six inches to a foot higher than the rest of the grain, and will without doubt run from five to 10 bushels more to the acre.

"The unburned is not so good, and we rate the yield around 20 per cent from wild oats alone.

"We burned this at a cost of less than 25 cents per acre, and as we find it better to disk or use a duckfoot cultivator after burning to the plow, we saved just about the value of the seed on what we burned.

"The leaguable part is that burning appears to increase the yield The stand is healthier with a better color, and shows that burning the stubble off instead of plowing it under, allows the ground to keep a mulch that will hold the moisture.

"We had a rather long dry spell, which had the effect of rushing the maturity of the general crop. On what was burned, however, we find it filled out better, and will ripen slower than the other.

"The one field that was full of wildoats last year. This stands around three feet high, is very heavy, and is absolutely free of any weed, except some very small spots that the machine did not burn."

Hundreds of persons have been attracted by the success of the stubble-burning operations, and have visited the fields where the work was done.—Grand Forks Herald.

HOOVER HAS SPOKEN

The Northwest has reason to feel encouraged by the stand taken by Herbert Hoover on the farm relief question in his speech of acceptance of the Republican nomination for President. His statement is especially encouraging when it is considered that he owes his nomination to the present administration and that group in the party that has consistently discouraged every effort to obtain farm relief. In his statement he turns squarely away from the record of the present administration and that group that has successfully obstructed relief legislation in the past, and declares that, "the most urgent economic problem in our nation today is in agriculture." He offers a specific relief program and pledges himself and his administration to a fulfillment of that program if he is elected.

In considering this statement it is natural to wonder how near Mr. Hoover's administration would come to keeping the promises he has made. If his probabilities of future performance were to be measured by the past performance of the present administration there would indeed be good reason to doubt that Hoover's statement was more than a can of bait offered to snare votes. It isn't easy to forget that the present administration has pledged farm relief in the last campaign and then offered the most stubborn opposition to every effort made to secure relief. It is no excuse for the administration that they did not favor the equalization fee of the McNary-Haugen bill but rather its attitude of indifference toward the solution of a problem which it was pledged to solve. Dissatisfied with the proposals of farm leaders who worked independently of the administration, Mr. Coolidge failed to present any better or more workable plan. We have kept cool with Mr. Coolidge so long that we have become decidedly cool toward him too. The Northwest has a right to be somewhat skeptical about promises.

But there is some justification for the hope that Hoover is a little bit more of a man than Coolidge. Hoover isn't the puppet type. It seems likely he does his own thinking occasionally, and there is no question but that he is a man of action. He has been accused, at various times, of doing things that were not popular but his integrity or ability have not been doubted. There is nothing suggestive of insincerity about this farm relief program which he has offered. In the first place, and most important of all, he has recognized in good hard words that mean only one thing that there actually is a need for farm relief. He states further that the working out of a practical relief program is the most important obligation of the next administration. He presents a definite program for such relief and pledges his wholehearted support to the fulfillment of that program. The program he offers is practical. The fact that he has definitely charted a course which he proposes to follow on this very controversial subject and presents that course which he has charted as the first and most important consideration of his administration if he is elected encourages us to believe that he is sincere in what he says and that he will make a serious effort to effect the relief that he proposes.

We have now heard Hoover's opening speech and we are agreeably surprised with what he offers. We expected less. We still have Mr. Smith to hear from and it is only fair to defer judgement until both sides have spoken. As far as the Northwest is concerned there should be but one issue in this election and that is farm relief. Religious prejudice or fervor should not be permitted to sway us in the selection of a chief executive, nor should we permit ourselves to become divided on the prohibition question or any other question which will detract from the importance of the consideration of farm relief. In fighting for a settlement of this problem we have everything to gain and nothing to lose. All other considerations should be set aside as but of secondary importance.

THE "BIG THREE" IS GETTING LITTLER

The state supreme court has decided that the university of Minnesota is entirely independent of the state government and that the "Big Three" has no power to interfere in the expenditures of the University's funds by the board of regents. This is another body blow to Governor Christianson's new plan of government. The "Big Three" is becoming less big right along. If the courts keep paring away large chunks of its power it will not be long before this group will be known as the "Little Three."

It is a good thing that the courts are defining the powers of the respective groups. The adjustments that these court decisions cause probably are not pleasant but they are necessary. They will make it possible for future legislatures to effect such changes in the law as will be deemed advisable. These future legislatures will have the benefit not only of court decisions but also actual experience of the government in operation under this plan, and will be better able, therefore, to enact legislation that will assure desirable features and eliminate undesirable features of the general scheme.

In the relation of the state government to the university there should be immediate steps taken to bring the university under the control of the state. It is true that there is some chance that the best interests of education will not always be served if the board of regents must get the approval of the state government on all expenditures, but it is also true that the best interests of the state will not always be served if the board of regents become the supreme rulers of the university and will be permitted to spend the public funds for any purpose whatsoever and without consideration for the specific purposes for which the funds are appropriated. There is necessarily some evil in either arrangement but it appears to us that there is less evil in a system of checks and balances such as the government has tried to introduce than in a system where there are no checks and each department of the government is an independent monarchy.

A NATIVE SON OF MINNESOTA

Frank Kellog, rejected by the people of this state when he sought re-election to the United States Senate, is now receiving international recognition for his efforts in behalf of world peace. Following his defeat by Shipstead in the election six years ago he was made ambassador from the United States to the court of St. James. From this position he was recalled to serve as Secretary of State, considered to be the most important office in the government next to the presidency itself. Today he is acclaimed thruout the world for his success in effecting between many of the nations of the world treaties that are considered to be a definite step toward lasting world peace. There is reason to believe that he will go down into history as one of the great benefactors of mankind.

It is not strange that Mr. Kellogg was unseated in the political revolt that was at its height thruout the northwest six years ago. He was never what would be called a popular leader among the rank and file of the people. He carried with him no popular appeal. He was not an orator. He wasn't even a good speaker. Nor did he have a smart line of small talk that would enable him to make votes by personal contact. He was lacking in too many of the qualities that are essential to success as a politician.

Judging by recent developments however, it was perhaps well for both him and the world that he was not appreciated in his own back yard. Evidently the shortcomings as a politician did not impair the development as a statesman.

There are many native born sons of Minnesota who have achieved distinction in commerce, science, literature, and art, and we who are citizens of Minnesota are justified in our pride of those who have brought glory to our state in these and other honorable fields. But in Mr. Kellogg Minnesota has a native son who has achieved distinction by bringing the world a little nearer that Utopia of which the dreamers of every century have dreamed, the day of universal peace on earth, and for this great service which he has given mankind the state of Minnesota, his home state, should be the most appreciative.

During a twelve year career of crime one eastern criminal was arrested twelve times but was imprisoned only twice. The career finally ended when he was killed by the bullet of a police man who was lucky enough to get in the first shot. The records do not disclose how many crimes this man was implicated in for which he was not arrested. The figures probably would be quite large.

This is an apt illustration of our weakness in handling crime. Too many of those characters known to police as "bad men" are permitted to be at large. The new "flaumes" law will probably remedy this condition to some extent.

The city council meets Monday morning as a board of equalization and anyone being dissatisfied with the valuation placed upon their property by the assessor is invited to present evidence at that time why an adjustment should be made. From the standpoint of the council this is a good time to hold such a meeting—every few people know now what valuation has been placed upon the property. If this meeting were held a couple of days after the tax statements were issued property owners would be present almost one hundred per cent.

We are presenting elsewhere in this issue the complete text of Hoover's farm relief program as he presented it in his acceptance speech last Saturday. Smith, the Democratic candidate, will make his acceptance speech next week and we will present in an early issue whatever he may offer on the same subject. Study these statements carefully. It is around these statements that the most important fireworks of the campaign will be fired.

It isn't too late yet to place your order for a few of the yearling ewes that are being sold here. But they are moving out right along so if you intend to buy a few don't postpone action too long.

As soon as Al Smith gets his statement out and the campaign warms up a little we are going to run a poll to see how Times readers line up on the presidential election.

"CRIME PAY"

(Literary Digest)

Thieves, burglars, bootleggers and kidnappers may flourish for a time, but evidence that the way of the transgressor is hard and his earnings small, notes the Junction Star, can be found on every hand. Despite stories of fabulous wealth amassed by law violators through illegal practice, it is a fact that crime does not pay. Most of the time the unlawful dealing in liquor, and in other prohibited pursuits, there are thousands of others, it is observed, who find they gain nothing by a life of crime. To sharpen its point, the Star recites that:

"Recently it has been brought to the attention of newspaper readers that a burglar's life in England is a hard struggle for existence. Sir Walter Greaves Lord, recorder of Manchester, is given as authority for the statement that the average 'earnings' of an English burglar are about $3.00 a week. 'A burglar who earns three dollars a week in my opinion is a successful one,' Sir Walter is quoted as saying. There is no money in crime, but only misery.'

"In giving warning that crime does not bring riches as once may have been led to believe, Sir Walter points out that in estimating the returns from the work of the criminal, one must take into consideration not only the time the criminal is out of jail but also the time he loses while confined behind the bars and unable to ply his trade.

"The amounts gathered in by burglars in this country may average higher than the estimate for England, but it is safe to say that they are too small to justify the risk and dangers involved. Sooner or later, almost invariably, the criminal gets caught and finds that whatever success he may have had in gathering money in the past is worth nothing to him when he has to answer for his misdeeds.

"Sometimes, a burglar or hold-up man gets away with a large sum of money. These cases are the exceptions rather than the rule, though, and the occasions when they make large hauls are rare. And, in nearly every instance, the law sticks to it, and the criminal must pay his debt to society in dire misery and mental suffering—full measure many times over for all that he has taken by unlawful methods. And in all, crime never pays."

The Panama Canal has reduced freight rates between the Atlantic and the Pacific seaboards to such an extent that the great plains states with their long rail haul are at a decided disadvantage in the marketing of their products or in buying their supplies. The Farmer Labor association does not seek to equalize these differences by closing the Panama Canal but they advocate the construction of a new, wide canal to connect the great lakes with the Atlantic and the development of river transportation by inland waterways. Improvements and the construction and operation of extensive barge lines to provide cheaper freight transportation but they insist that to insure permanency and economic efficiency the ownership and operation must be retained in the hands of the government. They do not want any nominal control of the operation because they still remember the scandals and grafts connected with such control of the railroads during the war period.

They want the management of these projects put in the hands of men who are real friends of the project so that they may have a fair chance to grow and prosper and not be destroyed by selfishness applied by unfriendly individuals occupying managerial positions.

Sincerely yours,
W. H. Quist.

Rural Credits Appraiser Has Narrow Escape When He Runs Car Into Train

T. O. Haftdahl of Beltrami, appraiser for the Rural Credits Bureau, narrowly escaped death a week ago Wednesday morning, when he drove his car into a freight train on a crossing near Brooks. He was returning to Red Lake Falls from Crookston, where he had been working, and drove into a fog that enveloped the train. He noticed it in time to stop his car, and was thrown into sideways. The car was thrown into the ditch—a complete wreck. Mr. Haftdahl was stunned, but came to and was able to walk to Brooks, where he got a man to take him to the Ereling hospital where his wounds were dressed. He suffered severe injuries mainly in gashes about the face and head, but he was able to return to his work after a short stay at his home at Beltrami.

Some Farmers

have the mistaken idea that the competition of cream stations is beneficial to a co-operative creamery. They believe this competition tends to keep the market strong. They actually feel virtuous as they deliver their cream to the agent of the centralizer.

If you are one of these farmers

Snap Out of It

For you are doing yourself and your neighbor an irreparable injury.

If the local creamery were privately owned and privately operated there might be some reason to believe that competition would be beneficial to the farmer. Under such a condition the creamery would be operated entirely for profit and the less money paid to the producers for their product the greater would be the dividends to the creamery owner.

But the local creamery is a co-operative creamery, owned and operated by the farmers of this community for one purpose, and one purpose only—to pay the producer the highest possible prices for his product. The prices paid for this product are not governed by competition. They are determined largely by the efficiency of the creamery as a manufacturing and selling organization.

Your local creamery markets its products through Land O' Lakes, the most efficient butter selling organization in the world. To a large extent the efficiency of this department of the local creamery is not affected by Cream Station Competition.

It is as a manufacturing plant that your creamery suffers from this competition. The greater the volume of the product manufactured the less is the manufacturing cost for each pound. It therefore naturally follows that the greater the volume of the creamery the higher will be the price paid the producers for their product.

Every pound of butterfat produced in this community that is not sold to the local creamery tends to lower the price on that butterfat that is sold to the creamery.

If you are interested in getting the highest possible prices for your butterfat, Mr. Farmer, deliver every can of cream to your creamery. If you have the idea that you are making money by patronizing the cream stations you are not only "kidding" yourself but are doing your neighbor an injury.

IF YOU ARE NOT NOW ONE OF OUR PATRONS COME IN AND LET US EXPLAIN OUR PROPOSITION TO YOU. IF YOU WANT THE CASH WHEN YOU DELIVER THE CREAM WE CAN ACCOMMODATE YOU. WE WANT YOUR BUSINESS AND WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY. GIVE US A CHANCE AND WE'LL PROVE IT.

Hoover's Farm Relief Program

The most urgent economic problem in our nation today is in agriculture. It must be solved if we are to have a prosperous and contented people. We cannot be content with prosperity in any one industry or any one group while agriculture languishes. We cannot be content with agricultural discussions so wrong because of two false premises. The first is that agriculture is one industry. It is or dozen distinct industries incapable of the same organization. The second false premise is that farm rehabilitation will be completed when it has reached a point comparable with other industry. Agriculture was not upon a satisfactory basis before the war and the abandoned farms of the northeast bear their own testimony. Generally there has been but little profit in midwest agriculture for many years except that derived from the slow increases in farm land values. Even of more importance is the long continuing decline in standards of living of all occupations except the war. Some branches of agriculture have partially recovered, but taken as a whole it is not keeping pace with the onward march in other industries.

There are certain causes for failure of agriculture to rise to its full share of national prosperity. The after-war deflation of prices not only brought great distress to the farmer, but he was also left indebted in inflated dollars to be paid in dear-dollars. Prices are often demoralized when there is an excess during the harvest season. Local taxes have been increased to provide the improved roads and schools.

The tariff on some products is proving inadequate to protect him from imports from abroad. The increase in transportation rates since the war has greatly affected the price which he receives for his crops.

So. Over six million farmers in times of surplus share in destructive competition with one another the profits of their products, and frequently prices below those levels that could be maintained.

The whole economy of our industry during the last 50 years has been toward an increase in the size of the units of production in order to secure lower costs and a more orderly adjustment of the flow of commodities to the demand. But the organization of agriculture has long remained upon the old individual farms. The farmer has shown he can increase the efficiency of his industry without the loss of his individualistic business of small units and independent ownership. But there is more than a business. It is a state of living. We do not wish it converted into a mass production machine. The future of the farmer's position is to be improved by larger operations it must be done not by the farm but in the field of distribution. Agriculture is partially succeeded in this direction through co-operatives and pools. But the traditional co-operative is often not a complete solution.

Differences of opinion as to cause and remedy have retarded the completion of constructive programs of relief. It is now plain duty to search out the common ground on which we may mobilize the sound forces of agricultural recovery. There should be a solid basis upon which we can build. It offers an affirmative program:

1. An adequate tariff is the foundation of farm relief. Our consumers increase faster than our producers. The domestic market must be preserved.
2. Foreign products raised under lower standards of living in today competing in our home markets. I would use my office and influence to give the farmer the full benefit of our historic tariff policy.

A large portion of the spread between what the farmer receives for his products and what the ultimate consumer pays is due to increased transportation charges. Increases in railway rates have been one of the results of the war. These increases have been added to the cost to the farmer of reaching seaboard and other markets. Our railway rates are unjust and discriminatory. Nature has endowed us with a system of inland waterways. Their modernization will comprise a most substantial contribution to midwest farm relief and to the development of twenty of our interior states. This modernization includes not only the great Mississippi system with its joining of the Great Lakes and of the heart of midwest agriculture to the Gulf, but also a shipway from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic. These improvements would result in large tax harvest in farmers' prices as to warrant their construction many times over. There is no more vital method of farm relief.

But we must not stop here.

An outstanding proposal of the party program is the wholehearted pledge to undertake the reorganization of the marketing system upon sounder and more economical lines. We have already contributed materially to this purpose by the acts supporting farm cooperatives, and the establishment of intermediate credits through the regulation of stockyards, public exchanges, and the expansion of the department of agriculture, and the expansion of the department of agriculture. The platform proposes to go much further. It pledges the creation of a federal farm board of representative farmers to be clothed with authority and resources with which not only to aid farmers' co-operative and pools and to assist generally in solving farm problems, but especially to build up with loan of these problems, but especially to build up with loan of these problems, but especially to build up with federal finance, farmer-owned and farmer-controlled stabilization corporations which will protect the farmer from the depressions and demoralization of seasonal gluts and periodical surpluses.

Objection has been made that this program, as laid down by the party platform, may require aid to the federal government without obligation upon the individual farmer. With that objection I have myself no patience. A nation which is spending 90 billions a year can well afford an expenditure of a few hundred millions for a workable program that will give to seventh of its population their fair share of the national prosperity.

Nor does this proposal put the government into the field of competition. It is called upon to furnish initial capital with which to build up the farmer to the control of his own destinies.

The most difficult to the variable problem of agriculture not only today, but which will arise in the future. I am convinced that any single human agency or any group of human beings can determine in advance all questions that will arise in the vast and complicated an industry over a term of years. The first step is to create an effective agency directly for farmers only to deal with and give it authority and resources. These are solemn pledges and they will be fulfilled by the republican party. The definite plan of action, however, only the detailed elaboration of legislation and appropriations to put it into effect.

During my term as secretary of commerce I have steadily endeavored to build up a system of co-operation between the government and business. Under these co-operative actions all elements interested in the problem of a particular industry, such as construction, manufacture, distribution, and consumer, have been called into council together, not for a single occasion, but for continuous work. These efforts have been successful beyond any expectation. They have been accomplished without interference or regulation by the government. They have secured progress in the industries, remedy for abuses, elimination of waste, reduction of cost in production and distribution, lower prices to the consumer, and more stable employment and profit. While the problems with every different commodity and every different part of our great country, I should wish to apply the same method to agriculture so that the leaders of every phase of each group can advise and organize on policies and construction measures. I am convinced that this form of action, as it has done in other industries, can greatly benefit farmer, distributor and consumer.

The working out of agricultural relief constitutes the most important obligation of the next administration. I stand pledged to these proposals.

The object of our policies is to establish for our farmers an income equal to those of other occupations; for the farmer's wife the same comforts in her home as women in other groups; for the farm boys and girls the same opportunities in life as other boys and girls. So far as my own abilities may be of service, I dedicate them to help secure prosperity and contentment in that industry where I and my forefathers were born and nearly all my family still obtain their livelihood.

CHRYSLER

There have been cars without number which endeavored to look like cars of greater value. None that we know of save these new Chryslers—"65" and "75"—have actually raised themselves into a higher class without alteration of price.

What has happened in the case of the new "65" and "75" is something much more important than a fortunate choice of design and decoration.

The richer appearance, the greater size, the finer upholstery, the specially-designed hardware, the greater performance ability are all real increases in value without increase of price.

They are real and they have an economic base peculiar and possible only to Chrysler—the principle of Standardized Quality through which the benefits in scientific engineering and precision manufacturing of its costliest cars are given to its cars of lesser price.

Through this policy you are able to get in the new "75" and "65" more beauty and higher quality than in cars costing many hundreds—yes, even a thousand—dollars more. Chrysler saves in its basic manufacturing policy and spends lavishly in the engineering and the styling of its cars.

New Chrysler "75" Prices — Royal Sedan, $1395; 5-passenger Coupe (with rumble seat), $1375; Roadster (with rumble seat), $1375; Sedan, $1395; Town Sedan, $1465; New Chrysler "65" Prices — Business Coupe, $1045; Roadster (with rumble seat), $1095; Sedan, $1145; Coupe (with rumble seat), $1145. A Minnesota Dairy Farmer Abroad

U. S. Delegate to International Dairy Conference

A Farmer in London

The week's first event that I participated on October 1st for a newspaper, I have a copy of it before me now and like it is not one-half as newsy as the papers of the states there is one item that most appeals to all readers of our home station that should be long remembered and most instructive. The story deals with the activities of the Metropolitan Police force known as the Scotland Yards. The first line says: "Twelve months without an unsolved murder." London has a population of 8,000,000 people and is a heterogeneous conglomeration of all over the world. I think of Bill Shakes of Bill Thompson, mayor of Chicago! Then it goes on to say:

"Twenty-seven cases of murder of persons of over one year of age and thirteen persons under that age. All of the twenty-seven cases were solved. Twelve cases were charged and ten murders committed suicide, while one died in an asylum. One of the murders who committed suicide was responsible for three deaths."

Sunday morning I got up at six, and this is early for a man in London. No one, but the milk cattle and their "Bobbies" (police) about. I walked and took pictures of the many kinds of milk carts and wagons. Most of the milk in the congested districts is peddled from carts that are pushed about by the men. They are operated in the large dairies that distribute bulk milk, from a large can, bottled milk is pasteurized and certified milk that is bottled in the country. This milk is expected to push the cart about seven miles in the morning on a round trip and for this he gets the equivalent of fifteen dollars in our coin. An imperial is the unit of liquid measure and is the quart in the States and sells for 4d or eight cents. Prices are changed from time to time by the government and the other half for bads and breakers. The valet says that I should be sure to mention that Mr. Churchill gets most of the money. He is chancellor of the exchequer and his job is like Andy Mellon's.

I spoke of there being 7,500,000 people living in London. Well you will be interested in knowing what they all do. One-half of them are waiting upon the Americans and the other half are hoping that the first half will soon be thru so that they can get a chance.

About Piccadilly Circus—that's a central point in London—the hub of the principal business activities in a social way centers. It is very near Piccadilly hotel, our official headquarters. Here is where you can stand night or day and see the whole of fluttering London revolve. If you are an American you can take a seat anywhere and thus scream the streets on the outdoor vehicles all go the opposite direction to traffic in the States and that is very confusing to the visitor. We Americans are all paying for good service over here and we get what we pay for.

Some love us and some don't. But all are very courteous. This morning Mr. Potts of Washington, Mr. Michie of Oregon, Dr. Sherwood and I were eating down in the street in the market gardens known as "Convent Gardens" and as we passed a small covey of Juvenile John Bulls one of them was heard to remark: "Dem are Yanks." That was not so good and we did not stop to argue it out or to submit the matter to the American Consulate for in a few moments a change came over us. We dashed down a little alley to see more history—that's what they sell here besides beer, ale and wine—and as we were going down an old hall of ancient fame we came upon a sign at a glance the word from the leader: "Yanks." I turned about and asked him how he knew. He said: "You are superior." Then we were even. We all thanked him. He was evidently a veteran of the World War.

* * * *

Motor spirits here sell for 2/6 an Imperial gallon and it costs $122 license fee as a taxi to operate a Ford car. That's why at the market this morning we saw no Ford trucks or cars driven by the farmers. They all came in in horse carts and there were just as many varieties as there are people. I wish that our farmer could see these vehicles. But we saw a great flower show and rose from roses were one shilling per dozen.

HAND-BOOK MAILED ALL PROSPECTIVE MINN. U FRESHMEN

Lloyd Bennes Calls Meeting of Entering Students For Friday Night

A Maroon and Gold, 60 page Freshman Week Handbook containing state Mints, campus information, and other informational material calculated to adjust the new students has just been published by the Freshman Week Committee of the University of Minnesota. The Handbook will be sent to all those who will be Freshmen at the University of Minnesota this fall.

Leading articles in the Handbook include an introductory message by President Lotus D. Coffman; welcomes extended by Edward E. Nicholson, Dean of Student Affairs, and Anne Dudley Blitz, Dean of Women; an explanation of the purposes of Freshmen Week by J. H. Johnston, Dean of the College of the Science, Literature, and the Arts, and Greetings of Chairman of Freshmen Week Mints on the best methods of how to study by Professor Charles Bird of the Department of Psychology; an introduction to the University Library by F. K. Walter, University Librarian; Hints and Means of Solving Personal Problems by Donald G. Paterson, Professor of Psych logy; and statements of the Dean of the various colleges of the University.

The Handbook is published as one of the features of the annual University Freshmen Week which will be held from September 24th through 29th. During this time 5,000 new students will be welcomed to the University by a combined committee of faculty members and more than 250 students, the former represented by Professor Oscar Riedel of the Germanic Department, and the latter by Allen Mortensen, senior academic student and chairman of Freshman Week.

Lloyd Bennes is secretary of the Freshman Week committee for Thief River Falls and vicinity. He announces that there will be a meeting of all prospective University freshmen Friday evening, August 17, in the Commercial Club rooms at the auditorium at 7:30. Those who live outside of the city are especially urged to attend, he says, to become acquainted with others who will be sent to the University this year. This, the committee thinks, will help overcome the "lost" feeling that so often handicaps a freshman who finds himself submerged in a mass of ten thousand students, none of whom he or she knows. Ultimately, it is the aim of the Freshman Week committee to give the prospective students some idea of what to expect, and help them profit by the experiences of those who have gone before.

Towns On Great Northern Oppose Freight Truck Line From Crookston To Border

Business men of Kennedy and other points on the Great Northern between Warren and Emerson have petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission not to grant a permit for a freight truck line from Crookston to the Canadian border. They contend that such a line might force the railroads to abandon the local light freight traffic, and confine themselves to heavy item freight. In the winter, merchants along the line would be at the mercy of weather conditions and the freight truck line's ability to give uninterrupted service.

On the other hand, they also protested against the present policy of the railroads in shipping light freight in the Canadian border and then routing it back again, instead of unloading it on the way for delivery. Such unloading is one way of reducing the overhead, it is contended, and the consumer would not suffer in consequence as well as receive prompter delivery. Farmers also suffered something for immediate delivery.

Climax Bank Cashier And Assistant Die In Murder and Suicide

Melvin Jacobsen, cashier of the Farmers State Bank at Climax, and the latter's assistant cashier, met death dealt as result of a murder and suicide Monday evening. Jacobsen then shot himself, in the warehouse adjoining the bank, according to officers of the bank. Jacobsen's body was found by a neighbor and surrender to the coroner. Hauge succeeded Jacobsen as cashier by Hauge, and this is believed to be the cause of the controversy that led to the shooting.

FORECLOSED LANDS NET STATE PROFIT REPORT INDICATES

Present Rural Credits Bureau Doing Good Work, Governor Christianson Says

A profit has been realized on farms sold by the Minnesota Rural Credit Board after foreclosure, it informed Governor Christianson in a report he made public Saturday. The Governor said the report "indicates the present board is doing good work."

A total of 1,000 farms has been foreclosed out of 10,000 loans made by the board. Title has been obtained to 642 farms, a total of 125,000 acres, amounting to $3,656,747. Seventy have been sold, totaling 10,240 acres for an average of $37.32 an acre.

For six the state received exactly the amount invested; 70 were sold at a gain, and fourteen at a loss, a total gain of $1,041, of which $702 was net gain of $225.

The 1,000 loans made by the present board which the Governor appointed July 1, 1927, foreclosures have been made on 24 farms. The report says a check has revealed that in every case the security was ample and that all will be redeemed with no loss.

"In most of these cases," the report added, "we are led to believe that the borrower is letting us foreclose to take care of the second mortgage where it is held by a closed bank which has not pointed any one to take care of equity. We are sure two-state will have four or five more of these 24 farms.

"As the crops mature we think that collections will be very good this fall and most of the delinquent installments will be paid," the report continues "We are putting on extra help to see that this is done."

Foreclosures per 1,000 loans reveal fewer since the new board took charge, Governor Christianson said. It began work with loan No. 7,283. By thousands the loans and number of foreclosure for each follow.

Loans 1 to 1,000, 251 foreclosures; 1,000 to 2,000, 187; 2,000 to 3,000, 117; 3,000 to 4,000, 123; 4,000 to 5,000, 110; 5,000 to 6,000, 101; 6,000 to 7,000, 85; 7,000 to 8,000, 37; 8,000 to 9,000, 17; 9,000 to 10,000, two; 10,000 to 10,555, none.

"You will notice," the report concludes, "by the monthly settlements that our surplus is growing and we are sure it will take care of the closed farms. Small farms are now in demand but large ones are hard to move."

The report was presented by H. H. Flowers, secretary of the board. Gle Gullickson, assistant Attorney General, is the other member of the department.

Motorist Collides With Bull Moose on Highway

A. G. Opperud of Crookston, met with an exciting experience one night last week when his car collided with a big bull moose on the highway near Deer River.

The motorist did not see the moose until his car was almost upon him. Just as the car reached it the big fellow swung suarely across the highway. The driver was stumped for an instant, but thought probably he could run sideswipe-fashion the obstruction. Presumably the moose thought so, too. However, it didn't work.

The collision damaged the car somewhat and Mr. Moose went over the top. The animal dropped behind the car and lay quietly for a moment; then jumped up and away, disappearing in the swamp. Farmers' Independent.

LOCAL TEAM WILL ENTER CROOKSTON DIST. TOURNAMENT

Eight Teams Will Contest For Diamondball Cup Now Held By Crookston C. O. D.'s

A team was selected Tuesday night to represent Thief River Falls in the district Legion baseball tournament at Crookston, which opens Saturday, Aug. 25. The members of the team were chosen by a committee of seven business men, and will have the work of the 16 players in the local league games.

Teams will be entered from Ada, Crookston, Grand Forks, East Grand Forks, Red Lake Falls, Thief River, Moorhead and Thief River Falls, according to an announcement from the tournament headquarters. None of the towns will enter two teams. Crookston is the defender of the title won last year by the Crookston team, which defeated the local team here last Sunday in a hard-fought game.

Manager Ole Engelstad requests that all members of the team report for practice Wednesday night. There will be also to go to Crookston for the opening game.

The effective pitching of Mann was largely responsible for the sweep between the local All-Stars and Crookston Hanson Tires Sunday, when the locals won the series of 5 to 2. A batting rally in the first inning netted the visitors four runs. After that the locals settled down to steady, consistent, if only one more run during the remainder of the game. This was the 9th victory in 12 starts for Hanson Tires. They will be strong contenders for championship at the tournament.

BRANCH LIBRARY IS ESTABLISHED AT ST. HILAIRE

First Outside Unit of Local Library Will Open Friday Morning

WILL BE HOUSED IN SPECTATOR OFFICE

Others Will Be Opened In County As Soon As Arrangements Are Completed

The first of a series of branch libraries thruout the county will be opened Friday morning at St. Hilaire, according to arrangements completed by Mrs. Hazel Hodgdon, city librarian.

The books will be placed in the office of The St. Hilaire Spectator, and will be in the charge of Mrs. O. Gunstad. Definite library hours have not been announced, but it is believed that they will be from ten to twelve o'clock, three days a week.

Most of the books for this collection have been sent to the county division of the Department of Education. About fifty books were included in the first consignment, which will be augmented from time to time. They will be replaced at intervals by others.

The first same rules that govern the main library will apply to branches of the county system. Any resident may obtain a borrower's card after properly filling out an application card.

One or more additional branch will be opened as soon as arrangements can be made, Mrs. Hdgdon says. An appropriation of $250 was voted by the county board of commissioners this summer, to aid in the establishment of library branches thruout the county.

Legislator Will Be Guest Of Legion National Assembly At San Antonio Oct. 8-12

Colonel Charles A. Lindberg, world-famous trans-Atlantic flyer, has accepted an invitation to be a guest of the American Legion national convention at San Antonio, Texas, October 8 to 12, according to announcements from convention headquarters. He immediately wired Lindberg, who made an address at the convention.

Lindberg's appearance at the convention at the two air airports that are a part of the Legion's program, is considered one of the big features of the program as well as the biggest drawing card in several selections.

Mr. Ingalls introduced Second Warfield of Hawley as a fitting speaker for such an occasion, having ably represented the Norwegians in the community not only in local affairs but in the legislature.

"The best inheritance of the Norwegian people," said Mr. Warfield in his address, "is the heritage of Leif Erickson, whose heroism has been recognized by the statue given by Charles Lindbergh; of the early Norwegians who settled Normandy, and plundered Scotland of her treasure and her prettiest women; of the immigrants who suffered the hardships of the American frontier; and of South Africans, who ventured their life in the icy waters of the North in search of the Boer gold.

"Norwegians in this country have failed to recognize leadership within their own ranks. We have failed in that now they have only one real leader of national influence, Governor Olejohnsed. Having been trained for the fundamentals of democracy for centuries, he said, Norsemen in this country should play a larger part in public affairs. I would like to see women make larger use of their right to vote. Hanging was a common penalty for petty larceny in Norway. Automobile speed laws and Sinclair ran steal millions of dollars worth of government oil and land are unpunished.

"Norsemen have contributed much to the material as well as to the cultural inheritance of America, said Mr. Warfield. Among their many accomplishments he listed the invention of the self binder and the safety match, the Norwegian ski, the hickory shirt and the Stetson hat. Norwegian production possible in spite of high wages is due to their natural love for work, which had been abandoned somewhat by Americans and Germans; and the first use of structural steel in building sky-scrapers.

The Eighth Norsemen of tradition have become so peaceful, Mr. Warfield said, that a few years ago the war was in Congress, when he was engaged in appointment to the Military Academy at West Point, not a single one applied.

Club Work Paves Way For College Training

The 4-H Club of the Minnesota School of Agriculture at University Farm has a membership of more than 150 boys and girls. Past or present participation in club work is the requisite for membership, according to The Gopher 4-H Club is the name of a state organization in the Minnesota College of Agriculture.

It is true that club work not only furnishes the inspiration for going to college but has often actually provided the means of getting there. It works something like Aladdin's lamp, says T. A. Erickson, Minnesota state club leader. One gets the idea, and that is the principle means at hand. The state leader points to George Rees as a case in point. Rees, a club member, as a good example of those boys who are graduating from club work into advanced schools and colleges. She found a way to enter college by putting on canning demonstrations in schools she had before proficient during her seven years of canning experience. Her club demonstrations were so well liked that a number of canning glass jar company engaged her to demonstrate.

Scholarships offered to club boys and girls open another way of entering the university. The Ford Motor association of Olmsted county is providing two $100 scholarships, one for a boy and one for a girl having completed club records. Several other organizations are helping the boys to get a start in this way. Records of the ten high school graduates awarded Calob Dorr scholarships this year by the Minneapolis Journal. Agriculture had made outstanding records in club work.

There are times when thinking is not worth much unless you do it quickly.

You can't expect a man to be truthful all the time—he has to speak of himself once in a while.

Highway Laws Demand That Drivers Be Able To Stop in Clear Space Ahead

"What is the speed limit in Minnesota?"

That is a common question, especially at this time of the year when tourists from other states are most numerous and when many of the home folks are taking their annual vacation trips.

To give a complete answer and quote the sections of the law giving the "reasonable" speeds at various places would take a half column in this paper, and when you got all through you have to explain that these are not maximum speeds, but simply that going at higher speeds in prima facie evidence that you have been driving at a greater speed than is reasonable and proper.

The most confusion is in much simpler to remember this rule:

Drive slow enough so you can stop in the clear space ahead.

If you stick to that rule you will be safe from arrest, except in a very few communities where they make signs that going at higher speeds is safe. For several years there has been speeding on the Great Northern right of way, as soon as the fair grounds was constructed after the first week.

They will be kept on the Myrnam farm, three and a half miles north of Gerwick.

Nearly seven hundred of the 1314 boosters have paid their dollar each on Pennington county farms. Many other applications are pending, that have not yet been fully approved by the Credit Corporation.

Dorothy Lane Visits Historic Spots At Nation's Capitol

Mr. and Mrs. I. G. Lane of this city have received a very interesting letter from their daughter, Dorothy, who has been spending a part of her vacation in Washington, D. C., as the guest of Dorothy's friends here, and of our many readers who have had the privilege of visiting the nation's capital. The Times has secured permission from her parents to publish the letter in full. Miss Lane will return to Cleero, Illinois, this fall, where she is an instructor in social science.

Friday, Aug. 10

Dear Ma, Pa and the kids:

For a wonder we got up in time to see the sunrise and I am going to write a letter before the gang arrives.

Last night was our second nite in Washington. We have a wonderful room, twin beds, private bath and lots of room. I think I will be spoiled by the time I get back to our little apartment in Cleero.

This trip certainly has been a wonderful experience. Wish you were all with me. I was somewhat disappointed in the mountains. Guess my imagination was too strong; I expected too much. The Allegheny and Blue Ridge Mountains are pretty tho. Covered with timber, they make a very pleasing sight but not especially awe-inspiring.

I wish I could remember all of the history I've heard at Gettysburg and Valley Forge. The guide who took us thru the Battlefields of Gettysburg was a young boy at the time of the battle and was hidden, with his family in the cellar of their home there in Gettysburg. He was full of his story. I had to reorganize my ideas of distance. Somehow I had difficulty realizing the movements of the different armies across those hills.

And I've had an aeroplane ride! It wasn't a bit thrilling. Guess the pilot was afraid he would frighten us. We flew over the Battlefield at Gettysburg. It was very interesting to sit there and look down on the town and countryside and try to pick out the different places we had seen.

Washington is a wonderful place to live. I don't blame anyone for liking to work here. The streets are so wide and everything is so clean. We had a sight-seeing bus yesterday A. M. We were driven thru the city, taken thru the Pan American Union Building, a building commemorating the good will between North and South America, a beautiful building given over almost entirely to offices, except a large ballroom where, by the way, the Prince of Wales was interviewed when visiting here. From there we were taken to the Bureau of Engraving and saw them printing bills in one, five, ten and twenty dollar denominations, also saw the plate making stamps, and I decided I wasn't going to lick any more stamps if I could help it. They kept us up on a platform above the workers so we were out of luck for souvenirs.

Next came the White House. We were taken thru the halls, saw the East Room, Blue, Red and Green Rooms and the dishes left by the Presidents. They were redecorating there so most of it was closed.

The Museum was one of the most interesting sights I've seen except the Library. That includes the Smithsonian Institute, the American Museum, and the National museum. We were taken into the American Museum early and had only 35 minutes there. Saw "The Spirit of St. Louis", the original "Star Spangled Banner", Thomas Penn by the President's wives and many other things too numerous to mention.

Another dash thru the rain brought us to the Capitol building. Here we had a guide who could tell us more in one breath than I could remember. He surely had his speeches down pat.

We walked and walked thru rooms and halls there but there was such a crowd and everything was so strange I couldn't keep it all straight. Enough to say that it is a very beautiful building mostly of marble from Vermont, Tennessee and Georgia, with many wonderful paintings, statues etc. to fit. I saw where Senator Shipstead and the other Minnesota senator sits, when Congress is in session.

In the afternoon our bus took us to Mt. Vernon. We stopped at Alexandria, Va., and were taken to the Masonic Lodge Room there. Wish Gene could have heard that lecture. It was there that the first Masonic Lodge was organized with George Washington as the first Grand Worshipfull Master. The chair used by Washington is still there, however, it is not used except once a year when a new master is installed. This last year the great, great grand nephew of George Washington was installed as Grand Master of the lodge which still meets in the same hall; uses the same charter, furniture and all.

A short distance from Alexandria is Mount Vernon. I wish every child in the U. S. could see that. It was beautiful and there was an air about it that made you feel that you were on sacred ground all the time. Some of the girls in our crowd started singing just after we returned to the bus and I felt that they were actually sacrilegious. We had an hour there but it took the entire time to go over it all. We saw everything except Washington's library, that was closed somehow. There was an awful crowd there which made it hard to get around. Much of the furniture used by Washington is still there and the whole estate is being kept up as nearly like the original as possible. It was raining most of the time we were there so we didn't get to take any pictures. I bought a folder thru so I can show you more plainly what it is all like when I see you.

On our way back we stopped at Christ's Church where Washington went to church. Also saw the first Presbyterian church ever built in America, a small red brick building in Alexandria, Va. I said small, but I imagine it is as big as the church at home.

We returned to our hotel in time for dinner and after satisfying our hunger (?) of us took two taxies out to the Congressional Library. That is without fail, the most beautiful building I ever saw. All marble, Mosaic floors, beautiful painted walls, statues, arches, and enough lights to dazzle anyone's eyes. I was very much disappointed, because I couldn't enter the reading room. Visitors are not allowed there, but we could go out into a visitor's gallery on the second floor and look down upon the library room, a great circular room with perhaps jewel of desks circling around a center round desk, and with thousands of books on shelves in all corner off from the room. I rarely did want to get my hands into some of them. The rest of the building is given over to the exhibition of paintings and prints, and relics. We saw the original Declaration of Independence. It was kept in a glass case, slightly tarnished with a guard standing over it constantly. The paper is very large, I would say 2 ft. long and 6 or 8 ft. wide, very yellow with age. We also saw a copy of the constitution of the U. S. An original copy of Lincoln's Gettysburg speech and the original manuscript of several well-known poems and stories, for instance, "The Star Spangled Banner," "Aude Lyne Syne" and many others. I could hardly tear myself away from some of the things. North America made when the country was first discovered and the sea was supposed to be full of sea serpents, at least I judged they believed as much from the hideous pictures they drew in the spaces surrounding the land portions. After things most and and so did that trip. The Library of Congress closes at ten o'clock so we had to leave then.

I started this composition in A. M. and will wind up for the game to assemble for our Arlington trip. Didn't get to bed last night until after 2 A. M. writing.

With Ggy could have been with us this morning. I sent him a folder showing a view of the Cemetery. Hope he gets it all right.

It was still sprinkling a little this morning but we took the letters and I took a picture of the Memorial Amphitheatre and of the Unknown Soldier's grave. I hope they are good. It is all very impressive. Can't prove thru Fort Meyer, which is really a part of Arlington and where a detachment or whatever you call em of U. S. Cavalry is stationed. Didn't see any horses, however.

We didn't have a tour on for this afternoon. We left we had spent all the money we could afford already. Also I did want to go out to the Lincoln Memorial.

I forgot to tell you that as we went out to Arlington this morning the guide showed us where many prominent houses are. Many of the foreign embassies, Wilson's home, Secretary Mary Roberts Rhinehart's, many senators' (Senator Allen and Capper) and others, Taft's. Many of them are regular mansions and very imposing.

We returned from the Arlington trip at noon and Clara and I spent the afternoon window shopping in the downtown business district. I got a picture for you Mamie. It didn't see anything that would make as good a souvenir from Washington. I did get a picture of Washington's Monument and the famous cherry trees which were sent from Japan, which are planted along the Potomac river.

The scenery said they would send it out for me. Hope it reaches you alright. I have some small souvenirs for Donald and Margery. Thought I would not get them much from here but try to find something cheaper in New York and the gang. I haven't a bet or any idea so they will have to wait for theirs.

We came back to the hotel about 5 P. M. and decided it was best to stay in hotel as I was spending the evening writing this. Guess Clara and Flora is doing a little bit of everything and not much of anything. Tomorrow morning at 9 we leave for Philadelphia arriving there at 4 P. M.

I think you will agree with me when I say that this trip is very much worth while after reading this letter, won't you?

My next exhibition of penmanship will be from the Ancient city of the Quakers, The City of Brotherly Love" Philadelphia, Pa.

Love from,
Dorothy

How Experts Pack China

To pack china with the minimum risk of breakage you must be prepared to spend a little time on the job. See that your packing case is well lined with a good layer of straw. Then sprinkle the straw with water before putting in each article, filled and wrapped in soft paper and wound round with straw. Put a good layer of well-sprinkled straw between each layer of glass or china. The idea of the water is perfectly sound sense. It makes the straw expand so that each article is firmly wedged in place. For much-treasured bits of china or glassware you might, with advantage, provide small cardboard or wooden boxes, into which they should be tightly packed before being embedded in water-sprinkled straw.

Permanent Recovery From Tuberculosis Is Aim Of Public Health Department

To help make recoveries from tuberculosis permanent, is the aim of a new employment and reconditioning service for ex-sanatorium patients started by the Minnesota Public Health Association, according to Dr. E. A. Meyerding, Executive Secretary. H. H. Bosell, for the past three years vocational employment director for the Hennepin County Tuberculosis Association, 2324 Lagoelle, and formerly in the medical department of the U. S. Veteran's Bureau is in charge of the new department. Christmas Seal funds will finance the work.

With the co-operation of sanatorium directors and local committees to be organized throughout the state, Mr. Bosell will survey and assist discharged sanatorium patients in finding suitable employment, and will arrange for supervision to prevent breakdowns. The work was endorsed by the American Legion in a resolution passed at its recent state meeting in Austin.

Relapses of patients who have successfully made a recovery from tuberculosis occur repeatedly after their return to the working world, according to Dr. E. A. Meyerding, executive secretary, and the purpose of this new department is to safeguard the health of such persons.

"After-care of the sanatorium patient is now being recognized as essential if we are to keep permanent recoveries made at the institutions," Dr. Meyerding said. "This has been the missing link in our anti-tuberculosis work in Minnesota, and we believe it a good investment to use Christmas Seal funds to demonstrate its value."

CAMP COOKING FOR TOURISTS

by Miss Aubyn Chinn

Vacations are becoming more frequent for the women in the family nowadays, with the many little camp kits that can be strapped on the running board of the auto. Many of these are so simple that a handy husband with a little ingenuity and a few tools may make them.

Along with simplicity of equipment must come simplicity of cooking if the camping trip is going to be enjoyable for all the members of the family. Camping out, as a rule, makes one's digestive processes so active that there must be plenty of well-prepared, nourishing food.

Fruits and vegetables are easily procured in the summer and form a very satisfactory part of the camp-fire diet. Fresh fruit eaten raw supplies minerals and vitamins. Corn on the cob dressed with plenty of butter forms a nutritious and delicious part of a meal and is easily prepared, as are buttered or creamed vegetables.

The following menu is one which can be altered to suit conditions and which is appetizing and nutritious:

The chowder is made by boiling together peas, beans, carrots, onions and potatoes until all are tender, and adding a cream stack flavored with butter. The toasted cheese sandwiches are made by placing cut cheese over the fire.

Cream Vegetable Chowder

2-3 cup finely chopped pork or bacon
1 medium cream onion chopped, or 1 tbsp. chopped parsley
½ cup diced carrots
1 medium diced onion
1½ cup diced potato
1 cup diced turnips
Cook vegetables and pork until tender in just enough water to cover. Add this mixture of vegetables and water, to 4 cups thin cream sauce—4 cups milk, 4 tbsp. butter, 4 tbsp. flour, to taste and serve hot. Vegetable may be browned with bacon or pork in a frying pan before boiling—this gives a different flavor.

Toasted Cheese Sandwiches

Mix one cup of yellow American cheese, grated, with 2 tbsp. butter. Add salt and pepper, spread on slices of buttered bread, put together, pressed and toast.

Keep cool and well

Heat bothers people who are not in best health. Keep your body strong and your mind clear and active these days by eating light, easily digested foods with plenty of roughage. Shredded Wheat has all the bran you need. Its toasted shreds of whole wheat are easily digested because they compel chewing—and are so good that you want to chew them anyway!

Serve Shredded Wheat with milk and peaches or berries. Everyone will like it—and it's good for them.

The Cast-Aluminum Tub

THE Maytag was the original gyrofoam washer, which makes water do the washing. But the Maytag does more than that—it keeps the water hot to expand the meshes of the clothes, loosen the dirt and aid the cleaning action of the soap and it keeps the soap thoroughly mixed with the water where it will do the most good.

These are some of the reasons why the Maytag washes faster—an entire washing in an hour or so; washes cleaner—collars, cuffs and grimy overalls without hand-rubbing; washes delicate garments hand carefully.

Wringing the clothes is easy with the marvelous New Maytag Soft-Roller Water Remover—another exclusive Maytag advantage. It is practically automatic in every operation.

Children's Feet Require Careful Attention, Says Medical Ass'n Bulletin

A foot pinched in youth will result in a hobbling person in later life.

"This trouble can be easily averted by a little attention to the feet of children," declares the health committee bulletin of the State Medical Association issued today. A recent survey of 2325 children in one public school showed that 69 walked improperly; 154 wore faulty shoes (mostly too short); 47 had weak feet and ankles; 12 had flat feet; 130 wore stockings too short and 171 showed no care of the nails.

"Most of the deviations from the normal were of a nature which could be corrected by such things as they could have been corrected if discovered early, and proper treatment given. When neglected such defects tend to cripple and to impair permanently the health and efficiency of those affected. It is a fallacy that over two-thirds of all children entering school have acquired physical defects (50 per cent showing foot defects) it is apparent that health agencies should carry their campaign of health education to parents at the very beginning of parenthood.

"Foot hygiene should include the daily foot bath, frequently changing and slightly airing of stockings. Stockings should always be half an inch longer than the foot. Shoes should be carefully fitted, should conform in normal foot lines, and should be sufficiently long and broad to permit toe spread and forward foot drive. Be sure that the soles are pliable and the inside lines straight. For the first shoe the soft moccasin should always be selected and the soles should be flexible and without heels usually up to the eighth year. Very careful attention should be given to the nails. They should be cut straight across from with the fleshy part of the toe, never in at the corners as this predisposes to infection and ingrowing nails. They also should be smoothed with a file after cutting. A foot brush is as necessary in a hand brush and should be used especially on the nails and soles of the feet. Foot exercises in infancy and in older children are important factors in preserving the normal shape and condition of the feet.

"Attention to these suggestions early in life will mean in the majority of cases, normal feet. Otherwise it may result in faulty mechanism of the entire body. Yet examination of school children and the teaching of proper feet use should be especially emphasized in connection with the physical training activities in our public schools."

SMITH PRESENTS HIS PROGRAM

We are presenting elsewhere in this issue the farm program of Al Smith, Democratic candidate for president, as he delivered it in his acceptance speech last night. In last week's issue Hoover's program was published. Study the two programs carefully and then support the candidate you think will do the most toward advancing the best interests of the Northwest.

In a couple of weeks we are going to run a presidential poll, giving Times readers an opportunity to express their opinions through a newspaper election. The ballots will be published in one issue only so be prepared to clip yours from the copy that goes to your home. The Times reaches practically every home in the community and the result of the poll should indicate fairly accurately the sentiment of the community.

LOWER POWER RATES ASKED

A group of power users of the city have requested the council to reduce the power rates. There may be some justification for this request and it no doubt will be given fair consideration. It is possible that the present rate schedule needs a few revisions. It would be our impression, however, that no changes should be made that would tend to decrease the net earnings of the light department. As a result of the permanent improvements made to the power plant during the past year the city has increased its indebtedness a great deal. No rate decrease that would result in a decrease in the revenue of the department should be permitted until the financial condition of the city has been greatly improved. Rate decreases that tend to bring new business, such as a low cooking rate for homes, are justified because they do not decrease the revenue to the city but rather increase it.

CHILDREN DRIVING AUTOMOBILES

A large number of newspapers of the state are raising their voices against the increasing number of children driving automobiles, including Thief River Falls is not the only city in the state in which this law is quite generally violated. The law provides that no person under sixteen years of age shall drive an automobile unless accompanied by an adult.

This is a proper law and should be enforced. An automobile is a dangerous thing even in the hands of a mature and competent driver. It is much more so in the hands of immature drivers. It is perhaps true that there are individuals under the age limit who are better qualified to drive a car than many of those who are mature in years only but a line must be drawn and this line, where it is drawn, should be fixed at sixteen. Considering the present tendency toward speedier and more powerful automobiles the tendency of manufacturers in driving cars must be for more, not more rigid requirements rather than a lowering of the present standards.

THE DAIRY FARMER ABROAD

The large number of favorable comments we have received on the series of articles we are running under the heading, "A Minnesota Dairy Farmer Abroad", indicates that they are being followed quite generally by our readers. And they are surely very interesting. Written by W. F. Schilling, famous farmer of the Northfield community, who is a delegate to the International Dairy Conference in London, they contain many practical information on farming. Mr. Schilling, better known as Tergiversous Tim, is curious concerning many things besides dairying however, and his letters contain a brilliant assortment of opinions on every conceivable subject from prohibition to table manners. There are quite a few of these articles yet to come. Mr. Schilling planning to tour Europe as soon as his business in London is completed. Read this week's installment and then make the rest of the journey with him through to Scandinavian and Central European countries. You will enjoy the trip immensely, guaranteed.

THE SHEEP INDUSTRY AND DOGS

P. S. Peterson, a banker of Becker county who has been active in recent years in interesting farmers of his county in sheep, made a statement published in a recent issue of the Detroit Record, that has proper application in this county. His opinion that communities that hope to make progress in the sheep industry should take steps to eliminate the killer type of dogs and replace them with such breeds as will be useful to the protection of livestock, is worthy of some serious consideration in this community. His statement follows:

"The Northwest is going into the sheep industry on a large and practical scale, and before long it will become one of its chief industries.

"Its climatic conditions well adapted for this industry and in my opinion should have one hundred-thousand sheep distributed over the acres new under cultivation, and on those idled areas where the noxious weeds have become such a menace.

"Sheep will pay for themselves from the fertilizer which they leave on the soil, and the foul weeds they destroy, to say—nothing of the wool and lamp crop which brings the pay-day each year!

"The dog menace will no doubt become a nuisance here as it has in other places; especially if the laws do not protect this industry from a lot of useless dogs such are found roaming in the towns and villages than in the country. In such cases the law must be strengthened in order to afford the protection so imperative for these helpless creatures.

"A police dog is part wolf and one of the most dangerous of all the breeds with which I am familiar. At Nekoma, N. Dak., a very quiet and quiet police dog belonging to a man in the village left home one night last summer. He went into a pasture on an adjoining farm belonging to one Alex Stewart and killed twelve sheep. Suit was brought against the owner of the dog and he was forced to pay a sum in excess of three hundred dollars as damages and also kill the dog.

"Only a year ago one police dog and two Airdale dogs from the city of Detroit Lakes killed seven sheep and a number of turkeys on the farm of Mr Bergquist, near this city.

"This menace to a prosperity and profitable industry such as sheep are now recognized as being, must be eliminated. It is the old case better in the beginning than after a lot of damage has been caused.

"If you like to have a dog there are so many varieties from which to make a selection and in this manner the danger of acquiring a "killer" can be obviated. Get a collie. Their instinct is to protect rather than kill either sheep or other livestock and poultry.

"Then, too, as the sheep industry grows, there will be a definite demand on the market for well-bred collie dogs, as in place of a police dog, an Airdale or mongrel, they not get a shepherd or collie dog. They are good, fast sled dogs, kind to children, reliable watch dogs, a protection to livestock and farm poultry."

These college professors can tell you exactly what some fool star a couple of hundred million miles away is going to do at a quarter past five o'clock forty-six years from now and be about three-fourths right nine-tenths of the time. But there aren't any of them that seem to be able to tell you whether or not it is going to rain in Thief River Falls next week.

THE WISDOM OF YOUTH

(A June Editorial by Richard S. Bond)

The youth of seventeen knows far more than his father of thirty-seven. He admits it; he boasts of it; his friends assure him of it. Dad is an old fogey. His views are ancient. Those of the lad's teens leap at such ideas.

And dad scratches his head in wonder and amaze. He thinks back to the day when he too was seventeen and remembers that he then knew more than any of the old folks. Since then he has continued to study; he has gained in stature; he has continued to earn more money; he has succeeded. It seems strange that these things could come to one who is losing his balance—and yet the boy assures him that this is the case.

Of course, the boy is not making much money. He has not proved that he is a success and his years. Others have not noted his brilliancy. Yet he knows it is there—and that is all that counts. Great is the ego of the late teens—and we who have had it in the past should extend it rather than resent it, when it appears in our offspring. It is not a permanent disease.

ISSUES SHOULD DETERMINE (Duluth Herald Editorial)

It is going to be hard for the average voter to maintain his sanity and good sense during the coming months while the national campaign is at its height, so extreme will be the respective partisan appeals and so contradictory will be the viewpoints as to Herbert Hoover and Alfred E. Smith.

The honest person will have to admit, however, that each applies in his way the American ideal of equal opportunity. Each has worked his way up from comparative poverty to the creative largely of his own determination and effort. One made his way into engineering circles with and elected international organizations, and has headed an important federal department of the government. The other received his education almost entirely in the university of experience. He has climbed from a newsboy to the governorship of the most populous state and for four terms has filled that position.

Yet both of these candidates during the coming campaign will be subjected to a barrage of propaganda. Supporters will "praise to the skies" all that virtue, character and ability, and will weave romantic and appealing stories of boyhood days and of their climb to success. On the other hand the opposition will, no doubt, tell of alleged faults and failures, of mistakes and bad elections. Somewhere between the two viewpoints will be the truth, and it is only fair to say that neither is quite as good, nor quite as bad, as he will be painted.

It is bad, as we see it, for the country that the people have seen quite clearly when it came to a final showdown in the election of a President. There have not been so many great men in the White House, as history weighs greatness, but there has been a preponderance of good men. The honest men there, the record means anything, supported by the fact that the best nominees available are worthy and patriotic men, then no citizen need worry about the result. This being true, let the choice be made on the issues and the implications of the respective candidacies.

TRIBUTE TO COUNTRY PRESS (Arthur Brisbane)

The smaller newspapers of the country are the most important because, and especially in proportion to their circulation, their advertising results are the biggest, and their advertising rates are the smallest in the country. They are read through from end to end. Every copy of circulation means an entire family, and family that lives in one room with a can opener, but a family that owns its own house, and lived on credit for three years, pays out of a hundred a family that buys everything from the roof on the house, to the cement on the cellar floor; from the hat on one's head to the shoes on the boy's feet. The wants that their publishers render to the public is, to my opinion, the most important service rendered to any class of citizens in the United States for country editors are distributors of information; they teach the youngest of the boys that leave the farms, and they are the nation's mental police force.

WHAT THE NORTHWEST HAD TO FEAR

A discovery has been made regarding the weeds in the vicinity of the Canadian border that in the past have been inclined to regard these beds of weeds as merely nuisances, but the latest experiments show them to be menaces.

Growers of such produce as tomatoes, cucumbers, melons and tobacco have been greatly troubled by a mysterious blight, a disease that runs through the crops doing the fruit unsalable and ill-favored. Finally Ralph Kemp, a Tipton, Indiana, planter, became suspicious of all weeds growing in the vicinity and began the experiment of destroying them all, root and branch. He reports now to the Farm Journal that, by destroying all weeds within a hundred feet of his tomato beds, he can control the disease completely. These weeds, he finds, particularly bull nettle and wild ground-cherry, harbor a virus in their roots during the winter, releasing it to carry destruction to neighboring crops in the spring.

He finds that this virus is carried principally by the bite of the sorrel plant flea-beetles, which, much as malaria and yellow fever are carried and spread by mosquitoes.

The destruction of the insect carriers is found to be difficult, if not impossible, but it is easy to destroy the weeds that harbor the disease during the winter. Then the insects find nothing to carry.—

The studies of Mr. Kemp have clearly showed that most of the trouble begins in the plant beds where the young tomatoes are raised from the seed and before they are transplanted from the beds to the field. So by exterminating the weeds before the tomato sprouts appear above ground and feels that he saves the crop from early contamination.

What other noxious weeds in their vicinity may do to crops, is something yet to be established. We know already that the barberry carries the rust spores that later infect the wheat. All weeds will now be under suspicion, until they are proved innocent.

The whole situation has a suggestive line of thought for the world of morals and conduct. The weeds in the community, the saloon, the brothels, the gambling places, the scandal sheets, the immoral pictures and theatres, are the attitude of the youth do not frequent them, yet have a way of scattering their corruptive disease among the growing crops of youth. They are more powerful in fact, even where they are best controlled.

The Tipton farmer has the right idea. Destroy all the weeds in the vicinity, if you are to expect uninfected crops.

And we may be sure also, that the best way to obtain uninfected human crops is to destroy the weeds of our civilization. They are have already begun to do. The saloon is outlawed and driven into the holes and fence corners, and much advance has also been made in getting rid of the other plagues mentioned.

Why not help sustain this policy instead of hindering it by law violation?

Going to the Dogs

Once upon a time old "Satan" was going to and fro in the earth and was walking up and down in it. Thus the good Book records.

If co-operative creameries then had been in vogue he no doubt would have taught his obedient children a little song called "Going to the Dogs."

They even condemn the board and buttermaker too. Then all together shout and sing "The creamery is going to the Dogs." For months and years without a fail our checks we did receive but still they sing their little song "The creamery is going to the Dogs".

In a few fleeting years the debt was-half has been reduced, but what of that less they forget that little song, "The creamery is going to the Dogs."

Our creditors tell us with a smile Our funds are safe and every mile; though we too oft have heard that same little song "The creamery is going to the Dogs."

Four more than two score years those long round charts in summer's heat and winter's blast have worked to beat and beat.

THE NATIONAL ORIGINS PROVISION

Mr. Hoover, in his acceptance speech, declared against the national origins provision in our immigration laws. In this he differs from Governor Al Smith will make a like declaration. Neither the Republican platform nor the Democratic platform made any mention of the national origins provision, but both declare in favor of revising the law in such a manner that family relationship will be considered. Hoover's declaration makes the national origin provision in the immigration law an issue in this campaign.

Minnesota is interested in this issue because, if the national origins scheme finally becomes law, there will be practiced discrimination against immigration from the Scandinavian countries, Germany, Ireland, France, Switzerland, Poland and other countries that have contributed greatly to her upbuilding.

When the immigration law was being written, in 1927, several members of the House protested against the inclusion of the national origins plan, while very little was said about it in the Senate.

Hon. Knud Wefald, who then represented the Ninth district in Congress, called attention to how the national origins provision would, most unjustly, affect the immigration from Germany, Sweden, Denmark and Norway as well as from Ireland. When the immigration bill finally passed on May 15 he also spoke against it and voted against it.

The magazine "The Progressive", the organ of the Non-Partisan society, which has a national circulation, that has waged decreasing warfare against this unjust provision and has in the fight for its repeal, says of Wefald, in its issue for July 1928: "His speech is the only one which clearly shows the effect and purpose of the national origins provision, and the real spread of racial and Scandinavian elements of race prejudice were informed and called to action. If Mr. Wefald had made another speech the people must greatly affected by the very likely would not have heard of what the bill contained until too late. As an editorial origins scheme was set to be put in force until July 1, 1927."

The Progressive says further: "During 1924 and 1926 German and Scandinavian religious and racial organizations in the United States took definite action in opposition to the national origin scheme, so that its intent and purpose are pretty well known—all of which is due to Mr. Wefald's timely opposition."

The injustice of the national origins proposition is shown in the fact that it will reduce immigration from Norway, Sweden and Denmark by more than 12,000, from Ireland by 11,000 and from Germany by nearly 29,000, while at the same time it will increase immigration from Great Britain by 22,000, from Italy by 5,700 and from Russia by 2,500 approximately. The worst of it was that the thought behind this proposal was based that some of these were superior while others were inferior.

The national origins scheme was proposed in the House on April 11 and 12 and decidedly injured by the Johnson immigration bill, without which it never passed the House on April 12.

The scheme was proposed in the Senate by Senator Reed of Pennsylvania and agreed to on April 14; the Senate immigration bill containing this provision—passed the Senate by a yea and nay vote on April 16.

The House and Senate bills not being identical, the matter was referred to a conference committee composed of a few members from each house. This conference committee rewrote the bill, agreeing to include the national origins provision in the new bill. The bill that this committee wrote was also in many other particulars a changed bill from the one that had passed the House on April 12.

On May 15 the conference report—the new bill—containing the national origins provision in the House. Hoover against it; Mr. Kvale and Mr. Anderson were the only ones in the entire Minnesota delegation voted for the bill. The same day the bill was finally agreed to in the Senate, Senator Shipstead voting against it.

In 1926 Wefald, Kvale and Shipstead introduced bills in Congress to repeal the national origins provision from the immigration law. The immigration committee of the House refused to report a resolution for repeal, but the Senate committee would only agree to an extention of time for it to take effect, of one year, or until July 1, 1929; therefore the House, on March 3, 1927 acceded to the wishes of the Senate.

During the debate in the House on March 3, 1927, Congressman Carl Chindblom, of Illinois, stated that the immigration bill was voted on in 1924 the national origins provision was agreed to only because the minds of the members of the House were greatly agitated over the question of Japanese exclusion, and that Congress had to act in a hurry to get rid of an immigration law passed before adjournment.

In his speech Mr. Chindblom called attention to the fact that Mr. Wefald was the only Member of The House, on the day the immigration bill was finally passed, discussed the national origins provision.

During the last session of Congress several bills were introduced demanding repeal of the provision. A flat was made by Senator Shipstead in which he made a strong appeal for action. Congressman Kvale kept watch in the House. Again the time for the opening into effect was postponed for another year, or until July 1, 1929.

Farmers' Union Herald says that Congress have played the leading parts, in each body of Congress, against this unjust provision. Wefald sounded the first and strongest protest against it, Shipstead in the law, and Shipstead fired the last gun against it.

President Coolidge has refused to recommend its repeal, it is therefore gratifying to feel reasonably certain, that Congress will not repeal the law this year—whether it be Hoover or Smith—the next president will recommend a repeal and take interest in the matter.

This shows that a protest speech—called up by a protest vote—from one Congressman may bring results sooner than those realize who take their licking lying down, and that a real and courageous fight by a minority though temporarily overruled will awaken public sentiment and ultimately become a victorious majority. Vote for Shipstead and Wefald, they deserve your confidence and support.

NOT SCENERY

Arizona is setting the 47 other states of the United States a good example. The Arizona highway commission has ordered all billboards removed from the right-of-way of the main highways. They had to come down by August 1. If not removed by that time employees of the commission destroyed them.

One billboard is enough to destroy the scenic beauty of a landscape. It is like a gnat in the eye—painful and blinding.—Toledo Blade.

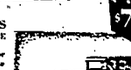
The 2 GREATEST SEDAN VALUES



WORLD'S LOWEST PRICED SEDANS
NOTABLE FOR QUALITY AND PERFORMANCE

IN definite dollar-for-dollar value there are no 4-door enclosed cars on the market comparable to the Whippet Six Sedan and Whippet Six Sedan.

This is true not only because these smart Sedans are the lowest priced in the world, but because they represent the most advanced ideas in automotive engineering, both mechanically and artistically.

The perfected Whippet Four offers such desirable features as full force-feed lubrication, silent timing chain, extra big room and powerful 4-wheel brakes. The new Whippet Six, in addition, provides a 7-bearing crankshaft, invar-strut pistons and other advantages.

Such notable values are possible only because of the skill and experience gained in the production of more than 2,000,000 motor cars.

HOSTS of the Newest Wonders of the Air, never seen before in the Northwest, will feature the gigantic program of the Minnesota State Fair & Northwest Livestock Show, Twin Cities, Sept. 1 to 8.

A mammoth U. S. Observation Balloon, 94 ft. long and 49 ft. in diameter will be flown over the fair each day. It is of the type used by the U. S. Army, and has a basket capable of carrying six persons.

A driverless automobile, guided by radio control from an aeroplane 1,500 feet overhead, will circle the race track daily. This astounding feat by radio is only one of many such attractions being featured by the Fair.

All of the latest models of aeroplanes, 15 circus acts headed by Charles Hannefogd, four days of auto races, four days of harness races, and the world-famous Creatore's band, are other features.

The fireworks spectacle will be "A Night in Bagdad," the greatest spectacle ever built. Never has such a night program been planned.

Smith's Farm Relief Program

Publicity agents of the Republican administration have written so many articles on our general prosperity, that they have succeeded in convincing many that having a proper appreciation of the degree of distress existing today among farmers and stockraisers. From 1910 to the present time the farm debt has increased from $6,000,000,000 to $14,000,000,000, or from $600,000,000 to $14,000,000,000. The value of farm products between 1920 and 1925 decreased by $20,000,000,000. This depression made itself felt in an enormous increase of bank failures in the agricultural districts. In 1927 there were 630 bank failures, with total liabilities of more than $270,000,000, almost entirely in the agricultural sections, as against 49 such failures during the last year of President Wilson's administration.

The report of November 17, 1927, of a special committee of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities states: "Income from farming since 1920 have not been sufficient to pay a fair return on the current value of capital stood and a fair wage for the farmers' labor, or to permit farm people to maintain a standard of living comparable with other groups of like ability." The Business Men's Commission on Agriculture said in November, 1927, "Since the war the prices of farm products have persisted in an uneconomic and unfavorable adjustment to the prices of manufactures or other goods and services"; and "the disparity between labor and farm income has emphasized the disparity in standards of living in the rural and urban populations." "The value of farm land and farm property decreased heavily in the postwar depression," and "large numbers have lost all their property in this process."

We have today a problem of helping the farmer. While agriculture is one of the most industrialized and independent of enterprises, still, as the census has always contended, agriculture is the "Agriculture is essentially a public function, affected with a clear and unmistakable public interest." country is an economic whole. If the buying power of agriculture is impaired, the farmer makes fewer trips to Main street. The shop owner has less money to buy and therefore has less to pay the factory worker. The factory worker has less money to buy the farmer's products. The whole country suffers. And the banker will collect his debts or safely extend further credit. This country cannot be prosperous if agriculture, as sick almost to the point of economic death.

The normal market among the farmers of this country for the products of industry is $10,000,000,000. Our export market, according to latest available figures, is, exclusive of agricultural products, approximately $1,500,000,000. The loss of this export market is a striking indication of the serious blow to national prosperity implied by the fact that the purchasing power of the farmer is paralyzed.

When, therefore, Al Smith came in accord with our platform declaration that the solution of this problem must be a prime and immediate concern of the Democratic administration, he made one of the greatest appeals for humanitarian and constructive statesmanship that has been made in this country for a generation.

With the exception of the administrations of Cleveland and Wilson, the Democratic party in this country has been in Republican hands for half a century. For nearly eight years the president and congress have been Republican. What has been done to solve this problem? Many promises were made which have never been fulfilled. Certainly the promise of relief by tariff has not been fulfilled.

The tariff is a burden on commodities of which there is expectable surplus without controlled sale of the surplus. Our platform points the way to make the tariff effective for crops of which we produce a surplus. There has been government interference with laws of supply and demand to benefit industry, commerce and finance. It has been one-sided because business, industry and finance made itself felt in an enormous increase of bank failures in the agricultural districts. In 1927 there were 630 bank failures, with total liabilities of more than $270,000,000, almost entirely in the agricultural sections, as against 49 such failures during the last year of President Wilson's administration.

The report of November 17, 1927, of a special committee of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities states: "Income from farming since 1920 have not been sufficient to pay a fair return on the current value of capital stood and a fair wage for the farmers' labor, or to permit farm people to maintain a standard of living comparable with other groups of like ability." The Business Men's Commission on Agriculture said in November, 1927, "Since the war the prices of farm products have persisted in an uneconomic and unfavorable adjustment to the prices of manufactures or other goods and services"; and "the disparity between labor and farm income has emphasized the disparity in standards of living in the rural and urban populations." "The value of farm land and farm property decreased heavily in the postwar depression," and "large numbers have lost all their property in this process."

We have today a problem of helping the farmer. While agriculture is one of the most industrialized and independent of enterprises, still, as the census has always contended, agriculture is the country's finances. To accomplish financial stability, a Democratic currency system was called into being by a Democratic administration, a system that for agriculture is complete. Any plan devised must also be in harmony with the fundamentals of our financial institutions. Our platform declares for the development of co-operative marketing as a means of helping to solve the problem of the distribution of the cost in dealing with crop surpluses over the marketed unit of the crop. Co-operation is defined by many as voluntary. Only the mechanics remain to be devised. I propose to call a conference of farmers and their spokesmen for hostility. In my administration of the government, as it relates to agriculture, I will attack it as a problem of this character, I called into conference those best equipped on the particular subject in hand. I shall follow that course in the case of agriculture. Farmers and farm leaders, with such constructive aid as will come from the economists and fair-minded leaders of finance and business, must work out the detail. There are many plans that have been suggested. The real which is to be accomplished. Such plans should be subjected at once to searching, able and fair-minded examination by the leaders of all parties, quite that the solution shall be economically sound.

If I am elected, I shall immediately after election ask leaders of the type I have named, irrespective of party, to enter conference with me. I shall join with them in the discharge of their duties during the coming winter, and present to congress immediately upon its convening, the conclusions reached. To the body of men best fitted to render this signal service to the nation. I shall submit the settlement of this question until a satisfactory law is placed upon the statute books.

A Minnesota Dairy Farmer Abroad

V. S. Delegate to International Dairy Conference

CHAPTER V.

Ist and Out of Old London

"If anyone should ask you what the weather is like in London you may answer that it is very much like the climate of the States and no farmer can think of putting his hay in the barn. All hay is stacked and very little is taken in as used. I saw absolutely no alfalfa hay in the making. I did see some cutting and I was told that a portion is mixed hay like our upland prairie hay and there is a good deal of timothy and clover. In every field. Among the things I saw in my dairy farmery it is the practice to grow a bean or pea similar to a sweet clover. This plant would seem still, and this plant contains a good deal of protein. I am told that it is the chief source of high protein feed that they can purchase the imported feeds that are made from our oil meal or cotton seed meal, but I have not had time or commercial feed comprising these as a base and containing grains, oats. The grown beans yield about thirty bushels per acre and the straw or chaff is used as a bedding. But bedding is a scarce article and is greatly labored on account of the dust that is made and finds its way into the milk.

The cows are not milked at such regular intervals here as in the States as in England. The farmer will not get out of bed as the American farmers do. They have another queer notion about the buttermaker test here. They have three grades of milk on very many of the farms. The grade A TT certified milk, then the grade A TT milk and the grade A milk. The certified, of course, is the same as in the States and the grade A TT milk is that made from cows that are actually tuberculin tested, and then the grade A is from cows that are not tuberculin tested but that are given a physical examination by a veterinary surgeon at least once every three months. This latter proviso looks like a big gap to me for they fail to see how the veterinary is going to detect tuberculosis. It is ridiculous that would in any way get results. I expressed this sardonically the other day as I was riding through a farm to farm and came near getting in "Spain" as the man I was conversing with happened to be one of the owners of the farm. He said there was a great knack to it and that they were expert in it. I want to recommend that Dr. Murray, the Minnesota State veterinarian, get in on this at once.

I visited the milking barns of two farmers here and it was just at milking time. Each was milking over a hundred head of cows and in the first instance the 150 cows were all of the breed that were bought hit and miss from the herd and there was a wide variety of all breeds, but of the predominating breeds were Holsteins. They farm on the basis of milk production and the proprietors told me that they found that the Holsteins were the most profitable. I saw Shorthorns, Jerseys, Guernseys, Ayrshires, Red Polls, Polled Angus and Polled native red, white or spotted cow that filled the barns of the country before the dairy breeds were ever thought of. Holsteins were in the milking sheds and the milkers were clean and quick. I was told about with a hose and sprinkled water on the cows before milking, as well as to lay all dust before milking. The cows were fed a fairly good ration besides the good pasture and were credited by giving all the milk that their breeding would warrant. The cows were turned to a black pole bull and the farmers told me that they got from four pounds each (freely $20) to a bull to other farmers to be raised as herd bulls. The supplementing of this feed, that was being run as a playthings by London men, told me this that I had no one on earth that would afford to pay a price for raises and raise them as he suggested and then be glad to get the hay to dairy stock. But I must say that the men who had the best herds were those who had the least number, know how to stack hay and have him on a most perfect stack. In fact there is a lot of artistic pride in doing this work just as there is in the building of a stack by the setting of grain stacks before the days of threshing machines. Today spelled the art. Very often after the hay has been completed it is thatched and this makes a rain proof.

Where hay is hauled to the yard or barn it is hauled in a two-wheeled cart and I have seen the large loads of this carried home. You would be surprised to see how much of a load can be put onto this two-wheeled affair. It is pitched up to the load by the farmer and his helper and they do it very rapidly by any farmer at Hartley. But there is a provision that where the farmer cannot show a profit on his cows he is relieved of them. They are supplied from a part of his tax. Farming on hand is a relief from all this in 1929 as they have been promised that there will be no land tax and only the improvements would be taxed. Some of the farmers here now have to pay the present time as on those that have been relieved. They expect to have relief in addition to the previous taxes paid by the former proprietors have taken care of the permanent improvements, and the maintenance is very small by an improvement tax. This flight tax was is about a shilling to the pound sterling, or from 12 to 14 shillings per acre. But they have said nothing about it.

But with all this, land is selling for the equivalent of $50 to $75 per acre within twenty miles of London. This seems a shame as the improvements in many cases are worth more than the land. Such permanency in construction I have never seen anywhere else. But with it all the cry of the English farmer is for protection, low tariff to keep out the other fellow's products at least to what is now existing duties, and he is not quite far enough advanced to realize that he is on his markets every day.

While I think that in a place like Canada thistles, plenty of them, and a grass similar to our quack grass are present in the fields. On this farm I saw a Fordson in actual work and I saw others in various places.

Nearly every farmer is at his hay as much as usual on account of his hay-making program would not be completed for a month or more on account of the high price of labor. Men are paid from $25 to $30 a week and no board or room is furnished. The hay is mown and in some cases is handled by a large drum fodder with spikes in it. Then it is raked into cocks and then turned by hand men with hand forks. The hay is then loaded to bring the hay from the windrows to the cocks by the men but here it is unloaded instead of using the stacker or sweep as we do. The load to the stop of the stack and an elevator is used to elevate the hay to a stack much the same as our corn elevators that work outside of our cribs. I saw one place where the elevator and a single horsepower engine and then by gasoline engine. But I must say that the men who had the best hay were those who had the least number, know how to stack hay and have him on a most perfect stack. In fact there is a lot of artistic pride in doing this work just as there is in the building of a stack by the setting of grain stacks before the days of threshing machines. Today spelled the art. Very often after the hay has been completed it is thatched and this makes a rain proof.

Co-operative; co-ordinated marketing and waterhouse facilities, and financial aid are needed as co-ordinated, co-operative control of the flow of crops was planned in the creation of the system. "Agriculture is essentially a public function, affected with a clear and unmistakable public interest." The country is an economic whole. If the buying power of agriculture is impaired, the farmer makes fewer trips to Main street. The shop owner has less money to buy and therefore has less to pay the factory worker. The factory worker has less money to buy the farmer's products. The whole country suffers. And the banker will collect his debts or safely extend further credit. When, therefore, Al Smith came in accord with our platform declaration that the solution of this problem must be a prime and immediate concern of the Democratic administration, he made one of the greatest appeals for humanitarian and constructive statesmanship that has been made in this country for a generation.

With the exception of the administrations of Cleveland and Wilson, the Democratic party in this country has been in Republican hands for half a century. For nearly eight years the president and congress have been Republican. What has been done to solve this problem? Many promises were made which have never been fulfilled. Certainly the promise of relief by tariff has not been fulfilled.

The tariff is a burden on commodities of which there is expectable surplus without controlled sale of the surplus. Our platform points the way to make the tariff effective for crops of which we produce a surplus. There has been government interference with laws of supply and demand to benefit industry, commerce and finance. It has been one-sided because business, industry and finance made itself felt in an enormous increase of bank failures in the agricultural districts. In 1927 there were 630 bank failures, with total liabilities of more than $270,000,000, almost entirely in the agricultural sections, as against 49 such failures during the last year of President Wilson's administration.

The report of November 17, 1927, of a special committee of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities states: "Income from farming since 1920 have not been sufficient to pay a fair return on the current value of capital stood and a fair wage for the farmers' labor, or to permit farm people to maintain a standard of living comparable with other groups of like ability." The Business Men's Commission on Agriculture said in November, 1927, "Since the war the prices of farm products have persisted in an uneconomic and unfavorable adjustment to the prices of manufactures or other goods and services"; and "the disparity between labor and farm income has emphasized the disparity in standards of living in the rural and urban populations." "The value of farm land and farm property decreased heavily in the postwar depression," and "large numbers have lost all their property in this process."

Co-operative; co-ordinated marketing and waterhouse facilities, and financial aid are needed as co-ordinated, co-operative control of the flow of crops was planned in the creation of the system. "Agriculture is essentially a public function, affected with a clear and unmistakable public interest." The country is an economic whole. If the buying power of agriculture is impaired, the farmer makes fewer trips to Main street. The shop owner has less money to buy and therefore has less to pay the factory worker. The factory worker has less money to buy the farmer's products. The whole country suffers. And the banker will collect his debts or safely extend further credit. This country cannot be prosperous if agriculture, as sick almost to the point of economic death.

The normal market among the farmers of this country for the products of industry is $10,000,000,000. Our export market, according to latest available figures, is, exclusive of agricultural products, approximately $1,500,000,000. The loss of this export market is a striking indication of the serious blow to national prosperity implied by the fact that the purchasing power of the farmer is paralyzed.

The stumpage and other timber sales have rallied up to $15,000,000 of late years when the operators of the 161,000,000 acres in the state's trust funds at the last report, were the auditors—Iverson and Preus and the state has left at least a million acres of forest-bearing land—from which a perpetual timber crop may indefinitely be reaped. By 1873, McIlrath reported that the state timber had been pretty well cleaned up along the Mississippi as far as Grand Rapids and on the St. Croix and around Mille Lacs, for which the school fund had gained the handsome total of $160,000, which, he might have added, was less than a quarter of the true amount. When the lumbermen let their prices stay had their fingers crossed.

Probably he did not realize that they had been playing for keeps all along, taking twice and three times as much as they paid for, cutting at will and reporting as innocent logs only what they thought was about right. There was an investigation in 1875 and though McIlrath was accused in a criminal action and exonerated in a civil suit; he was ruined politically.

In those thirties pioneer days, "Uncle Sam was rich enough to give us all a farm;" the heaviest timber stands could be bought at the government price of $1.25 an acre, and the general merchandise peddler—himself. The timber was there to be cut and when it became apparent that a contentious man could not swear he was making a farm, the government fixed the law so he need only swear that the land was valuable only for stone or timber and pay a minimum of $1.25. Some amounts were recovered by civil actions and others gally were settled on a basis of what the scale showed by measuring the stumps.

Yes, It Is Hot! But Try This Plan

With the mercury climbing steadily upward, we are giving you our own hot weather rules for shopping comfort.

1. Try to shop in the morning if possible. There are no "bargain hours" in our store. Our prices are always the same.

2. Check sizes, quantities and colors before leaving the store to avoid a return trip.

3. Don't tramp wearily from store to store to compare prices. We promise you "quality—always at a saving" and we have kept that promise for 26 years.

4. Above all "NO SALES!" They spoil any day, especially a hot one — and ruin your bank account besides. We mark our goods at the lowest price consistent with market costs, and that price is the same every day.

Hawley Farmer Finds Sheep Are Profitable Investment

This year was a very profitable year for the sheep raiser. Christ Brattlien of Parke township, purchased seventy-six ewes this spring for the purpose of helping him clear the brush off from some of his land. After accomplishing the purpose for which they were purchased, Mr. Brattlien has just sold twenty lambs for which he was paid $230.07 and he still has twenty lambs and ewes which he values at $230.97. In addition he had $100 worth of wool. From his 26 old ewes he will realize a gross profit of $57.00 in addition to the value of having much brush eaten from the land on which they pastured.—The Hawley Herald.

HOW TO GO BROKE FARMING

1. Grow only one crop.
2. Keep no livestock.
3. Regard chickens and a garden as nuisances.
4. Buy everything from the soil and return nothing.
5. Don't open silos or grow corn crops—let the top soil wash away, then you will have "bottom" land.
6. Don't plan your farm operations; it's hard work thinking—trust to luck.
7. Never spare woodland as you would a coal mine, cut every tree, sell the timber and wear the cleared land out cultivating it in corn.
8. Hold fast to the idea that the methods of farming employed by your father or neighbor are good enough for you.
9. Be independent—don't join with your neighbors in any form of co-operation.
10. Mortgage your farm for every dollar it will stand to buy things you would have the cash to buy if you followed only a good system of farming.—Division of Extension, University of Tennessee.

FAIR OFFICIALS PREPARING FOR HALF MILLION

Excursion Rates of One Cent a Mile Offered By Railroads

Preparations are being made to handle more than half a million people at the 69th annual State Fair, which opens next Saturday. Everything is in readiness, and the 1928 exposition will present the biggest and best program in the Fair's history, and will be a $25,000,000 exposition.

With the Republican National Convention and machinery shows in years, and with plans and specifications for treatment at Glasgow Creek, a number of phantom driverless cars, driven by radio impulses from a plane; a mammoth sausage balloon; more than a hundred attended fireworks show, open air circus and gorgeous fireworks display, the Fair promises to be the best balanced program in history.

Announcement of reduced railroad rates of fare and one-third for the Western Passenger Association territory has been followed by the announcement of excursion rates from which all railroads have announced special coach excursions to the Fair. The fare on those special coach excursions will be one cent a mile from points within 200 miles of the Twin Cities, and one cent a mile from points beyond, with a minimum fare of $1.00. Tickets will be sold any day from September 2 to 6 and are good only in coaches on regular or special trains. The return limit is one day from date of sale with a normal one day fare is $2.00 or less, and two days from date of sale in the territory beyond. One-half of the excursion rate is charged for children of one-half fare age, it was announced.

There is said to be considerable poaching of beaver from the park, the animals bringing good prices when sold to fur farms for breeding purposes.

SCHALL ADDRESSES POSTAL WORKERS AT R. L. FALLS PICNIC

Says Only Hope For Farm Relief is Republican Majority In Congress

As the principal speaker at the annual convention and picnic of the Northern Minnesota Postal Clerks association, the senator assembled with them as already workers looking for his defeat in 1930, and declared that the only hope for farm relief lay in electing a congress that will pass the McNary-Haugen bill, over a presidential veto. "Invest me and you undermine the courage of every honest public official, he continued and declared that after he had been elected on the Republican ticket by the state legislature, partly in a reward for his political record and also to attract public attention away from irregularities in the state treasury department.

"The center has gone out to fair officials all over the state not to invite me to speak at their picnics because the newspapers have never given me a square deal, I must use every available opportunity I have to get free from such courageous fellows as you, to get the truth before the people of the state."

Although little can be hoped for from the candidates of either party, Senator Schall declared that the liberties in the Republican party. The Democratic party is traditionally opposed to the principle of the protective tariff, which must be applied to agricultural products if the McNary-Haugen bill with the equalization fee, in order to restore farm prosperity.

"Only a Democratic congress will be able to work out a plan after they are elected. I should like to have the Democrats come to a plan before the election."

Postmaster C. G. Selvig of Crookston gave a short talk on the postal service. "We are a big-real asset in the post office," he said, "especially service and courtesy." He paid high tribute to the work done by Harry Steenerson in promoting rural postal service, and urged postal workers to see that they are working for a public welfare, not merely for a salary.

Postmaster O. Sectelstad of Red Lake Falls welcomed the guests with an address of welcome, which was followed by the postmaster's address. B. Stewart of Bemidji, Harold Ottoson of Thief River Falls and Ardean Otto of Bemidji, was were scheduled to speak, but were unable to attend.

Local Couple Is Feted On Golden Wedding Day

The Golden Wedding day of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Kvigstad of this city was fittingly commemorated Sunday at the Lutheran church, the affair being planned by relatives and friends of the couple as a complete surprise. At the close of the morning services, the pastor, Rev. E. L. Tungseth, invited everyone in the congregation to partake of the dinner served by Mrs. Isdor and Ole Ihle in the church parlors. The room was decorated for the occasion, in a novel and interesting manner. A short program was enjoyed, consisting of talks by Rev. Tungseth, Rev. Aug. Erickson, Olaf Hovik, John Aune of Hendrum, John Dahl, and Mr. Kvigstad. Miss Alice Bredeson sang two solos accompanied by Miss Judith Lockert at the piano.

Out-of-town attendants were Mr. and Mrs. Pel Haug of Rowsac; Mrs. Ingvald Olson and two children of Greenbush; Mr. and Mrs. John Aune of Hendrum; Mr. and Mrs. John Huseby of Halstad; Mr. and Mrs. M. Hunseth of Halstad; Mrs. Hannah Lien of Ada; Mrs. R. Tsangstad of Halstad and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Berg of International Falls. Over 200 guests were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Kvigstad came to America from Norway 40 years ago, settling on a farm near Hendrum, for the past few years they have made their home in this city. They are the parents of five children, Mrs. Elise Haug of Rosseau; Mrs. N. G. Olson of this city; Mrs. Bert Berg of International Falls; Richard Olsen of Chicago, and Mrs. Pel Nese of this city.

Mrs. J. M. Bishop Presides At Auxiliary Installation

Mrs. J. M. Bishop, national committee woman and past state president of the American Legion auxiliary, officiated at the annual installation of officers of the local unit, Monday evening in the Legion rooms. Mrs. E. L. Tungseth, is president, succeeding Mrs. Harold Pryor; Mrs. Alvina Jones, first vice-president, Mrs. Roy Erickson, second vice-president; Mrs. Fred Lee, secretary; Mrs. James Caldis, treasurer; Mrs. O. Complimentary to Mrs. Bishop, the rooms were transformed into a veritable bower of beauty, and much credit for the success of the affair is due the hostesses, Mrs. Roy Erickson, Mrs. Anton Tagre, Mrs. Alexander Campbell, and Mrs. Arthur Senstad. At the close of the installation, lunch was served at a long table, artistically carried out. Mrs. Bishop presented the local unit with an auxiliary emblem stamp, as well as a gavel, built of hedge which will be placed in the club rooms.

In an informal talk to the auxiliary members, Mrs. Bishop spoke of the convention at Austin, stressed a number of the activities which had been and briefly reviewed some of the things accomplished during her regime as president.

Dairy Products and Vegetables Advised For Children's Diet

"Two Miesto Talks" by Miss Aubyn Tinius

Foods for small children should first of all be of the best quality, then carefully seasoned; and finally, highly nourishing.

Highly seasoned foods are necessary to whip up jaded adult appetites, but should not be introduced into children's diets. This means that large amounts of fats, sugars, spices and pepper should be excluded from children's foods. The lamentable fact is that few recipes are so adapted, and therefore it is necessary to modify adult recipes.

Children need some source of quick energy. This is easily furnished in fruit with natural sugar and using sugar in puddings, junket and stewed fruits to make them palatable. Cereals and meat puddings can be sufficiently sweetened by the use of dates, figs, and raisins. Instead of the highly concentrated and rich cake, substitute a sponge cake which has been made with one-fourth less sugar than advocated in the original recipe. Angel food cake is sufficiently sweetened by the use of raisins,

Inasmuch as most good things are produced by labor, it follows that all such things ought to belong to those whose labor has produced them. But it has happened in all ages of the world that some have labored, and others, without labor, have enjoyed a large proportion of the fruits. This is wrong, and should not continue. To secure to each laborer the whole product of his labor as nearly as possible is a worthy object of any good government.—Abraham Lincoln.

"TRACTOR FARMERS"

Occasionally we hear a farmer refer to his neighbor as a "tractor farmer" and we gather from the way in which the term is used that this particular neighbor is some peculiar sort of an individual who suffers from an overdeveloped desire for machinery. On the other hand we also hear some farmers referred to as "old foggies" who are trying to make a success of farming in 1928 by using the antiquated methods of their fathers.

We also hear criticisms of this kind among business men. Quite frequently business men do not like the methods of doing business of their competitors. And it is a remarkable thing how wide a range of methods are applied by the merchants in conducting similar operations. Some business men succeed by applying new methods. Some fail for the same reason. Some business men succeed because they continue operating their affairs on the same methods they adopted a quarter of a century ago, and others fail for the same reason. Some business men succeed by extending credit and some fail because they extend credit. We know that there is no one big trunk highway leading to success in the affairs of the commercial world. Probably the same is true with farming.

Every farmer, like every business man, must figure out some general scheme of operation; not necessarily one that will be pleasing to his neighbors but rather one to which he, himself, is suited. Some may be "tractor farmers". Others may be "old foggies." Some may go in heavy for live stock. Some may concentrate on dairying. Happily we are not directly responsible for the mistakes of our neighbors. All we have to do is figure out our own success. If we all concentrate on our own business perhaps more of us will be successful.

SMITH AND PROHIBITION

Al Smith has made the prohibition question one of the big issues of the present campaign, and undoubtedly his stand on this question will strengthen his cause in some sections of the country. It is our opinion, however, that it will lose him more ground than it will gain for him, considering the country as a whole.

This prohibition question is a real problem at that. Judging from the amount of malt extract sold in this community one would almost be led to believe that everybody in the territory had become a brewery. It isn't quite that bad, however. It is true that much beer is brewed and much moon is distilled, and the net result of prohibition is far from satisfactory. Most people are agreed that prohibition isn't satisfactory. But most of those people with whom we come in contact and they are a fairly representative cross-section of the community—do believe that prohibition is better than the condition which it replaced.

Those who argue in favor of modifying our present laws point to the bootleg evil. And it is an evil. But the remedy for this evil is not government liquor stores. Prohibition doesn't make bootleggers. The thing that makes bootleggers is high priced whiskey. And government owned liquor stores mean high priced liquor. The only way in which the bootlegger can be eradicated are either through the re-establishment of saloons with low priced liquor or strict law enforcement. Even the writers of wets don't argue in favor of a return to the saloon. The remedy is enforcement.

This is a matter for the public to decide. As soon as we have become fed up on the present bad condition and are willing to insist on an improvement in that condition, the condition will be improved. As long as the public looks upon liquor law violations as it does upon minor violations of our traffic laws, these violations will continue. As soon as the public frowns upon them they will decrease.

Prohibition was inevitable in this country, but it was put over at the wrong time. The nation was drunk at the time it was done—drunk with war. The result would have been better had the law been less drastic. They tried to make us good too fast. The temperance leaders were intemperate in their temperance, and the result is a bad mess. But to attempt to retrace our steps now would only result in a worse mess. We have nothing to gain by going backward. The only direction in which there is any relief in sight from the evils of prohibition is forward through strict enforcement and temperance. We need a lot of temperance.

CONSERVATIVE VS. PROGRESSIVE

"I am entirely unwilling to accept the old order of things as the best unless and until I become convinced that it cannot be made better."

This statement made by Al Smith in his acceptance speech last week, is probably one of the most important things he said in that speech. The paragraph is not particularly spectacular, and the fact that Mr. Smith places little emphasis on it himself indicates, perhaps, that he did not intend it as more than merely a nice sounding group of words which would serve well as a vehicle of introduction to the more prominent ideas presented later. But in these few words are contained a thought, which, in a sense, distinguishes the ideals of what are commonly known as progressive and conservative governments. This thought probably expresses one of the few remaining differences between the two major parties of the nation.

The paragraph as quoted, expresses the Democratic ideal, an unwillingness to accept the old order of things as best until convinced that it cannot be made better. The Republican or conservative view would be just the opposite. The conservative theory of what a government's attitude should be would be rather a willingness to accept the old order of things as the best unless and until convinced that something better is offered to replace it.

While there are evils, of course, in either extreme, and the perfect attitude of government would perhaps be a happy combination of both ideals, it would seem that if we must have one or the other we would prefer to see a conservative administration in power. We would prefer an admission that accepted new ideas cautiously rather than one that kept jumping from one thing to another in the hope that something better might be found. It would seem that the proper arrangement in a government such as ours would be a conservative party in power with a progressive minority snapping at its heels twenty-four hours a day. In our own state practically every reform law that has been passed has been passed by a conservative government following a few years of agitation by a progressive minority. The unnecessary frills, however, are eliminated.

There is little reason to believe that a consideration of these abstract theories of government will be a factor in determining the outcome of the election next November. More matured considerations will govern the choice of the voters. To some extent, however, these abstract theories, while not factors in the cause of the result, will be important factors in the effect of the result.

AMENDMENT NO. 1

One of the issues to be decided by the voters in the election this fall is whether or not a part of the gas tax money shall be used for the maintenance of county and township roads. This issue will be presented to the voters in the form of an amendment to the constitution which would provide a slight increase in the tax on gasoline and a part of the total amount collected made a part of the State Aid Fund and distributed to the counties under the provisions of the Babcock Dunn law.

In discussing this proposed amendment the Morris Tribune, after analyzing the situation, concludes that the amendment should secure universal approval. The Tribune states:

> "Who benefits most by the roads," is a question asked, and in part answered, in a recent issue of the Minnesota Highway News. The answer is based on data gathered in Tennessee, where one car out of each hundred was labelled as to whether it was city-owned or rural-owned, and a census taken of the road use of these cars. The conclusion was that the tendency appeared to be toward an equal ratio between ownership and road use. In other words, if fifty per cent of the cars were rural owned, fifty per cent of the cars in the state highways would be rural owned.
> All of which is probably true, but it is only half of the picture. Road expenses of county and township roads are not available, but travel on them is by no means confined to rural-owned cars. It is a matter of common observation that there are a great many city-owned cars upon the rural highways, and probably in about the same ratio as they appear upon the state highways, or in other words, in about the same ratio as ownership.
>
> All of which is important only in that it shows that our division of roads into state roads and county roads and township roads is arbitrary, and is only an administrative classification, and not a classification by use.
>
> When it comes to use, our road system is one system, one road differing from another only in the amount of use, and not in the kind of use.
>
> The auto tax uses all of them as its owner has created the construction, and maintenance of each and all of them is properly a charge upon the automobile and its gas rather than upon general property.
>
> The gas tax has been described as a use tax, and is generally credited with being a most proper one.
>
> Yet all of the use tax money as well as the license tax money today goes entirely to the construction and maintenance of the state roads.
>
> Users of county and township roads make a large contribution to that use tax, and yet not a cent of the money goes to county and township roads.
>
> An attempt to secure a portion of this tax money for county and township roads is the thought back of the Babcock amendment to be voted on the fall.
> The amendment is perfectly just, logical and equitable, and the amendment should secure universal approval.

We are not entirely convinced that this conclusion of the Tribune is proper. While we are satisfied that a part of the gas tax money should be spent for the improvement of local roads, we are not satisfied that the method of distributing this money proposed in the amendment is the proper method. This method is unfair to the larger cities of the state, which contribute a very considerable portion of this money and receive only a small portion in return. We can see no justification for such a discrimination. The fair way to distribute this money would be by returning it to the counties in the same proportion in which it was collected. Such an arrangement would be fair to all concerned, for to a large extent the gasoline would be purchased in the communities in which the roads were used. The revenue from this source would then be in proportion to the use of the roads.

We have heard people of this community express the opinion that we should try to get this amendment passed because it would mean that this community would profit to some extent at the expense of the people of the three large cities. In other words the idea seems to be to try to tax the city for the benefit of the country. There is nothing unfair in this kind of a holdup, of course. And we do not object for conscientious reasons. Our consciences is easily satisfied in such matters. It is our appreciation that bothers us. The rural sections of the state may have sufficient votes at the present time to force a tax on the unwilling residents of the city people. But the city population is gaining in numbers rapidly and in a few years the cities will have a majority of the votes of the state. We fear that unless the rural sections of the state consider the interests of the cities at the present time the cities may take pleasure in hanging a few unpopular taxes on the rural sections a few years hence.

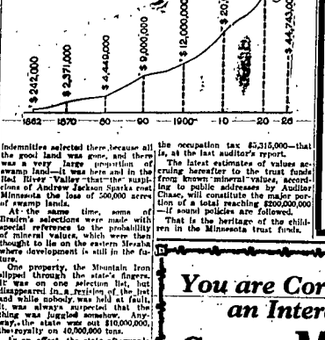
There is only a slight possibility that the amendment will be passed. It will be defeated by the opposition of the larger cities and the indifference of the rural voters. An amendment providing for a more equitable distribution of the money might be adopted by the voters in the election of 1930.

A Complete Story of the Minnesota Permanent School and Trust Fund—How it Was Started—How it Has Developed. Written for the Minnesota Editorial Association

By JOHN STONE PARDEE

BURIED RICHES

"Persons familiar with the situation," said Auditor Braden in 1900, "are unanimous in their belief that the school and university funds of this state will receive large payments from this source"—royalties on iron ore. He even ventured the prediction that these revenues would in time equal that derived from the sale of all the school land in the southern half of the state. It was a modest prediction.



It was in 1854, that the first iron ore was shipped from the Vermillion range and in 1890 that the great discoveries were made on the Mesabi. In that region the state had two separate sections 16 and 36, it had considerable areas of school and other lands, and perhaps twice that amount of iron ore which will contribute to the trust funds. Under the old leases there was a measured tonnage of 180,000,000 tons, which would produce $42,000,000. And, as Press observed in 1918, "There are fair reasons to suppose that the ultimate returns will be at least twice that much."

In addition to the royalties from state owned properties, there is added to the trust fund, under the 1924 constitutional amendment, one-half the occupation tax—40 per cent to the school fund and 10 per cent to the university fund.

Royalties so far have contributed to the trust funds $17,272,000 and the occupation tax $5,315,000—that is, at the last auditor's report.

The latest estimates of values accruing hereafter to the trust funds from known mineral values, quoted by public addresses by Auditor Chase, will constitute the maker per capita of a total trust fund of $60,000,000—if sound policies are followed.

That is the heritage of the children in the Minnesota trust funds.

Jefferson Highway Will Retain Its Identity In Spite of Number System

Despite the system of plain numbering for federal and state roads, the Jefferson Highway will always continue to retain its name and identity from Winnipeg, on the north, to New Orleans, on the south, says E. Meinlich, president of the Jefferson Highway Association says.

"The plan of numbering federal and state highways in a systematic manner no doubt serves many useful purposes," Mr. Meinlich said.

"However, there is a sentimental attachment for a great, broad highway, named for a famous American, that can never be replaced by mere numbered routes," he added. "For this reason, the Jefferson Highway, linking the north, the south through one of the richest sections of the United States, will never lose its name and identity.

"The pioneers who were instrumental in bringing about the routing and establishment of the Jefferson Highway, one of the first of our great national thoroughfares, worked with energy and vision, and I know I keep within the facts when I claim that the Jefferson Highway today is more firmly entrenched in the minds and affections of the people in the territory it serves, and with tourists in the Middle West, than at any time previous. Numbers will come and go, but the Jefferson Highway will go on forever."

CHAPTER VI.
LAST DAY IN LONDON AND SOME NOTES

Positively no one should visit London without a stop at Lord Astor's farm and Mansion at Maidenhead. To begin with Lord Astor is a regular he-man. There is no fuss and feathers about him. He gets this to some extent from his American ancestry and his splendid American wife. His home is the grandest three hundred acre place that it has been our pleasure to visit. It was this ancient and picturesque place that was so kindly loaned to the Red Cross during the war and 21,000 of our wounded soldiers and sailors were brought to this haven of rest and mercy during the conflict and forty-two of this number lie sleeping in the most little graveyard that is imaginable, built by the work of Mr. and Mrs. Astor's own hands. These buried here are six American boys who gave their lives for the cause. The Astors have moneys—lots of it—but they have brains and human nature, generous nature to boot. Their home is a model of everything. The cows are a bit of everything with Shorthorn bulls in service.

I must say that after a visit to some of the dairies here, in England that the farmers, big and little, are just where we were thirty years ago as far as cows are concerned. They hate to let go of the old dual purpose fad and there will be no improvement in the dairy herds of England except for a change still with their cows. They have an old fad for some for them but are neglecting getting them there.

And then you are not complete unless you have a "top kick"—that is about the size of a fourteen year old pal and is made so that it will go into reverse if a fellow sits on it. This hat adds a while how it makes you fit to be presented to almost anyone and anything. You are then known to be in "full dress." The other evening our party all went out in this "full dress," and at the party at the Guild Hall they had injuries received, when struck by a speeding automobile as he was returning to his own car after helping a friend change a tire. The driver of the car, after a moment's stop, sped away.

"Joe" Chapman as he was commonly known, had a host of friends throughout the state, especially in southern Minnesota where he was born and where he did much of his work. He was thirty six years old, a graduate of the engineering college of the University of Minnesota, class of 1914. He served as assistant highway engineer of Olmsted county and later as highway engineer of Rice county. He left this position to enter the army in the World war. After his return he entered the State Highway department and for several years was division engineer, having general supervision over state highway work in eleven counties in southeastern Minnesota. Later he was promoted to assistant construction engineer.

Mr. Chapman left a widow and three boys. He is also survived by his parents and a brother at Garden City and a brother at Miami, Fla. Funeral services were held at Rochester, Minn., last Thursday.

How Indians Fashioned Implements of Stone

Indians obtained their material for stone implements freely from the earth when possible. A piece of stone was first split into suitable sizes by striking it with a hammer of a hard base and hitting it sharply with a one-sided twist of another stone, say a fist-like shape. Then the rough chunks were trimmed to a leaf-like form by striking them smartly with a hammer of horn, bone or tough granular stone mounted on a light handle. Such percussion work was often carried to camp to be finished with the utmost delicacy. They were buried in damp soil, not to hide them, as often supposed, but to keep them even-textured. This practice accounts for the caches of crude arrowheads often found. The finishing was done with a deer-bone pressure flaker, a deer bone or buckhorn. Frequently the crude arrowhead was folded in a buckskin pad to keep it from breaking and then placed on a stone or wooden block and pressed with a sharp edge projecting over the edge. By applying strong, abrupt pressure at the proper angle with the pressure tool, a skilled artisan detached flakes with almost absolute ease. In this manner margins were trimmed, stems formed, notches made and points sharpened. Practice and fine played no part in its process.

State Highway Assistant Construction Engineer Is Killed By Speeding Auto

The Minnesota Highway department lost one of its most capable engineers last week in the death of W. P. Chapman, assistant construction engineer. Mr. Chapman died from the injuries received when struck by a speeding automobile as he was returning to his own car after helping a friend change a tire. The driver of the car, after a moment's stop, sped away.

Starting October 1, sixty radio stations will broadcast weekly 4-H Club programs under the supervision of the Radio and Extension services of the United States Department of Agriculture. More than 650,000 farm boys and girls are now enrolled in 4-H Clubs in the United States.

It is not generally realized that dry skim milk has desirable food values and has some advantages over fluid milk. A considerable portion of the energy value of milk is contained in the skim milk, and the almost completely digestible and assimilable milk proteins in the dry skim milk make it especially valuable for children, adults and growing animals.

A new activity to be put on a regular basis is that of operating a whitewashing service, for cow barns is now available in the 2,000 members of the Ohio Farmers' Cooperative Association. A portable spraying outfit is now available in each county and it is estimated that the barns can be cleaned and whitewashed at much less expense than if the farmers did it themselves.

Small articles of wood on the farm, such as fence posts, gates, feed troughs and chicken houses, that are exposed to much dampness and exposure to rot, may be made more durable by preservative treatment with coal tar creosote. This process can be obtained by heating the wood in the creosote till it is near 212° and allowing the wood and oil to cool together. This treatment is said to increase the life to a times as long as untreated wood.

America's Leading Public Service Corporation...

...The Church

SERVING millions of shareholders for nearly 1000 years—the Church, one of the world's oldest institutions, is today recognized as one of the leading public service corporations of America by thousands of conservative investors, including ladies and trust companies.

The conception of the charitable donition departed in the days of the Pilgrim landing, making the Church Corporation of this day an efficient, smooth running organization, managed by a capable well-educated Board of Directors—if, in the conduct of its affairs additional funds are required for expansion, the members of the corporation proceed to raise these funds by lodging the corporation property and other available physical assets in much the same manner as any other enterprise.

Free from the common ills of business, such as finances, municipal interference, competition and greed for human gain, First Mortgage Real Estate Church Bonds are today considered an ideal investment.

New Geyser In Yellowstone Park Spouting Hot Rocks

A new geyser which has burst forth in Yellowstone National Park because of its peculiar antics, is commanding attention both locally and from scientists and tourists from all over the world. In the short time that 500 persons waited for the blower to go into action and they were rewarded by an odd activity.

The geyser in the last few days has been blowing out small bits of rock with the hot water and steam. The rock is of different compositions and is better than the heated water which brings it to the surface.

Scientists say this strange spouting is caused by the geyser's clearing a hole and forming a cone through which to flow. They regard the appearance of rock as an indication of permanency for the blower. The blower is now erupted very little from one to one and one-half inches in width and one-half an inch in diameter. Their belief is that as that of the water, is attributed to the hot strata from which they come.

NIGHT SUPPER FOR BATH

A "sandwich" for rats can be made of 1 ounce of powdered red squill and 2 ounces of good butter, mixed and spread between thin slices of about half a pound of bread. Cut such sandwich into six small pieces for the rat baits. Red squill is an effective poison for rats and has the added distinct advantage of being practically harmless to human beings and domestic animals, but rats will eat it readily. Since red squill has no uniform toxic standard, it is important to purchase it from manufacturers who guarantee its toxicity. Red Squill can also be used with cereals, preparements, or fruits and vegetables as baits. It is important that a sufficient number of baits be distributed at one time to provide an ample supply for all the rats. Baits should be put around in the evening so they will be fresh when the rats are feeding; stale baits are unattractive to rodents; hence baits put out should be picked up and destroyed the following morning.

Our Little Corner

No. 36 AUG. 30, 1928 Vol. 2

Just arrived a beautiful bed room three piece suite. You will say it is good-looking, when you see it. And you will agree with us that the price is right.

Be it ever so mortgaged, there's no place like home.

Have you noticed the ten piece Mohair living room suite which we are displaying in our show window this week. Come in and look it over. It is a dandy.

We hereby offer a beautiful fur-lined water pitcher to anybody who can walk down the main street of Thief River Falls with a coil of rope without somebody asking him if he's going to hang himself. Or appear in public with an ax, without somebody inquiring if he's taking home a present to his wife.

Some new cedar chests arrived at our store this week. We have them in all cedar, and walnut cedar lined. Call in to see them when calling at our store.

There's another thing you can say for the flivver,—it always retires before it strikes.

We'll grant that most of you men are too busy to help your wives in the housework. But you can buy her a Sterling carpet sweeper here at our store. She could then do the sweeping in much less time, and you would not be in the way.

Little Mable is a lass
Of twenty-one short years,
She wears her hair bobbed a la mode
And never scrubs her ears!

Fall is here! You're going to be at home more than you were during the summer. You'll possibly be needing a new rug or two. It's a good time to buy rugs. We have a wonderful line to select from, too.

Mother to small son: "Why don't you drive the car home?"
Son: "She won't come. She's down there by the railroad track flirtin' with a tobacco sign."

If there is a better washer than the Maytag we've never heard of it.

The next shoot will take place Monday, Sept. 3. This will no doubt be the last shoot for some time owing to the fact that hunting season opens the following Sunday. A great deal of interest has been taken in the weekly shoots and a large attendance is expected at the next and last shoot.

There is some talk of arranging the traps for skeet. This will no doubt prove interesting to the members and will furnish a great deal of sport for the winter shoots.

Greater Minnesota Ass'n Head Advises Farm Tenants To Buy Minnesota Land Now

Farm tenants in Minnesota should act now to secure a home for themselves, or they are likely to find themselves faced with higher priced land, says O. C. Swanson, president of the Greater Minnesota Association.

Minnesota has a low percentage of farm tenants as compared with other states and of the 185,231 farms operated throughout the state only 51,262 are operated by tenants. This situation, Mr. Newman believes is due to the fact that land prices in Minnesota have been low for many years and that it has not been necessary for a tenant to raise a great amount of cash in order to provide himself with a home.

"We believe that there never was a better opportunity to obtain a farm in Minnesota than there is today, that prices will never be lower and that terms of purchase will never be more attractive. Being a heavy land owner he has had an opportunity to observe land movement and he says that farm sales have revived to a wonderful extent, within recent months.

"Speaking of the situation in farm lands at the present time he says: 'In the many years I have owned lands in Minnesota I have never been more enthusiastic concerning agricultural prospects that I am now. Farm land is starting to move and the interest being shown by citizens of other states as evidenced by the many inquiries received by the Greater Minnesota Association and the Ten Thousand Lakes Association forcibly convinces me to believe that they will continue to move with even greater speed. Therefore, I would advise Minnesota tenants to get their farms before prices go up and farm lands are more difficult to get.

Legion Convention Demands That Disabled Veterans Be Allowed to Inspect Files

Describing the present interpretation of the 1924 law relative to "unfair and illegal", the state convention of the American Legion at Duluth demanded that the files of the United States Veterans Bureau be opened to disabled veterans, so they can examine the records of their own cases. Declaring that the law is unsatisfactorily handled, many veterans complained, and hitherto they have been denied the right to examine the status of their claims on the bureau's records.

Nine Year Old Boy Crushed by Water Tank at Warren

Harry Johnson, the nine-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl O. Johnson, of this city, was accidentally killed, north of railroad crossing on T. H. No. 6, just as The Sentinel was about to go to press today. He, with several other small boys, was following several other small boys, was following the Spaeth farm threshing outfit of Hallock to the field north of the Head farm in search of pop bottles which were thrown from the machine while operations were about to be begun. Harry climbed up the water tank, and while he was sitting there, he fell, between the drive pipe, Andrew Johnson, stopped the horses just north of the crossing and left to investigate for the engineer. While he was gone, the horses set off on their own account and crossed the railroad and turned so far to one side of the road that the tank turned over into the ditch. The boy either jumped and fell, or was thrown, in such a way that the tank, following, fell upon his head, crushing it. Death was instantaneous and he was brought to Warren and taken to the undertaking parlors at six o'clock.—Warren Register.

RECOMMENDS STATE TRAFFIC PATROLS TO CURB ACCIDENTS

Commissioner Babcock Thinks Presence of Officers Would Check Reckless Driving

An unusual epidemic of automobile accidents, in which a number of persons have been killed, and others have been injured, has caused C. M. Babcock, commissioner of highways, to make an urgent plea for greater caution in driving. Mr. Babcock also states that he was led to make the recommendation to the legislature for a state traffic patrol as a means of curbing reckless driving and reducing accidents.

"Some counties have excellent traffic patrolmen. The visible presence of a uniformed officer on the highway has a very marked effect on reckless driving. But it is noticeable that they who drive carefully where there are officers in sight forget their carefulness when they get into a county where no officers are seen. Arrests made by plain clothes men hidden by the roadside are of very doubtful value," says Mr. Babcock.

"A state traffic patrol should have no other duties than to enforce the traffic laws and protect the highway property. A traffic patrol which would enforce laws against too heavy loads would probably save several million highway maintenance to pay the entire cost of such a patrol.

"No appropriation can be established until the legislature acts. In the meantime I hope that newspapers, civic organizations and public sentiment generally will do all they can to urge all drivers, as well as pedestrians, to use all possible caution and care.

"I also hope that county and municipal engineers will co-operate with every possible effort to curb dangerous driving. Sports drivers and wholesale arrests of drivers for technical violations of the traffic laws are not the remedy. Sporting drivers and reckless drivers are getting their calves from needless to large and ridiculous fines in this system.

"Preparations for the fourth annual conference, with about 200 entries, are already well advanced. Co-operating with the state-county service in presenting the project, which was the first of the kind in this country, are the livestock exchanges of Minneapolis and the Minnesota Livestock Breeders association. County agents organize the project in the several counties, carrying with the entrants from time to time, and help establish up the loads when the feeding time for each period arrives.

Positions Open to Young Men in Cow Testing Work

Young men qualifying as cow testers at a short course in testing to be held at University Farm September 10 to 15 are assured of paying positions in a few months, says E. A. Hansen, who is in charge of co-operative cow testing work in Minnesota.

Any young man 20 years of age or older will be admitted to the course without charge or fee, but those who have had high school training and dairy farm experience are preferred. Instruction will be given in the principles of testing, persons interested should call or address Mr. Hansen at University Farm.

Cow testers of the state will have their own judging contest at the Minnesota State Fair and Northwest Livestock Show, Tasty Friday forenoon, September 7, they will place four classes of dairy cows in the trophy cup offered by L. V. Wilson, once a dairy specialist with the agricultural extension service of the university. The taster who has the best score with all the breeds will be awarded the cup. High men in each breed will also win prizes.

The honors will be awarded the evening of September 7 when the testers will be the guests of Farmstead, Stock & Home at a banquet in Minneapolis. The annual meeting of the testers' association will be held after the banquet.

ELLSWORTH AGAIN PLACES FIRST IN BABY BEEF CONTEST

Rock County Man Says Raising Own Calves Takes Hazard Out of Business

James Ellsworth, capable farmer of Magnolia, Rock county, has again won first honors in the Minnesota carload baby beef contest, results of which have just been announced by W. G. Morris, livestock specialist with the agricultural extension division of the university, who, assisted by county agents, is in charge of the contest. Awards are based on the average weight of the end of 410 days, the stipulated feeding period, of the 15 calves constituting a carload. The ten ribbons who will share the prize money are;

Name and Address	Av. Weight
James Ellsworth, Magnolia	1,045.7
Ellsworth Bros., Delft	1,045.7
O. A. Salvig, Hancock	883.1
Thomas B. Hicks, Troy	870.25
Stock & Home at a banquet in Minneapolis. The annual meeting of the testers' association will be held after the banquet.	863.25
F. J. Sheffield, Springfield	814.27
Ed. Keeley, LeRoy	810.3
Italy Brothers, Granada	772.1
H. C. Hansen, Dean	761.4
John C. Kuster, Adrian	708.1
C. O. Gillfillan, Redwood Falls

Mr. Ellsworth won the first contest in 1925-26, but took only fifth and second use. He has been feeding baby beef calves for 20 years, he says. "I have found it the best paying proposition on the farm," he says. "My carload this year topped the market for that grade of calves and I got a premium of 50 cents per cwt. $120 a head, not counting skim milk and pasture.

Mr. Ellsworth calves were fed grain three times a day for the first month and then one meal substituted for corn and cob meal. Molasses was fed in the drinking water. Mr. Ellsworth says that raising his own calves instead of buying them largely takes the hazard out of the business of baby beef. His calves this about $46 a year to keep a cow and this represents the cost of putting a calf in his herd. He figures that calves of the quality of his carload would have cost him $100 a head last fall when the feeding contest started.—Ira is a breeder and feeder of Hereford.

Walter Oelke has placed second in the three contests so far held. His preference has always been for Aberdeen Angus, and he topped the Chicago market July 9 at $16 a hundred. His carload was of 1,050 pounds, but then opening of school, Oelke's pastured yard and topped the South St. Paul market at $15.50 a hundred. His carload weighed 1,045 pounds and sold for $1,045.50 a hundred.

"Raising one's own calves and feeding grain to them early are important factors," says Mr. Sheffield, leading while running with them will often put 100 pounds additional on the calf by weaning time. The third contest demonstrates, as did the others, that big thick, meaty calves carry the most weight and are the most profitable, and that successful baby beef feeders are getting their calves from needless to large and ridiculous fines in this system.

Preparations for the fourth annual conference, with about 200 entries, are already well advanced. Co-operating with the state-county service in presenting the project, which was the first of the kind in this country, are the livestock exchanges of Minneapolis and the Minnesota Livestock Breeders association. County agents organize the project in the several counties, carrying with the entrants from time to time, and help establish up the loads when the feeding time for each period arrived.

THOSE CHILD DRIVERS

There is a Minnesota law which provides that no person shall drive a motor vehicle who is under sixteen years of age, unless such minor be accompanied by an adult. Let him on the street most any time and you will see some younger anywhere from ten to fifteen driving cars, and usually driving them very carelessly. Why not stop it? An automobile even in the hands of competent, mature, men and women, is a possible instrument of destruction," and in the hands of a child it is much more so. And no person under sixteen, and rarely under 18 he has reached maturity, is anybody but a child when it comes to clear and quick thinking and good judgment to plachen.—Blind Island Union.

MORE BUTTERFAT ... MUCH MORE MONEY

Increasing the butterfat production of a dairy herd will also increase the income from dairying, it is said in much greater rate. Records kept by the Department of Agriculture on more than 10,000 dairy cows were sorted into groups showing an average yearly butterfat production of 100 pounds, 200 pounds, etc. As the butterfat production increased from 100 to 500 pounds per year, the average annual income per cow per year was increased from $14 to $178; or, in other words, as the butterfat production increased 5 times, the income per cow per cost of feed increased almost 13 times.

1217 PUPILS ENROLLED ON OPENING DAY

INITIAL REGISTRATION AT HIGH SCHOOL IS 410

Curfew Law will be Strictly Enforced During School Year Police Say

One more child attended school on the opening day this year than last, the attendance reports from the various schools of the city show. This year the opening day attendance was 1217, while last year it was 1216.

At the high school 410 attended classes Tuesday. This is only 16 less than the total enrollment last year, while a number of late registrations are expected during the week. The initial enrollment in the other city schools are: Central, 180; Washington, 105; Lincoln, 217; Franklin, 305.

M. G. Burlingame, who taught bookkeeping and science last year and had signed a contract to return this fall, resigned last week, to accept a position at Lincoln, Neb. The position was awarded to Lyle R. Lanning of Redfield, S. D. Mr. Lanning was graduated from South Dakota State College last spring.

Miss Minnie Leraas, English instructor and Librarian, has been ill and was not able to start work at the opening of school. Her place is being temporarily filled by Miss Ada Aakre of this city.

The entire teaching staff of fifty was present at the general exercises meeting at the high school Monday afternoon. Tuesday morning classes were organized and Tuesday afternoon all classes were in session. No one will be lacking in getting started this fall, Supt. Hyslop states, as the entire system is fully organized and ready for a full season of hard work.

Football practice was started immediately after the opening of school. Coach Hyslop, assisted by Coach Stevenson has called out about fifty candidates, first of the week. Practice was observed by more than thirty candidates, many of whom are veterans from last year. Many of the freshmen are showing much promise and have been elected to the squad. Practice sessions have been devoted to coaching and tackling, with instructions in the fundamentals of the game. Indications are that a strong team will be in the field to represent Thief River Falls high school.

Boy Scout work in the city will be resumed this week after the summer vacation. Troop 48 is to meet tonight at the Legion club rooms according to Dr. H. V. Fossum, scout master.

This city has three troops of boy scouts, with over 80 members. The other troops will have their first meeting soon, but the exact time has not been set.

Three boys have been promoted to the rank of Eagle Scouts this year. They are Roger Hewitt, Forrest Johnson, and Charles Frissel. Wallace Hewitt has been an Eagle Scout for two years, having received the honor this summer of being invited to go on a canoe trip from Ely to Winnipeg.

REAL ESTATE SALES INDICATE INCREASED ACTIVITY IN COUNTY

City Property and Farms Included in Transactions During Past Week

A number of real estate transfers have been recorded during the past week, says the county auditor-register of Deeds, Fred Lorentson.

Orlando Bishop has purchased the large garage building occupied by the Lufkin and Bishop auto repair shop from Mrs. Ida M. Bishop. Mr. Bishop, of Fairland, who operated a garage and Buick agency there for many years, Lufkin and Bishop have occupied the building for two years under a lease, which expired recently. Rather than renew the lease, they purchased the building.

Mrs. Gena Barstad has purchased the Ole Lee house at 345 Duluth avenue north. The Heggen family recently moved to Devils Lake, N. D.

Among farm land transfers, there is recorded a sale by Elmer Aakhus to Morris Nelson, of the NE¼ of section 19, Lincoln township. The NW¼ of the southwest quarter of section 7 to 153, Rocksbury township, all in Pennington county.

A. W. Roepell and John Norskog have purchased 160 acres of land in Clear Lake Township, which is located in Clear Lake. This land, which was purchased by Mr. Anderson and Mr. Roepell, is to be divided into 80 acre tracts and sold to actual settlers. The marshes and lake are to be drained by means of ditches, and it is believed that the process will greatly increase the farm land and muskrat propagation.

Lars Furan Applies For Patent Rights on Mechanical Left Arm

Patent rights have been applied for by Lars Furan, proprietor of the Furan Hotel, on a new auto crank, which he has invented. The device, by which the crank may be turned, can be operated from the drivers' seat, and makes it possible for drivers of cars to start their motors without leaving the left front door window open.

Mr. Furan has had his working model in use in his hotel garage for some time, and it seems to operate to complete satisfaction. When the patent rights have been secured, a plate for the driver's home town will be attached, by means of a small crank attached to the lower frame of the windshield, the rear shows a red arm and uncolored field forming the word "Stop." When the front shows the same word and is red.

Only two or three small holes need be drilled in the rear windshield frame to attach the device. It works very smoothly and easily, and has the added advantage of leaving both hands free to operate the car while making a turn.

Mr. Furan is considering organizing a local company to manufacture and sell the device. He expects to make a trip to Minneapolis soon to consult engineers as to the probable cost of manufacturing the device, as only a few aluminum or steel plates with small rivets and bolts, are required. Mr. Furan believes that once the dies are made the cost of manufacture will be small, and is confident that it will soon be found a popular accessory on every car.

May Organize "Al Smith" Club Here, Says Chommie, Ninth District Leader

H. O. Chommie was appointed a member of the Democratic State Central Committee for the Ninth district early this week by state chairman Quinn. Mr. Chommie was asked in the notification to organize ward and township clubs, to support Democratic candidates in the state and national elections.

A Democratic committee was organized this spring, with Mr. Chommie as chairman, Roy Lambert, secretary, and Frank Cernousek, treasurer.

Rather than organize Democratic clubs, Mr. Chommie says, they plan to organize "Al Smith Clubs," which will admit as members anyone who favors Governor Smith for president, regardless of previous political alignment. There are a great many voters in this county, he says, who are satisfied that attacks on his moral integrity are unfounded.

Although no definite plans have been made, Mr. Chommie is considering a Smith rally here in the near future, with a prominent speaker such as former governor John Lind or Frank Murphy of Winston, and organization of a Smith club after the speech.

The women supporters of Smith in the state will be organized under the leadership of Mrs. Ole Hodge, National Committee-Woman for Minnesota. The local committee has not yet decided whether a women here will be organized in a separate club, or jointly with the men in one club.

Threshing Resumed With Return of Dry Weather; Yields Reported Uneven

With the return of dry weather, threshing has been resumed after a few days in many parts of the county, although in the eastern section many fields are still too wet to work with a binder.

Reports from fields that have been threshed are varied. On the Bersen farm, 16 miles west of town, Mr. Bersen yielded 28 bushels to the acre, with the grain testing 36 pounds to the bushel at the time of threshing. On the Ole Lee farm, rye averaged 18 bushels to the acre. Much of the grain is of good quality, although damaged somewhat by excessive moisture the past two weeks.

Highway to St. Hilaire Will Be Oiled After a Fresh Coat of Gravel

The Hary Construction company of Hary, Minn., has been awarded contract No. 52 north of St. Hilaire. The contract calls for 3.6 miles of gravel, which has previously been put in the road weather it will take only a short time for the finishing touches. The gravel is being dumped on the sides of the road, and will be spread over the road by the maintenance crews.

After the gravelling job is completed, the road will be given a coating of oil, which will eliminate much of the dust and wear on the surface.

Rural Teachers of County Will Meet Here for Annual Institute Sept. 17 to 21

The annual county Teachers' Institute will be held here Sept. 17 to 21, Supt. Gordon announces. Although many of the rural schools will not yet be in session, all of the city schools will be in session and able to attend the institute. Attendance at the institute is compulsory, and all rural pupils will be given credit for attendance during the days that the schools are closed.

QUIST SUBMITS REPORT ON NEW SEWAGE MAINS

Public Sentiment will Determine Action of Council, Aldermen Say

TOTAL COST ESTIMATED $44,500 FOR TWO OUTLETS

New Mains Would be of Ample Size to Carry Storm Water Without Flooding

At the requst of the city council, Irving Quist has submitted a complete, detailed report on the proposed new sewer mains for both the east and west sides. As the cost of these mains would be considerable, the council has asked that the entire sewer districts, several miles in distance, be given an opportunity to have as full knowledge as possible of the proposition before any definite action is taken.

Report in Full

To the City Council of Thief River Falls, Minnesota.

Gentlemen: Following out your suggestions, I have prepared this report on the sewer situation. I have rechecked the levels and made some changes in the interest of economy and now submit for your consideration, facts and figures as follows:

PRESENT SYSTEM

The present sewer system brings the drainage from 181½ blocks or approximately 60 acres into the sewer at the corner of Duluth Ave. and 5th St. and Robideaux and Main. The sewer is an 18 inch tile laid on a slope of two feet per thousand and can carry a cubic foot of water per second without backing up in the manholes. At the present system brings the drainage from 27 blocks on the east and there are two blocks more within the present sewer district which have not been provided with mains. The present outlet at this point is a 24 inch tile laid on a slope of 1.7 feet per thousand and can carry 8 cu. ft. per second. This same sewer also takes in the drainage from three additional blocks at the corner of Knight and 5th and also additional area on its course to the outlet. This shows that the insufficiency is not alone in the outlet but also at the junction of Duluth Ave. and 5th St.

From 5th St. to 1st St. on Duluth Ave. a relief sewer could be laid six feet west of the present pipe. Making this a 24 inch laid to a slope of 1.4 feet to the thousand, would have an additional capacity of 12 second feet. The cost of four blocks of such relief sewer would be estimated at $3,000. From 1st to the river on 1st and Duluth Ave. the line would be run south across the High-school property and the Great Northern R. R. and continuing south on Duluth to the corner on Porter St. thence east to Riverside Ave. at the end of the pavement and into the river by a tunnel under the property of F. H. Bakke to an outlet just below the old ice house. A 36 inch pipe laid on a slope of 1.6 feet per thousand would give an additional capacity of 22 second feet at an estimated cost of $20,000.

This the capacity at 5th St. and Duluth with 60 acres of area would be increased to 82 in a total of 16 sec. ft. The outlet from 1st St. with a total area of 100 acres would be increased from 8 sec. ft. to a total of 22 sec. ft. The cost of this is estimated at $28,000, including manholes and connections with present sewers. This would also form a storm water relief sewer and should be completed as soon as the handle any of the present sewage during any weather. Even though the 1st St. flood of Northern R. R. would be provided with lateral benefits amounting to approximately $1,500, leaving $24,500 to be assessed against Sewer District No. 2 which

The Mission churches of the Red River Valley which Rev. O. J. Lundell has served on various occasions, headed by the local Swedish church which he has served the past thirteen years, joined in staging a surprise reception at the home on their silver wedding anniversary, Wednesday evening of last week.

The local church was filled with people from Thief River Falls, St. Hilaire, Wylie, Viking, Warren, Kennedy and Bronson. Contributions had also been made from Drayton, N. Dak., and Lancaster, but the heavy rains on Wednesday prevented people from there attending. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers for the occasion, and a gorgeous, three-tiered wedding cake was placed on one of the tables. The ladies, headed by Mrs. Chas. Gustafson and Mrs. Fred Lorentzen, served a bounteous repast to all present. A sum of money, as well as two silver trays, one from the ladies aid of the local church and one from near relatives, were presented to the honor couple. Telegrams of congratulation arrived from the Mission churches of Crookston and Roseau and from their son Wendell, and other relatives, in Seattle, Wash.

Rev. C. J. Blomberg of Bronson was in charge of the program, leading in devotions and scripture reading, and later delivering a most interesting address. Others were Chas. Gustafson, chairman of the local church, Rev. L. V. Wik, Swedish, and John Peterson from Warren, Rev. J. A. Hedlund of Viking, and Rev. Werner Bonin of Viking, were called upon for short talks. Rev. Edwin Lindskog sang several solos, and also gave a brief address.

Rev. and Mrs. Lundell wish to express their hearty thanks to all who helped in any way to make the affair the success it was.

Mark each batch, and if one jar or can of a lot is found to be leaky or spoiled, examine all others of the same lot extra carefully. Store glass jars where they will be safe from freezing, and all canned goods in a cool, dry place.

The Sediment Trap of the MAYTAG Cast Aluminum Tub Keeps the water clean

ONE of the important features of the Maytag tub is the cone-shape bottom which forms a sediment trap to collect the loose dirt that is flushed from the clothes. It keeps the water clean, and also permits the tub to drain itself thoroughly without tipping the washer.

The effective shape of the Maytag tub was scientifically planned to promote vigorous water action in every inch of the tub all the time, so that the washing is done by water action alone—an action that keeps the soap thoroughly mixed with the water and removes even stubborn edge dirt without hand-rubbing.

Wringing the clothes is easy and effective with the Maytag. The large, soft rolls of the new Roller Water Recover hug every fold, lump and seam, removing both soap and water evenly from all parts of a bulky garment or a thin handkerchief.

Mrs. Alderman was 66 years of age at the time of her death. She had been ill for some time, as a result of the flu, and the past three weeks had been critical. She has been in Crookston for many years, and visited here frequently, remaining for three months this Spring. Besides her daughter, Mrs. Matson of this city, a son, John, and a daughter, Mrs. W. H. Thompson, both of Crookston, survive.

Seven Out of Ten Calls On Doctors Due To Food Habits

Seven people out of every ten who visit a doctor's office go because of some error in their food habits, it has been estimated by those who made a study of causes of illness.

"It is quite obvious that many forms of stomach trouble are brought on by diet indigestion," says Dr. Hannah K. Lyons of the Philadelphia unit of the National Dairy Council, in commenting upon these facts. "And when we further consider, we realize that kidney trouble, diseases of the liver, constipation and intestinal disorders, diseases of the skin, headaches and rheumatism, all find their real source quite often in mistakes of diet. One of the contributing causes of tuberculosis has long been admitted to be malnutrition or the lack of nourishing foods, such as milk, butter and eggs in combination with fresh fruits and vegetables. Any physician will tell you that palpitation of the heart is often due to indigestion, and nervousness and a neurotic appetite go hand in hand."

"To keep from being one of the seven out of ten build up positive health so that we will feel fit for every day's work and enjoy the opportunity of using our body and mind for its share of the world's work, that is ambition enough. Proper care in our food and eating habits, continues Dr. Lyons. "A sane health diet includes a quart of milk a day, plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables, whole-grain bread and cereals. Butter, which is one of the concentrated vitamin A foods, should be eaten liberally since Vitamin A is most important in building up our body's resistance to disease and infection."

Without free speech no search for truth is possible; without free speech no discovery of truth is useful; without free speech progress is checked and the nations no longer march forward toward the nobler life which the future holds for man. Better a thousandfold abuse of free speech than denial of free speech. The abuse dies in a day, but the denial slays the life of the people, and entombs the hope of the race.—Charles Bradlaugh.

This issue of The Times contains a ballot which entitles the subscriber to one vote in a presidential poll of the community. Mark this ballot and mail to us at once in order that complete returns can be published in next week's paper. You will be interested in seeing how other people of this community regard the two principal candidates of the election. Help make the poll as complete as possible by using the ballot in this paper. This is the only issue in which this ballot will appear.

The fact that we haven't mentioned the need for a landing field in Thief River Falls in the last few issues, doesn't mean that we have given up hope of seeing such a field established.

Al Smith is a crafty politician. He offers nothing to the farmer but he does wave a lovely plum before the noses of the so-called farm leaders. He says that if he is elected he will turn this farm problem over to the farm leaders for solution. Magnus Johnson and J. F. Reed have already felt that this was a special invitation for them and are now on the Smith band wagon.

NO INCREASE IN GAS TAX

In our discussion of Amendment No. 1 in this column of last week's paper we stated that this amendment provided "a slight increase in the tax on gasoline." This was a mis-statement. The amendment itself does not provide for any increase in the gas tax. The Legislature has the power to increase or lower the gas tax, and while it is generally considered that the Legislature will increase the gas tax slightly if the amendment is approved, there is by no means certain. We make this correction for the reason that some readers may have become prejudiced against the amendment because of the thought that it would increase the tax on gasoline.

Our objection to this amendment, as we stated last week, is based on the principle that it is unfair to the larger cities in that they are taxed to maintain roads in the country. We have been asked by several readers why we consider this unfair when we favor the present arrangement of spending the automobile license money, collected in the cities, on country roads. It is true that the principle is about the same. A large portion of the state highway department funds are collected in the three large cities and some of these funds can be spent to construct or maintain the trunk highways through the cities. The burden of this construction and maintainance falls upon the cities in addition to the taxes they pay to the state, and on the face of it this condition is not fair.

As a matter of fact it is far however. It is fair for the reason that it is to the cities agreed it should be when the trunk highway system amendment was adopted. To a certain extent this amendment was a city project, and it was due largely to the support of the cities that the amendment was passed. If they did not bargain wisely it is not too late. They have only themselves to thank for their unfortunate situation. But in this present amendment fight the lines are drawn a little differently. The cities are not in favor of the idea, and if the amendment is passed it will be done against the wishes of the cities, and for this reason they would be justified in feeling that they had been treated rather shabbily by their country cousins.

SCHOOL CONSCIOUS
(Better Schools League)

With the approach of the school year 1928-29, we become, as it were, school conscious.

On the one hand, we are considering the advisability of more schooling, and, on the other hand, wondering about the attitude of mind of those who do return, either through choice or compulsion. On this decision and attitude may hinge success or failure in the undertaking.

In the modern competitive contest to make good, it becomes a conflict of wits, elaborate schooling can play an important part. There is no magic in education; it does not insure success, but there is no better insurance against failure. It helps create greater resourcefulness to meet opportunity as it behoves; stimulates ability to expand earning power; contributes to greater moral force and better citizenship.

We accept commercial forms of insurance because they are tangible. We do not question the value of insurance against sickness, accident, death, unemployment, or loss by fire, tornado, hail or rain.

The Insurance State and City give us, through education, is not so tangible. Yet it is nevertheless a force with tangible results. A person may secure a good position, but it is another thing to hold it. Education, properly applied, can lighten that grip. It can give the practical turn to a groping ambition; it can inspire initiative; it can teach the profitable use of leisure; it can instill the proper attitude toward life and labor by hand or brain.

The business we build up a rich reserve to safeguard the future of the corporation. We put shock absorbers on our motor cars to get us over the rough places; we put on emergency brakes. We build up a physical reserve to give us immunity from disease.

We need a similar reserve fund in our cultural existence. Education is a fertile source of supply. It can fortify youth at every turn; it can be a strong hold of mental and physical stamina—a reservoir of resourcefulness.

School days will soon reopen. The occasion should not be looked upon as an opportunity to get away from work, but to prepare for it; not a finishing school, but a preparation training; not an opportunity to a white-collar job, but opportunity to discover self-interests and adaptations; not insurance against mediocrity, but opportunity to avoid it.

No school system or teaching force, however efficient, can do much in the education of an unwilling child. It can afford the opportunity and point out the way. The child, in cooperation with the parents, must do the rest.

The school doors are wide open. Those privileged to enter therein should not feel that they have been sentenced to serve, but have been selected for service.

"You can always tell when the office boy has been reading one of those books where the faithful but ignored employe brought in the idea that saved the business."

DEMOCRACY IN SPORT
(Saturday Evening Post)

A tendency away from overemphasis of one branch of athletics at the expense of another is indicated by the recent action of Dartmouth College and the University of Pennsylvania in dropping the existing distinctions between major and minor sports. These institutions feel that the terms "major" and "minor" tend to emphasize unduly the importance of major sports and minimize the value of the minor sports.

By removing these distinctions, which have been in vogue for the past fifty years, it is hoped to remove the stigma of inferiority from sports labeled "minor" and to encourage more boys to go out for all sports.

The time, energy and ability demanded by the minor sports often equal or exceed those of the major sports. It is not unusual for the best boxer for a minor-sports athlete to obtain his insignia than for the boy who sports the big black letter emblematic of membership on a major team. A Pennsylvania a player on a minor sports team was required to win an intercollegiate championship before promotion by the Council on Athletics. Under the new order of things boxing, wrestling, swimming, water polo, gymnastics, fencing, tennis, lacrosse and golf will be governed by the same system of awarding insignia that applies to football, baseball, track, crew and basketball.

At Dartmouth a summary of student opinion was obtained before the radical step was taken. The committee of athletics was surprised to learn that forty-three per cent of those voting were in favor of abolishing all major and minor distinctions. Of those voting against it, many of them, when thinking the question over carefully, came around to the idea that major and minor distinctions were of no benefit. Only five per cent were satisfied with the previous classification of major and minor sports.

That other colleges will probably fall in line with the movement is shown by the fact that Cornell, New Hampshire, the University of Illinois, the University of Iowa, Wesleyan and Williams have already adopted or are contemplating the adoption of their own system of awarding insignia to participants in sports. Such a demonstration of interest after an athletic policy is healthy symptom and is a strong repudiation of the many who sweat and strain for their alma maters in lowly capacities for fear the blare of the band is the spotlight of fame.

A Romantic Story of the Minnesota Permanent School and Trust Funds—How It Was Started—How It Was Squandered.
Written for the Minnesota Editorial Association.

By JOHN STONE BARBER

VALUABLE LEAVINGS

Minnesota, at the tender age of se Martin County in the southern three score and ten—which is more tier,

Infancy for a sovereign state—has ac- cumulated a trust fund of $61,000,000 and has $200,000,000 in state, The state has converted into cash securities six millions of its patrimony, used 500,000 to pay for dead lion.

horses, and has two million acres left. On the two million acres that remain the state expects to realize in the next sixty years three times as much as from the six million acres that have been turned into funds.

There were 12,000,000 acres of school lands. There remain unsold 6,319,000 acres. In 65 counties there isn't a snitch left; in four counties there is a forty or a fraction; in five more a quarter section or less; substantially what is left is all in the north-eastern counties, consisting of the cutover country and including the mineral belt.

There were 120,000 in the agricultural college grant, reduced to 94,000 phenomenally large for all classes, in the process of selection, and 17,000 were in the direct grants to the university. Those have all been sold but 14,000 acres, lying in four counties of the cutover district.

The internal improvement grant of 500,000 acres was practically all absorbed in the misadventure with the railroad books of 1857; there remain 698 acres scattered in five counties.

The swamp land grant came to 4,711,000 acres after some had been lost to squatters and some had been brushed away by Indian reservations, and some had been picked up in railroad grants for which the state should have got less land if there had been anything left for "lieu" and a lot were held up by the land offices on the ground that the government survey notes were false and fictitious—the grant still conveyed to the state more than 4,700,000 acres, of which the state gave away nearly 2,000,000 acres to railroad companies and others.

Of what was left of the swamp lands, the state has sold 62,000 acres and has left 1,202,000 acres. There are some small lots, in two instances less than an acre, scattered through eight counties. Substantially the entire remaining swamp land is in the cutover counties in northeastern Minnesota.

Originally the constitution directed that the most valuable lands be sold first (Perversity that meant the lands that would fetch the best price). The sales began in the seventeenth counties southeast of the Minnesota river and in less than ten years they were all cleared up. In another ten years the school lands were practically all sold up for Mississippi values, as far as Otter Tail and as far west as Polk county.

But in 1902 there were sold 100,000 acres in the central and 268,000 acres in the northern counties, "being the least developed and wildest part of the state" at an average 24 cents an acre, better than the forty year average.

Naturally—but southern Minnesota was undeveloped and a wild country forty years earlier. Rules and prices changed with development all the way along.

Still, Dunn was never tired of complaining the proceeds of these sales in the rough and wild and "unlisted" part had been squandered in this county. It is only in the last sixteen years that there has been any awakening of public interest in passing and enforcing better laws for the registration of births and deaths.

Birth Certificate Is An Necessary As Automobile License, Bulletin Says

"A birth certificate for a child is like a driver's license to an automobile owner. To operate a car without a license will lead to arrest; to go through life without a properly registered birth certificate only leads to trouble at times when least expected. A birth certificate has become a person's driver's license thru life."

There were approximately 50,000 children born in Minnesota last year. Their births have been registered. There were 24,580 deaths in Minnesota last year. These deaths have been registered. The educational committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association in a bulletin this week advises people of the advantages of a birth certificate.

"No department of greater value to a child's future welfare can be located," declares the bulletin. "Without it others may cheat the child out of property; he may be barred from employment because of his youth and he will be a stranger to another country because there is no effort proof of his birth state.

"The proper registration of births and deaths is of the greatest importance not only to individuals but also to the public at large," declares the bulletin. "Such records are necessary in determining questions of parentage, heredity, legitimacy, personal infidelity, property rights, inheritance, citizenship, and in child labor law is of much value unless it rests on a system of birth and death records with certificates issued by the state by which the age of the child can produce at any time positive proof of birth, particularly at such times when the operation of the selective draft act was greatly hampered by the fact that in the service in which the age of the registrant was involved the legal evidence could be produced or existed by which the age of the individual could be positively proven. In almost every relation of life an official record of the first and most important event in the life of each individual, namely a positive record of his birth all of the accompanying circumstances, is only of the utmost value but is practically indispensable.

"Equally important is the proper registration of deaths. No civilized community should allow a human being to die and be buried without an official record being made of the fact. Aside from its indispensable in determining cases of death, relative death rates, ratio of death to births, duration of life, rates of life insurance and relative healthfulness of different states and communities. They are also of great value in preventing and detecting crime, in regulating management of cemeteries, in settling questions of claims for insurance and pensions and in settling estates, establishing heirship, etc."

Registration of births and deaths in the state as a part of the legal and official records of each individual has been required for centuries in many of the older European countries. Until recently this subject has been neglected in this country. It is only in the last sixteen years that there has been any awakening of public interest in passing and enforcing better laws for the registration of births and deaths.

Why Tattooing Is Passing

Recent surveys by national officers resulted in the discovery that tattooing, once an essential mark of the sailor, has practically disappeared from among enlisted men of the navy.

In the old days, navy officers say, when tattooing was a custom that bordered on tradition, enlisted men made it a point to have tattooing done in almost every large port they visited.

Why Chicks Can Walk

It takes a baby months to learn to walk. But watch a chicken! Try to imitate it, pops out of its shell. It stands about, managing its legs with not the least effort. This does not mean, says Popular Science Monthly, that some children are more intelligent than new-born babies. It merely indicates that balancing and standing are automatic in the chicken and not in the baby. The latter has to use its brain to control its legs.

Recent experiments at the University of Chicago show that the chick-brain is not necessary to reflex action, needing no brain at all.

Why People Yawn

Yawning is an involuntary and wide opening of the mouth and inhalation of breath, generally caused by weariness. Intense absorption caused by an investigation of problems, lack of breathing, or by an inclination to sleep; sometimes by hunger, etc. In some instances the frequency of the recurrence it becomes a real disease. Sometimes a severe heart disease may be liable to yawning fits. When yawning is troublesome, long, deep inspirations of the air at long intervals, relieves it.

State Food Commissioner Warns Against Illegal Sale of Diseased Poultry

The following communication has been received from N. J. Holmberg, state dairy and food commissioner, in regard to the sale of diseased poultry:

The sale of diseased poultry dressed or undressed, is a gross violation of the law. Much poultry, diseased and emaciated, annually reaches our markets of trade. The health authorities in some of the eastern states have taken steps to check this traffic by requiring that all poultry killed for consumption must be inspected before being killed. A large per cent of the Minnesota poultry raised is grain fed dressed and ready for retail sale.

"It we are to take steps to protect the good reputation of an enterprise in poultry shipped from this state, we must take care and be watchful at the farm and by the purchaser of farm products to eliminate all diseased or emaciated birds. The farmer and producer dealers should closely co-operate in seeing to it that no diseased birds be offered for sale, whether alive or dressed. We hope to forestall the possibility of an epidemic, which if once fixed, would be nothing short of a calamity to the poultry industry of the state."

Hans Rod, One of County's Earliest Homesteaders, Passes Away at Age of 85

Hans O. Rod, one of the first settlers in Pennington county, and a resident of this city since 1902, passed away at the Rod home last Sunday, at the age of 85.

Mr. Rod was born in Brammen, Norway, on July 29, 1843. He was married to Miss Julia Torgerson, and in 1882 the family emigrated to the United States, settling in Rockwood township. They lived there until 1902, when they moved to this city, having resided on their farm for 20 years.

Besides his wife, Mr. Rod is survived by three sons, Ole, Andrew and Hans, of Goodridge and Ole P. Rod of Oakdale, Calif.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock, at the Zion Lutheran church. Rev. K. L. Torgerson will conduct the services.

Dr. Haug Overturns Car Twice, Escapes Unhurt

Dr. O. M. Haug had a fortunate escape from serious injury last Sunday morning, when his car turned over on the road near Mahnomen. Although the car, a new Oakland sedan, turned over twice, it was damaged but little. The windshield, top, headlights, and a few dents here and there, is all the damage sustained.

Dr. Haug has just had his car installed in a brand new Packard garage, and has a thirteen year lease on the premises.

NEW CITIZENS TO COME HERE SAYS NEWMAN

State Will Benefit From Advertising Program Says Association Head

That in another year agricultural Minnesota will feel in earnest the benefits of the advertising which has been placed and which will be continued during the coming months is the opinion of Otto C. Newman of Wheaton, president of the Greater Minnesota Association which is now working jointly with the Ten Thousand Lakes Association.

From the first efforts of the two organizations to advertise Minnesota as a place in which to live, splendid results have been achieved. Inquiries have been received from all sections of the United States with even some from foreign lands. Letters are still being received in answer to the advertising and throughout the winter months an active follow-up campaign will be conducted to keep up the interest of those who have written for information on this state.

Speaking of the program now being undertaken to sell Minnesota to homeseekers, Mr. Newman says: "It takes time to pick a citizen out of the community and sell him on living in it. A man may buy an automobile or a suit of clothes with a ten minute sales talk, but when it comes time to changing his place of residence he usually considers on all angles carefully and it usually takes months and sometimes years from the time he starts considering before he actually moves. It is our intent on to keep in touch with those who have written us concerning opportunities in Minnesota before they have time to forget. Our correspondent have come here from other states and have come out thinking Minnesota looking for a farm home. Most of these families combined business with pleasure and looked over the farm property while visiting the lakes and playgrounds here.

"It has been our experience that the tourist business does much in bringing new settlers to our state. They are attracted here first by what we offer in recreation and after they arrive they discover that Minnesota is a wonderful place in which to live as well as in which to play. In our less cold program we hope to interest the prospective homeseeker to visit our state and look for a home while here on a vacation. It is our experience that tourists are in the past will come time to invest in Minnesota or find a home here to live."

Where poultry are annoyed by chicken mites, a simple and inexpensive way of protecting them from the attacks of these pests is to provide readily decontaminate roosts direct from the floor and not touching the walls. These should be painted occasionally with anthracene oil or petroleum. When ticks have once been established in an old house any new chickens should be added to the flock until they have been quarantined for 10 days in temporary coops.

comprises 45 blocks making an average of $545 per block. This assessment could be spread over three or more years. By using a 30 inch sewer instead of a 36 inch the cost could be reduced $4,000 but the capacity would be reduced from 22 sec. ft. to 14 sec. ft. This being a reduction of less than one-third of the cost and more than one third of the capacity.

The question is raised whether this could be extended so as to eliminate the sewage lift on Huron Ave., and Fir St. This could be done but would entail an expense entirely out of proportion with the benefits. To accomplish that end, it would be necessary to lay the sewer deeper for a distance of 3,570 ft. and extend a 24 inch pipe for an additional distance of 2,280 ft to the lift. Storm sewer connections could easily be made on 5th, 7th, and 8th Sts. on Main and Lallive Avenues at a nominal increase in cost. This may be necessary in case of paving Main Ave. on the new Trunk Highway No. 32. If that should be done an additional Ave could be spent in Sewer Dist. No. 1.

EAST SIDE:

The east side sewer was designed as a sanitary sewer. It should receive the last foul slop storm water admitted. The 7 inch sewer in Block 1 Middle River, to haul gravel for a six foot road, is not large enough for this purpose. This road has been graded this summer, and is now ready for surfacing. In gravelling job, there will be an all-weather road all the way from this city to Middle River. The cost of gravelling job, there will be an all-weather road all the way from this city to Middle River. The cost of gravelling would be $4,000 per mile, for a price of 14 cents per yard mile, a total cost for the six miles of $5,700.

Scarlet fever, chicken pox, and the dry thunderstorm, is due to the assumption and occurs in the same manner as any other thunderstorm, states Mr. Weather Bureau, U. S. Department of Agriculture. In regions where the lower air is extremely dry the water vapor necessary to rain forms, so high up that all or nearly all of it evaporates in the middle air as it falls, and the thunderstorm is a dry one.

Flames Destroy R. L. Falls Fire Fighting Equipment

Red Lake Falls lost its fire hall last week, when fire destroyed the fire hall and other city offices which were housed in the old building known as "City Hall." Flames were first noticed in the rear of the record and story by a party returning from a dance at 2:30 Wednesday morning, and an alarm turned in.

Although the Opsata fire hall building was in ruins before the fire fighting equipment could be taken out and put into use, the building was erected thirty years ago, and has served as fire hall, police station, council room, and fund headquarters. A fund has already been started for a new community building.

Old Binders Are Used To Thresh Sweet Clover In Fields Without Cutting

The following article, clipped from an Iowa paper, will be of interest to the large number of Pennington county farmers who cut sweet clover for seed.

Many an old binder is being resurrected from the junk pile and rebuilt for harvesting sweet clover seed. Almost all that is needed is a platform and a reel. The platform is made light and with an endless apron at the back, the reel is speeded up and sometimes reinforced and the sickle replaced with a heavy piece of dimension lumber. The reel is literally beat from the standing stalks and the stalks are then left in the field where they are most needed. Devices of this kind are in common use wherever much sweet clover is grown and harvested for seed. In Clay, Calhoun and Dallas counties as well as in the counties along the Missouri river a binder-harvester is commonly used. Among the first to be used in Iowa was a harvester constructed by W. C. Childers and Max Westenaire of Lottawattamie county. There was a host of imitators in number of others in Western Iowa.

There are still some folks old fashioned enough to believe that the veranda ought to be built on the side of the house instead of facing the alley.

TEACHERS OF COUNTY WILL CONVENE HERE

Annual Institute will be Held at Court Rooms Next Thursday and Friday

ATTENDANCE COMPULSORY FOR RURAL TEACHERS

Law Requires Full Payment of Salaries While Schools Are Closed

Seventy-five present and prospective teachers in the rural schools of the county will assemble in the city for the annual Teachers' Institute Thursday and Friday of next week, Sept. 20 and 21.

Although not all the schools of the county will have opened at the time of the Institute, all teachers who have signed contracts to teach are required to attend. Institute schedules are issued by the state department so as to allow five instructors to conduct institutes in each of the 87 counties of the state. Consequently some must be held in September, whether or not all the schools are in session.

Miss Belle Dean will conduct the Pennington county institute. In addition to the rural teachers, the members of the Teacher Training department of the local high school will attend the sessions.

Although only Thursday and Friday will be spent in institute, the entire week from the 17th thru the 21st is Institute Week. The first three days may be devoted to observation and visiting schools.

"The instructor will give the greatest portion of her time to the new curriculum or course of study and our system of classifying pupils," says the announcement sent to the teachers by superintendent Gunderson. "The new curriculum will be distributed to each and every teacher for use in her school this and the remaining years it will be in force.

"Every teacher at present teaching, together with those not yet employed, but who expect to teach in the county this year, is urged to be present. Instruction will be given in the use of all the different blank forms for warding the teachers from this office. Reorganization of the Teachers' League will be discussed. The use of the different books in the school, library, and classification will be taken up. Every phase of the forthcoming school year will receive their share of attention. The compulsory education law will be explained carefully with all necessary instruction for its observance. Spelling will be another one-hour, everything of such a nature we will help you give us a satisfactory school year will receive attention.

"It therefore behooves you to be present as no excuses for absence will be granted, except in cases of extreme cases of sickness or the passing of some of your near relatives.

In order to clarify the state law regarding payment of teachers during the Institute week, Supt. Gunderson has called the attention of school boards to the following provision, in sec. 358 of the School Laws:

It shall be the duty of every teacher in an incorporated elementary school in the county to attend such institutes during the term or duration, unless excused by the county superintendent or board of examiners, and such institute shall continue from the county superintendent a certificate indicating the days attended, which, when presented to the clerk of the school district in which the teacher is employed, shall entitle the teacher to be paid by the time her school has reached the full amount of the actual attendance at such institute.

The sessions of the institute will be held in the county court room. As the complete program has not been forwarded by the department it will be announced at the opening of the institute.

Charge for Hunting Ducks on Thief Lake Eliminated This Fall, Says Forder

An announcement made last week by game warden Sandy Orr, Thief River Falls, Middle River will be greeted with enthusiasm by the many local sportsmen who like to hunt ducks on Sunday and the rest of the week.

There will be no charge for hunting ducks on Thief Lake this fall, according to Mr. Forder. In previous years a small charge has been made for the shooting privilege there, which has been a source of considerable annoyance to hunters.

The expected rush for hunting licenses has not materialized to date, according to County Auditor T. O. Iverson. Not more than a hundred have been sold during the past week, in addition to the hundred sold previously.

City Owned House For Isolation of Contagious Diseases is Recommended

A municipally owned "pest house" for the isolation of contagious cases was advocated by Dr. Proehlich, city health officer, at the city council meeting Tuesday night.

"The situation is especially bad, he said, in regard to teachers and student-town students, who at present have no place to go if they come down with a contagious disease. Many families do not care to have the entire house quarantined because of the illness of a boarder, and confusion has resulted in the past in a number of cases. He suggested that the city buy a small house, and move it next to the city poor house, where cooking could be done for the patients at the contagious ward.

There is at present one case of scarlet fever in the city, Dr. Proehlich said. For a considerable time last summer there was not a single case of contagious disease in the city. Only a few cases of chicken pox and measles were reported.

GERMAN EDUCATOR COMMERCIAL CLUB SPEAKER TODAY

"Is Germany Coming Back" Is Subject of Prof. Max Zimpel of Frankfort

Professor Max Zimpel of the Fargo Agricultural College will address the Commercial Club at noon today on "Is Germany Coming Back?" Prof. Zimpel is an exchange professor from Frankfort, Germany, where he was superintendent of the elementary schools. He has been an instructor of German at the Fargo school for two years, and will return to Frankfort within a short time. Prof. Zimpel was one of the speakers at the N. E. A. convention in Minneapolis in June and the officers of the Commercial Club consider his visit very fortunate in securing him for this luncheon.

While in North Dakota, Prof. Zimpel has been making a study of primitive bricquetting industry in that state, the process, which has been used successfully, consisting of a mold to make a coal that is equal to anthracite in heat value, but can be produced at soft coal prices. Dr. Froehlich described the process at the Commercial Club meeting last Thursday.

No. Dak. State Hail Commission Paid Out Over Three Million

According to the annual report of the North Dakota state hail insurance commission just made public, $3,271,550 were paid out on 16,799 claims in 1927. This was a considerable increase over 1926, when $1,702,065 was paid out on 9,744 claims. The highest year was 1924, when $3,667,000 was paid out on 19,905.

The financial condition of the hail department will permit the elimination of the flat state hail tax, the report said. It was decided at previous meetings that when the surplus in the department reached $4,000,000 the flat tax should be eliminated. The surplus is now $4,016,611.

Baudette Will Install A New Electric Light Plant

A new electric light plant, with power furnished by oil-burning Diesel engines, will be installed by the village of Baudette. The new plant, which will displace the present steam plant, is expected to cost about $250,000 when completely installed. A contract has been signed with the manufacturing company which provides for payments out of the profits of the plant alone, no special or additional taxes to be levied. A saving of $5,000 a year is expected in operation costs. An offer of $250,000 for the present plant was presented to a mass meeting of residents by the representative of a private light and power company, but a vote showed strong sentiment in favor of municipal ownership.

This great public acceptance tells more of what Pontiac offers at $745 than even the most complete listing of such features as Fisher bodies, 186 cu. in. engine, the G-M-R cylinder head, cross-flow radiator, foot-controlled headlights, coincidental lock, etc., etc.! THE SENATORIAL RACE

Most of the political fireworks this year will be exploded in the national campaign and even in Pennington county this national campaign promises to become decidedly hot. According to present indications there isn't going to be much of a fight as far as the state candidates are concerned.

There will be some thunder in the senatorial race. This contest is going to be interesting. Nelson and Shipstead are both capable campaigners—both capable men too. The odds are decidedly in Shipstead's favor. There is no important issue upon which they disagree. Nelson is a progressive conservative. Shipstead has proven himself to be a conservative progressive. The big appeal of the Nelson supporters seems to be that their candidate should be elected because he is a member of the dominant political party and would therefore be able to exert more influence. There may be a little truth in this attitude but it is doubtful that a majority of the voters will subscribe to it. Most voters feel that if a public official has done fairly well during his first term of office he is entitled to another term and it is generally agreed that Shipstead has been a fairly good senator.

A COMFORTING THOUGHT

We have been encouraged during the past few months to hope that the world has actually entered upon a program of peace. It seems at any rate that real progress is being made in developing an anti-war spirit among the peoples of the earth. We have been encouraged lately too by the acknowledgement by both the major political parties that the most important problem that faces us as a nation is the illness of agriculture. There is some reason to believe that a series of operations will be performed in the near future, whichever political party wins the election, that will restore the farmer once more to the friendly side of the ledger. We are much encouraged by these prospects. But these are not the only reasons we are feeling glad. Our fine spirits are due to a prospect even more sublime than the thought of peace on earth or happy farmers. We have read the words of a prophet who says that in a few years our worst enemy, the greatest single obstacle to our happiness, the coal dealer, will have been relegated to the dust bins of society along with town criers, bar tenders and lamp lighters.

The prophet whom we refer to is one John L. Hodgson, and the prophesy, which appeared in a French magazine that has a tome like an Indian village, and was reproduced in this week's Literary Digest is to the effect that in a few years we will acquire sense enough to run the fuel dealers out of town and connect our heating plants to the great heating system in the center of the earth. It is a simple thing. All we have to do is sink a shaft five or six miles, place a coil at the bottom of the hole and turn on the water. There will be no fuel to shovel and no fuel dealer to dodge because you still owe him a young fortune for last season's favors. It is the ideal solution to a problem that makes us very unhappy at least six months of every year.

Pointing out that man has already taken some steps to utilize the heat of the earth by harnessing hot springs and the hot steam from volcanic vents, Hodgson points out a possibilitlie offered by a thorough exploitation of such heat, first, the obtaining of heat and energy at any point and at will; second, the decentralization of industry and the installation of residence districts in sites of beauty, far from smoke and dust; and third, the colonization of the polar regions and the irrigation of the arid regions. He states further.

"Below the earth's surface are everywhere burning-hot rocks." We find them when in mining or tunneling we meet with a temperature that rises higher the deeper we go.

"Figures resulting based on these observations alone us that in most cases if we dig into the earth to a depth of eight thousand metres (about 2 700 feet) we shall reach a temperature of 200 degrees Centigrade, and that if we go on to 50,000 meters we shall find one of 500 degrees. In certain regions as in Yellowstone Park, in the volcanic district of Lardarello, in Tuscany, and even in Bath, England, there are higher temperatures still.

"The heat of the rocks consantintively near the earth's surface does not come from the primitive molten matter of which it is supposed that the earth was formed. It is due to the slow disintegration of the innumerable atoms of radium that these surface rocks contain.

"The radiation of heat that we observe is not a sign that the earth is cooling. All the evidence that we now possess tends, on the contrary, to prove that the earth is becoming warmer year by year.

"If we could reel off by 860 degrees a mass of rock of one cubic kilometer (about ½ cubic mile) the heat obtained would equal that obtained by burning 50 million tons of coal—a quantity sufficient to supply for a year all the power plants in the United States.

"The heat stored up within the earth is 30 millions of times greater than that obtainable from all the coal still in the earth.

"Sooner or later the time will come when engineers will have seriously to ask this question: To what extent can this heat-reserve be utilized? And this time is nearer than we think.

"Already there are many who think that coal is a precious source of chemical substances that only a primitive industrial civilization would allow itself to destroy by burning it up. Coal gives us coke, gas, tar, dyes, oils, explosives and fertilizers.

"During the next twenty years the world is threatened with a lack of young, flexible wood, which will require the use of inoxidizable steel in many cases where wood is now employed. And this or that great project of construction, involving the use of steel, upon which the engineers may now embark, will increase the value of coke and at the same time the necessity of recourse to sources of heat and energy other than coal."

The straw vote that we are running on Hoover and Smith hasn't caused a great deal of excitement but the results are interesting. It is evident that the community is not going to make it unanimous on November 6th. What awful goofs are make of ourselves in these elections. Half of us are going to consider the best interests of Pennington county and vote for Hoover. The other half are also going to consider the best interests of Pennington county and vote for Smith. And the side that loses is going to feel that there is no justice in land and that the country is going to the dogs. The winners will feel that virtue has been rewarded.

GOVERNOR SMITH AND THE TARIFF

(St. Paul Pioneer Press)

An adequate tariff is the foundation of farm relief. This is true, not because Herbert Hoover said it in his recent speech of acceptance, but because farmers of the Northwest have long known it from practical experience. The protective tariff policy of the Republican party more than any other principle has held them in allegiance to that political faith. The Democratic party now having made professed conversion from its former free trade tendencies to the protective system, an examination is proper into the soundness of its beliefs, particularly as affecting agriculture. Both the party and its candidates can rightly be considered probationers subject to inquiry both as to past record and present orthodoxy in doctrine.

Candidate Smith in his speech of acceptance made reference to the Underwood Tariff bill, saying: "The Democratic party does not, and under my leadership will not, advocate any sudden or drastic revolution in our economic system which would cause business upheaval and popular distress. This principle was recognized as far back as the passage of the Underwood Tariff bill. Our platform restates it in unmistakable language."

The Underwood bill was enacted into law in 1913, at the beginning of the Wilson administration when the Democratic party was in control of Congress. Having been cited by Governor Smith as a reference for his conservative opposition to "any sudden or drastic revolution in our economic system," its schedules and changes are worthy examination, particularly as they applied to agricultural products in which the Northwest is so vitally concerned.

Prior to 1913 there was in effect the Payne-Aldrich act, passed by a Republican Congress in 1909. It imposed varying duties upon a variety of products of the farm. For example, beef, veal, mutton and pork were protected at 1½ cents per pound. Bacon and ham had duties of 1 cents per pound. The duty on milk was 2 cents per gallon, on cream 5 cents per gallon, on butter 6 cents per pound, on eggs in the shell 5 cents per 4 doz, on corn 15 cents per bushel, on wheat 25 cents per bushel, on potatoes 25 cents per bushel.

Then came the Underwood tariff of 1913, which according to Governor Smith established the principle of no sudden or drastic revolution in our economic system. There is something amiss here. The facts seem not to agree with the candidate's declaration, at least so far as the tariff on agricultural products is concerned. All rate butter of the commodities cited above, protected by the Payne-Aldrich bill, were put on the free list in the Underwood bill. In fact, the revolution in the agricultural economic system was so drastic that the farm was swept practically clean of tariff protection.

A few farm products were given protection but at drastically reduced rates. Butter, for example, was reduced by the Underwood act from 6 cents per pound to 2½ cents, only to be raised to 8 cents in the present tariff law. The rates on barley and barley products were cut in half but have since been restored. The duty on oats was lowered by the Underwood act from 15 cents to 6 cents per bushel, but it is now back where it was before. Potatoes have been lifted from the Underwood free list to protection of 50 cents per hundred pounds. Hay that had been cut in half is restored to its $4 per ton duty.

When Governor Smith was basing his reassurance to business on the Underwood tariff act, he unfortunately must have failed to read the agricultural schedules. Certainly the Northwest has different views as to what constitutes sudden or drastic revolution in its economic system.

PublicForum

Thief River Falls, Minnesota, Sept. 9, 1928

Dear Editor:

I read in the last weeks issue of the Times, that the Democratic will for may organize "Al Smith Clubs" in the ninth Congressional District, and in that way get the Gospel of Al Smith to all those who have no use for Al, and the doctrine he holds to be right.

Well Mr. Editor you will agree with me that it is well and proper, as all the other Parties are doing the same thing, but then its not what I am trying to get at. While reading down the article I found the word that struck me, to the very point. The word was "reforming". Please mark this, as here is what he tells in part." There are also a great many members of both the Republican and Labor Parties who will not vote for Hoover but who will support Smith once they are satisfied that attacks on his moral integrity are unfounded." Yes unfounded indeed.

Here I wish to submit some of the charges that have been against Gov. Al Smith and they are taken from the Spokesman Review of Spokane Washington, and show Al Smith's liquor record.

Voted 10 times against Local Option.

Voted 4 times in favor of Saloons in church and School neighborhoods.

Killed State Cops Prohibition enforcement Law.

Voted Twice to Increase Saloon Liquor Selling Hours.

Voted three times to repeal Law closing Saloons on Sunday.

Sponsored Law to increase for Hours of open Saloons.

Sponsored Law to permit Saloons within 200 feet of schools.

Voted in favor of Hotel Bars, in towns dry by Local option.

Sponsored Law to permit Brewers Hotels to convict Saloon Keepers.

Voted twice for Raines Law Hotels.

And yet in spite of such a bad record, Al Smith will say that he is and always has been against the Saloon. Now you red blooded defenders of our great country, the issued U. S. A, and our dear constitution, which is so dear to us, are you going to vote for a man with such a bad record. Indeed not.

Yours truly,
Sam Brandvold.

Dear Editor:

It is seriously happens that the legislature fails or refuses to pass some law that the people need and want and at other times they do pass laws that the people don't want. Therefore, the initiative amendment would give the people the right to start a new law by petition and have a direct vote of the people whether it be accepted or not. The referendum amendment would give the people the right to challenge any law passed by the legislature and have it submitted to a direct vote of the people as to whether it should be put in law or not. The Recall amendment would make it possible to challenge any public officer by means of petitions and force him to submit to a special election to determine whether he should continue to serve in that office or if he should get out and let someone else take his place.

The principal argument against them is that they would bring on a lot of special elections and the attendant expense to the public. Experience in states where they have been in use that for the first few years they do bring on some special elections but as soon as legislators and other public officials realize that the people have these weapons and can use them effectively, they take good care to see to it that there shall be no occasion to use them.

These three amendments to the constitution would provide the people with the machinery for direct popular government, and the conditions enforced by the Farmer Labor Association will support the submission of such amendments with the proper safeguards.

W. H. Quist, Sec. 9th Cong. District Farmer Labor Association.

VICTORIOUS

in Every Test and Fulfilling Every Promise the NEW Maytag observes Its First Anniversary

ONE year ago, I announced the New Maytag as our latest and greatest achievement. Noteworthy refinements and striking improvements, including a new method of soap and water removal, were incorporated in the new washer. Its set standards of convenience and washing efficiency that had never been known before.

During the year that has passed, hundreds of thousands of NEW Maytags have been introduced into as many homes, and each time subject to the famous Maytag trial basis: "If it doesn't sell itself, don't keep it." Rigorous exacting weekday tests assailed the New Maytag, and it has emerged victorious to a degree exceeding my highest expectations.

A year ago, the New Maytag enjoyed a prestige inherited from Maytags of the past. Today the New Maytag enjoys a prestige in its own right, won by demonstrated performance. It has advanced still farther in its world leadership.

Charley Says:

Some people think that autumn with its falling leaves and ripening grain is a sad time of year, but for those who planted wisely and cultivated well and protected their crop as far as possible against disaster, the harvest is the most joyful of all the year.

Just so, some people dread the thought of old age, but for those who plan for the future, save according to a definite system and carry life insurance sufficient with provision for income during disability, old age is the time when freed from many of life's responsibilities, we may really live more fully than ever before.

WELCOME!

Welcome, Freshmen! We, as upper classmen, invite you to share in all our activities, sports, and pleasant times during your first year in Lincoln. It won't be long before you will accustom yourselves to our routine of work and play. We urge all Freshmen one, too, so we know how you must feel to enter such a large student body. But since you are now one of us we very heartily wish you a happy school year in our midst.

We also extend a hearty welcome to the new teachers, Mr. Swenson and Mr. Lanning, who are for the first time inspiring students of Lincoln High. We hope you will find your work with us pleasant, and your association with pupils and faculty alike, beyond your expectations.

VARIETY

"Are you glad school is starting?" "Oh, it all depends on the change." Having heard this several times I began to wonder what it really meant. Then the thought came "Variety". Variety is the spice of life, of course. Why do people who worry a great deal over one thing go insane? Because they give their mind no variety of food.

Since we then see that variety is essential let us look at the different kinds of variety we have in school. First, we have variety of subjects. We do not study material of the same nature all the time. Second, we have variety of teachers and students. We do not look at the same faces all the time. There in turn have a variety of interests.

We also have a variety of activities. For example, you may go to a basketball game and yell to your Bear's content—give vent to your stored up vocal sounds.

So you, who are limited to high school "dull" just look at the "Variety" we have!

Mother: "Son, do I smell tobacco on your breath?"

Son: "Yes, mother."

Mother: "Then you will stay in or stop going out with those girls."

"I wish," said the chief bore, "that one of you chaps would give me a cure for insomnia."

"Have you ever" remarked one of his victims, "tried talking to yourself?"

Cure For Crime

Topic of Holmes

Students of Lincoln were delightfully entertained and greatly instructed last Monday when Mr. Holman addressed the "Society for the Friendless," spoke for a short while. This society has its national headquarters in Kansas City and state headquarters at Minneapolis. Its main purpose is to help the friendless who come from the penitentiaries to become people of character and respect.

Mr. Holman stated that Henry Ford has employed 26,000 of these and only 2 failed to make good. Three important points he spoke of were work, first: it is possible to come back after having gone wrong. Second: it is a very difficult thing, and third, it does not pay to use such things in this world to keep us from going wrong.

He drew a very effective picture of the world we now live in compared to that of our forefathers. "Get busy," he said, "and make this world what it ought to be and you will have no trouble with crime. Get busy! There are great rewards for those who think. Get busy! Here's your chance. What you do right now in this high school will determine your place in the world."

The original song that Mr. Holman quoted added zest to the talk. His speech proved to be worthwhile and left food for thought and facts to be remembered.

35 CANDIDATES OUT FOR FOOTBALL TEAM

Capt. Dahlow Leads Returning Veterans Who Will Be Nucleus of Squad

With the opening of school the fall football season has started once again at Lincoln High. The boys answered Coach Eck's call for candidates Monday, Sept. 3 and have been going strong ever since, drilling on the fundamentals and getting "one man summer" worked out of their systems.

The squad suffered a great loss from graduation took its annual toll of athletes who are as follows: Owen Severson, Gibson, Wengaler, Snyder, Gibson, Larson, Foran, Cloutier, Beasler, Williamson, Myron, and Benson.

The loss of a group of brilliants such as these is enough to make any coach sigh. Nevertheless, with 35 men out, and with so many positions open, the incentive to make good will keep every man on his toes.

The members of last year's squad returning with added experience will make them invaluable. Among these is Clarence Dahlow, this season's captain, who has proved himself capable of this distinction. "Boomer" also captains this season's basketball squad.

Last week's practice was spent on the fundamentals of football, blocking and tackling and in knocking the gridders into shape. It is the desire of the coach to develop a good blocking and tackling team such as has always characterized the Lincoln elevens.

Following the fundamentals comes signal drill which the squad has been working on since Monday of this week. The boosters have been busy getting their legs in trim while the backs practiced their punts and "dodged" out the ends.

Only one open date, Oct. 6, remains in the schedule, all other dates being filled. Seven games have been arranged four of which will be home games.

The first game will come off Sept. 22 when Grafton comes to meet the Lincoln High gridders in their own back yard. Grafton and Thief River fought to a tie of 6 all in last year's only conference contest which was played at Grafton.

Three home games in a row will take place when Crookston, Warren and East Grand Forks come in the order named.

Bemidji and Grand Forks, teams not played last year, have been put on a two year contract, this season's games to be played on their home fields, next year's games being played here.

The Hallberg game, played on their home field, Nov. 11, will wind up the season.

Miss Leavitt, who has not begun teaching yet, on account of illness, will probably commence next Monday. Her illness was due to overwork. She attended summer school at Fort Collins, Colorado, where she specialized in library work. During her absence she has been ably substituted by Miss Askre.

Mr. Ophelm because of illness was absent from school one day last week. Mrs. Heap acted as substitute.

GIRLS DRUM CORPS URGED BY SWENSON

Girls Also Invited to Enter Beginners' Band, to be Organized Soon

Stressing the merits of the school band and girls' drum corps, Mr. Swenson called a meeting of the girls of Lincoln High last Wednesday.

He expressed his surprise at not seeing girls in the band as well as the boys. A very interesting offer was made by the band manager to remedy this situation. Any girl who is interested in joining the band can purchase an instrument and start from the very beginning to learn how to play it. Meetings would be held at a specified time where the beginners would receive their first instruction in playing their own instruments. There is no doubt but that great progress will be made in a short time.

Another interesting suggestion was made in the line of musical instruments, a girls' Drum Corps. Drums for the organization could be secured at very reasonable prices. A few girls from this season's band with just the drum sticks to determine what girls would be best suited for this type of thing, rhythm being the outstanding principle.

The girls who would then wish to make a success of it would purchase their drums and receive free instruction from Mr. Swenson.

An organization of this type is indeed a novelty, very appropriate for athletic occasions, and very interesting. Already a few girls have responded to this offer.

Many Improvements Made During Summer Months

A great number of improvements have been made in Lincoln High during the summer months which are beneficial to both teachers and students.

The Home Economics laboratory has been changed so as to accommodate twenty girls. Last year there were only sixteen because of the shortage of room. An instructor's desk has been ordered for the cooking surfaces, Sara Stenson and Norma Gerber. Tables with plastic enamel tops have been installed which are very much more convenient as well as 100% better in appearance. These changes will help to make the cooking laboratory a more pleasant room to work in during 1928-29.

There are twenty-four lockers installed in the south hall for the use of the senior girls. Each girl is given a key for a charge of fifty cents, which will be returned at the close of the term if the key is returned. There will be two girls for each locker.

Besides the changes in our school building, we have a campus to be proud of. This is due to the faithful labor of our janitors during vacation time.

Bye Welcomes Students In Talk Given Opening Day

Freshmen to begin and Sophomores, Juniors and Seniors to resume their studies in Lincoln High School gaily entered the assembly last Tuesday morning.

They were heartily welcomed by Supt. Bye who told of the opportunities are encountering at the present age. He explained that waiting for opportunities is not the way to do it, all times using effort preparing for them will never bring success. It was an inspiring talk arousing immediate ambition for the high school year. This was followed by singing the usual ditty "How do you do" to each teacher as Mr. Bye introduced the members of the faculty.

Principal Hand then explained the routine of things as carried on in previous years relating them to those of today and relating some which came for the first time. He also told of prospects for the coming year in all lines of activities but stressed studies as the most important.

The students were then instructed for the morning, after having received a copy of their enrollment cards. In the afternoon classes began at 1:15 o'clock with the eight periods of fifteen minutes each.

GIRLS' GLEE CLUB ORGANIZED

Miss Ellis announces that the Girls' Glee Club will be organized next week. Any girl who is interested in singing is invited to join. Rehearsals will be held every Tuesday and Thursday at 3:30 o'clock.

Boys Will Be Required To Wear Standard Gym Uniform

In previous years only girls have been required to have gym outfits. This year Coach Boe is introducting boys' gymnastic suits.

The apparel will consist of white jerseys, white trunks, and tennis shoes; and all boys will be required to have them. This addition is well liked by many sisters because of the shortage of room. An instructor's desk has been ordered for the cooking surfaces, Sara Stenson and Norma Gerber. Tables with plastic enamel tops have been installed which are very much more convenient as well as 100% better in appearance. Our Little Corner

No. 38 SEPT. 13, 1928 Vol. 2

Too many times the bedroom is furnished with odd pieces left from the bedroom suites of long ago. You'll like our walnut bedroom suites. Come in and see them.

A rug must be useful as well as ornamental — and that's what Wilton rugs are. They wear and they look beautiful.

A tourist stepped at a lonely farmhouse. He noticed four good-sized holes in the door. "And what's the idea of the four holes on these?" he asked the head of the house.

"We got four cats," explained the native, "and they don't like to be put out."

"But why don't you have just one good sized hole?"

"Hell, stranger, when I say 'Scat' I mean 'SCAT!'"

If you've never sat in a Cogwell chair, you don't know what the dictionary means by "comfort!" Come in and try one.

Nothing like a comfortable chair and a good smoke after a hard day at the office. And a smoking stand will save you the trouble of getting up between smokes. We have them at all prices.

Are you prepared to pull the divan port up in front of the fire place this winter and let the old wind blow? Lawkins' overstuffed suites make those long winter evenings mighty comfortable.

Instead of walking through the mud to the district school house, modern vehicles pull up a comfortable chair in front of the radio. We have some mighty comfortable chairs.

One local lady who owns a Monarch electric stove, fixes her coffee and does her baking powder biscuits in the oven the night before. At the right time the next morning the stove turns on automatically, and then it turns off automatically, too, so everything is ready for breakfast, when she gets up. How'd you like that feeling?

You'll naturally expect us to pervert the Maytag. But talk to the owners. See what they say about this wonderful washer.

8 RECORD-BREAKING MONTHS!

NOW August has added its sweeping quality to Willys-Overland's impressive total for 1928. Eight consecutive months have broken every record for the corresponding months in all of Willys-Overland's 20-year history.

Last month 68% more people bought Whippet and Willys-Knight cars than in August, 1927—a gain of more than two-thirds!

Experienced motorists are quick to appreciate the superiority of the Whippet Four, with its many engineering advantages never before brought to the light car field;—the Whippet Six, the world's lowest priced Six, with 7-bearing crankshaft and other costly car features;—and the Willys-Knight Six, which now, at the lowest prices in history, brings the unmatchable smoothness, silence, power and operating economy of the patented double sleeve-valve engine within easy reach of thousands of new buyers.

Alfalfa Loss Traced To Late Fall Cutting

Late fall cutting of alfalfa weakens the plant and invites loss during the winter. An interesting study based on a questionnaire mailed to alfalfa growers in Dakota county is reported by W. E. Watson, county agent. Seventy-seven farmers filled out and returned the questionnaire. Thirty-seven said their fields went through the winter satisfactorily. All the others lost their entire acreage or lost part of their stands left.

"Of those who had a good stand left, 31 currently under discussion, 27 gave the reason, "spring of the 40 acre last fall." Alfalfa 23 had cut only one crop three times. Most of the unprotected fields cut three times, especially if the third cutting was late, winter killed, while a majority of the fields were cut only once or twice survived the winter. The third cutting certainly weakens the crop and invites parasites.

Dr. C. O. Rost of the University Farm staff says the winter killing of 1927-27 does not appear to have been due to anything specifically to quantity of fine or inoculation, but was largely a matter of winter protection. Neither was it the variety, fields that were largely planted had any definite relation to the killing. Lose in fields were well established it is thought the farmer had purchased the seed as common.

Never forget that starting something you can't finish is bound to have an end.

Warroad Residents Harvest $25,000 Blueberry Crop

This year's blueberry crop probably brought $25,000 to the settlers in the country south of Warroad, according to Neal Hill's, merchant and postmaster at Hiwood, who handles a considerable portion of the crop. The blueberry season usually means the cleaning up of any little grocery bills that may have accumulated and also the laying in of stocks of supplies says Mr. Hiles. Many families pick berries for $15 per day while the season lasts and it is an important item in the year's earnings.—Warroad Pioneer.

A simple way to destroy ants on lawns of small area is to spray with kerosene emulsion or with a very strong soap wash, prepared by dissolving any common laundry soap in water at the rate of ¼ or 1 pound of soap to a gallon of water. If the ant nests can be found, boiling water or a small quantity of kerosene will sometimes kill the insects in the nests. These fluids cannot, however, be applied in quantity with safety to the grass on lawns. In this case the soap wash should prove preferable.

Farmers Advised Against Marketing Damp Grain

The Northwest has an unusually good quality small grain crop this year, according to George M. Johnson, President of the Minnesota Wheat Growers, and a leading farmer of Elbow Lake, Minnesota.

"But along with this good crop," said Mr. Johnson, "the farmer needs to watch the marketing end. This year wheat especially figured conservative. Much of it was cut on the green side. Some of it was and is being threshed before the moisture content of the kernel was below the danger point. Wheat with too much moisture is likely to heat, and if not cared for, will binburn.

"Wheat with even less than the amount of moisture goes through what we farmers call 'sweat.' Whether one's wheat is a marketed direct from the machine or is delivered from the bin during the 'sweat' period, the surplus moisture shows up in the lowering of the protein test upon which the millers buy their hard spring wheat. Since the premium on fifteen percent protein is now ranging as high as forty cents per bushel, or about eight cents for each percent over normal, the effect of a cut in protein test due to moisture is eagerly hard on the farmer's pocketbook.

"Here are a few suggestions:

1. Don't thresh your grain until it is dry.

2. If it is damp when threshed put ventilators made of boards nailed together through the grain in the bin.

3. Don't market until your grain is 'bone-dry.'"

WARROAD FARMER BUILDS BIG BARN

The new barn on the Andrew Lasdin farm is about completed. It is 84 by 66 in size with storage capacity for fifty tons of hay. It is a modern and well equipped dairy barn and will house the Landis herd of Guernseys. This herd has been built up in the last ten years and has produced an average of over 300 pounds of butterfat per cow the last two years.

The Minnesota average production per cow is around 175 pounds per year, and in Denmark, the world's greatest dairy country, the average production is 222 per cow per year.

There are several kinds in Warroad territory that produce an average of 300 pounds per cow per year.—Warroad Pioneer.

LIGNITE BASE OF GERMANY'S NEW INDUSTRY

Prof. Max Zimpel Tells Commercial Club How Germany Has Come Back

NO. DAK. FIRM BUYS MANUFACTURING RIGHTS

Exploitation of Lignite Deposits Will Make Northwest Great Industrial Center

Thief River Falls as a midway point between a great fuel producing center in North Dakota and the iron mines of Northern Minnesota was foreseen by Prof. Max Zimpel, exchange professor from Frankfort, Germany, who addressed the Commercial Club last Thursday noon on the "How Germany is Coming Back."

"The prosperity of this section is tied up in the great lignite coals of North Dakota," he said. "That state has a very large section of the fuel reserve of the nation. In the past it has been of little value, being lignite in its natural state is not a satisfactory fuel. Now a process has been perfected whereby that vast fuel deposit can be commercially exploited."

The same process that has contributed greatly to Germany's come-back during the past few years is now being used to develop North Dakota's greatest natural resource, he said. For several years after the war Germany was on the verge of bankruptcy. Her richest coal and iron mines were taken away, as were her colonies and her shipping. The best manhood of the nation had been killed or maimed. The value of the mark approached the vanishing point. In many cities there were hunger riots and unemployment insurance had to be issued in lieu of a rebellion. "Realizing the danger, Prof. Zimpel continued, "the government called together 300 of the best industrial experts in the nation, and ordered them to work out a plan that would restore the industry of the country in spite of the loss of the coal mines in the Ruhr and in Silesia. These men worked out a method for briquetting lignite of which Germany has vast deposits in the heart of the country, secure from attack.

"There are now thousands of these briquetting plants all over Germany. Industry has recovered and reparation payments have been met, al-

First Lap of Clearbrook to Warroad Road Completed

The first twelve miles of the proposed route from Clearbrook to Warroad has already been built, according to reports from the Clearbrook Commercial Club. This section extends north to the Red Lake Reservation line, and an effort is being made to have the Indian department build twelve miles north of the reservation, to connect with the road now being constructed between the Reservation county line and the Red Lake Narrows. There is already a good road south along the ridge to Thorhult, leaving thirty miles to be constructed to connect with the road at Pinecreek. This would give the Warroad territory a direct auto route to the Twin Cities. Warroad hopes to make it eventually a main highway between the Twin Cities and Winnipeg.

State Game Commission Discontinues Operation of Fishery at Red Lake

Owing to the rapid depletion of the fish in the lake, the State Game Commission has discontinued its fishery at Red Lake.

A federal fish expert has been making an investigation into the annual decrease of fish in the lake, and found that the amount of fish now taken out would soon deplete the supply. In his reports to both the State and Federal departments, he recommends that the catch be cut in half if the supply is not to be rapidly exhausted. In addition to those taken out and sold by the state fishery, a great many are taken by the Indians, and it is reported that a considerable amount is smuggled out illegally every year.

COUNTY BOARD OF REVIEW SETS REAL ESTATE VALUATION

Total For County Raised $590,377 to $6,323,975; City Valuation $1,153,030

The total assessed valuation of real estate in Pennington county was set at $6,323,975 by the county board of equalization, which has been in session since Monday morning. This is a total increase of $590,377 over the amounts passed by the local boards of review.

Real estate in the city of Thief River Falls is assessed at a valuation of $1,153,030. This figure was established by the city board and was not changed.

Personal property equalizations have not yet been completed.

The county board has been busy and during the entire session by groups of farmers from the eastern part of the county who demand drainage relief. The past rainy season has put everything under water, making harvest impossible in many sections. Some petitions call for new ditches, and others for clearing old ditches that have been choked with debris and mud.

Grain Movement Thru City Over Soo Line Continues Heavy in Spite of Rains

Since the First of September, 425 carloads of grain have passed thru this city to Duluth, according to John Wengler, chief grain inspector for the city. Although the same period last year records show fast 2,459 cars of grain were inspected here between September 1 and 20. Most of the grain is of very good quality, Mr. Wengler says, no difficulty having been experienced with damp and musty grain.

On account of the low price for wheat at this time, more grain is being stored on farms than ever before, reports from various points in the county indicate. Lumber dealers say that an unusually large amount of lumber is being sold for granaries and storage bins. A heavy grain movement is anticipated with improved weather conditions.

Why Salt Lake Is Salt

The water of the Great Salt lake is a natural brine. It contains from 14 to 23 per cent of saline constituent, according to the level of the lake. The chief rivers feeding Great Salt lake are the Jordan, the Weber and the Bear. The last is 345 miles long, but its mouth is only 10 miles from its source. These waters contain so little salt it cannot be discovered by taste. But the Great Salt lake has no outlet, so the waters brought to it evaporate and the solid matters which are dissolved in them remain. That is why the lake is salt.

The Times acknowledges its many friends who contribute items of news each week and is appreciative of these favors. However, a few arrive too late for the current week and are consequently held over to the following week. Items should reach the office not later than Wednesday noon Thursday.

Emergency Pantry Means Home Meal

By BETA H. GIVEN
(Home Economist.)

Efficiency and economy go hand and hand in the home—so say to the business world.

Meta H. Given.

The new sort of pantry—it may be called by that name in the regular larder—does away with that bugbear of the home maker, the surprise guest. Every woman has had the experience of welcoming an unexpected visitor when supplies were at low ebb and has searched high and low to find something presentable to put on the table. The emergency shelf in the pantry does away with such worries in short order.

A can opener and—presto—a veritable banquet can be prepared in a few minutes. The housewife may have her choice—of many—excellent meats, corn, tomatoes, mushrooms. If she is short of milk or cream, a can of evaporated milk, which is simply fresh cow's milk sterilized in the can and with sixty per cent of the water removed will do the trick. In fact she may have two hundred or more savory dishes ready to her hand.

When the surprise guest does arrive business particularly evident to be hospitable. She doesn't want to be tied to the kitchen range half the afternoon. She wants to entertain as she has been entertained.

It isn't possible to do this if she runs frantically for the butcher, the grocer and the baker.

But there is only one of the places where the emergency pantry comes in. Backed by a well-stocked emergency shelf, the wife can get together a splendid luncheon or dinner in a jiffy. The spontaneous wish that comes at the last moment to informally invite a few friends for lunch can be realized at once with the aid of the new pantry.

Afternoon tea for the bridge club is an equally easy matter. A glass of preserves or jelly, a platter of bread and butter, tea, and a dish of cookies will meet the ordinary demands of the casual caller and a can of evaporated milk will answer the milk or cream need.

REV. AASTAD PREACHES AT GRYGLA MISSION FESTIVAL

The Rt. Rev. L. T. Aastad of Detroit Lakes, district president for the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America, preached two sermons at a Gryglia Mission Festival at the Gryglia church last Sunday. The St. Olaf, St. Petri, Valle and Our Savior congregations joined in the services, which included morning worship in Norwegian, a dinner at the church at noon, and services in English in the afternoon. Music was furnished by the Gryglia, Gatzke and St. Petri Choirs.

Most Impossible—Public Service

"The general public accepts Federal inspections a public service in much the same way as it regards the delivery of mail, weather reports, etc., but fewer very little about it. Some people are surprised—at least, that Federal inspection applies only to meats and meat food products prepared in establishments doing an interstate or foreign business and not to concerns operating within State borders. However, the meat industry is so largely of an interstate character that Government inspection includes about two-thirds of the food animals slaughtered and meats on the market. In recent years only ¼ of 1 per cent of meat has been condemned. All condemned meat is converted into fertilizer, inedible grease, or similar non-food products.

CHILDREN AND SALADS

This is the day of the salad. Mrs. Wiseman will cook and Mrs. Hall-Quest ladies do not boast of at least one salad a day. It may be a vegetable salad, a fruit salad, or a combination of both. It may contain fish, meat, eggs, nuts, or a combination of two or three of these foods. Almost any woman can prepare a salad that will meet with the approval of grown-ups, but it is a far more difficult matter to meet with the approval of children. Lettuce, tomatoes, celery and other salad foods generally do not appeal to most children as they do adults.

Still, the children need the minerals, salts and vitamins of salads. Until they have learned to eat the foods mentioned, see to it that they get salads made from ingredients that they will relish. Sliced oranges and peanuts or the same fruit with popcorn, might do for a start. Mix orange juice with orange meat and make from powdered sugar, orange juice and whipped cream is something a little more "fancy." Mixtures of fruits of various kinds may be prepared and served on cold, crisp lettuce leaves. A tasty sauce poured over the whole will gradually induce the children to devour the flavored lettuce—and one more excellent food will thus have been added to their list of likes.

A lot is always a sure thing—if not for you, then for the other fellow.

"Clean" Pradtis

By following what is known as the McLean County (Ill.) system of hog sanitation, hog raisers have found that it is possible to greatly reduce losses of pigs from filth-borne diseases. Briefly, the McLean County system consists in thorough cleaning of the sows and the farrowing quarters, and the moving of the sows and young pigs when born to clean pasture other than the permanent feed lot, leaving them there until they are at least 4 months old. During a 3-year period, on a number of representative farms where this sanitation system was carefully followed out, the average weight of the pigs (the pigs were sold at 6 months) increased 51.2 pounds per pig, while records kept on other farms where this sanitation was neglected or only partially followed, showed that the total value of the pork per farm was only $344.00.

The market value of cowpeas may be improved by reclaiming after threshing or hulling, according to U. S. Department of Agriculture. This is especially true of cowpeas hulled out by hand. If a small huller is used, the cowpeas should be run thru it a second time to remove more of the foreign matter.

The spoken word may be powerful, but it generally has to bow before the pame on the dotted line.

Highway Dept. Awards Contract For Graveling T.H No. 8 West of Bagley

A contract was awarded Sept. 11 by the State Highway department to the Hector Construction company for graveling a seven mile stretch of T. H. No. 8 from Bagley west to the county line. This road has been graded this summer, and will be graveled this fall. The contract price for the 7.4 miles was $16,296.

Summer Silage Suggestions

Summer silage is the best means of supplementing pasture for dairy cows in summer and also when grass is short because of hot, dry weather and close grazing. For a herd of 15 to 20 cows, a silo of from 10 to 12 feet in diameter, is best, as the silage can be fed out fast enough to prevent spoiling. Now is the time to plan for next summer's feeding. Supplementary pasture crops instead of summer silage are used by many dairymen to prevent the midsummer slump in milk flow. In many sections sweet-clover has proved very satisfactory for this purpose, and silage can also be pastured at this time. Combinations of legumes such as peas, vetches or soy beans, with grains such as corn, wheat, oats, barley, and rye, can be fed green, and successive plantings of these crops will often provide succulent feeds over an extended period. Too many farmers expect their dairy cows during the summer to get along pasture with no additional feed.

PARENTS AND TEACHERS ASSOCIATION

The first meeting of the Parents and Teachers Association will be held at the high school auditorium Monday night. This organization has performed a useful service to the community in recent years and probably will increase in usefulness in years to come. This organization provides an intelligent contact between parents and teachers and deserves the support of every citizen who is interested in the problems of education.

This association brought several prominent speakers to our community last winter, and the public was given an opportunity to hear these speakers free of charge, the expenses being defrayed by subscription. It is to be hoped that a similar effort will be made this year and that the idea can be enlarged somewhat. Many worthwhile lecturers and entertainers are available and can be secured at comparatively little expense. This is only one of many avenues that are open to the efforts of such an association. Attend the meeting Monday night and become an active member.

FOOTBALL IS HERE

The 1928 football season will open for Thief River Fall fans Saturday when the Lincoln High team meets the fast Grafton team on the local gridiron. Those who have watched the squad in action during the past few weeks are satisfied that the prospects for the coming season are good, which means, of course, that the prospects for winning games are bright.

The schedule this years is a heavy one. Grafton, Grand Forks, Hillsboro, Bemidji, Grand Forks and Hillsboro—these cities offer real competition. With so heavy a schedule it is likely that the Lincoln squad will taste defeat on one or more occasions. Which is perfectly all right.

The more winning or losing of games is not particularly important. The main thing, in the final analysis, is not the result of the game in terms of victory or defeat, but rather the way in which the game itself is played.

One of the important lessons which this game teaches is that success is dependent upon hard work. Without many hours of practice and training no team can hope to excel. A more important lesson learned through this game however, is the realization that often, in spite of patient practice, tireless training and honest hard work, defeat is the reward. The game is decidedly a game of skill. It is a game of highly specialized ability. And yet occasionally the result is determined largely by luck.

We may not have a winning team this year. But we do hope that the team will be of the hard fighting, clean fighting variety. If they fight hard and clean whether the score is in their favor or hopelessly against them we're going to think mighty well of them.

PROHIBITION

There has been considerable drunkenness on the streets of our city lately. As nearly as I have been able to learn practically all of these drunks have been strangers, which doesn't prove much of anything of course except that even strangers can get the stuff if they really want it. What prompted this rush, however, was not the observation of a few drunks so much as the conversation I had with an anti-prohibitionist who watched with me the almost futile efforts of one of these strangers as he tried to lean against a wall that was at least ten feet away.

This anti-prohibitionist was of the opinion that the example before us proved conclusively that the prohibition law should be modified. It was my contention that the example proved, rather, that the laws, as they are, should be enforced. My friend, the anti, was not able to convince me that this fellow who had taken on too much under the present conditions would sober up as soon as liquor were made easier to get.

It is easy for any person of ordinary intelligence to see a lot of things that are wrong with Prohibition but even in those moments when I have wept the loudest about present bad conditions I have not been able to see any real remedy for these conditions simply through legalizing them.

The position of Al Smith on this question is typical of the majority of the wets. All they ask is a little modification, but if they get a little modification then they'll want a little more modification and they will keep right on wanting modification until they have returned a saloon to every corner. That's the history of the wets' fight in Canada and in Norway and in every other country that has experienced this problem. Smith is in favor of local option now. A few years ago, when the saloons were fighting a defensive war, this same Smith was opposed to local option.

LIVE STOCK AND OUR FAIR

One of the serious problems confronting the local fair association is the difficulty in getting exhibits of live stock. In recent years a special effort has been made by the committees in charge of these departments to stimulate sufficient interest among local breeders to secure a creditable showing of those breeds that are most popular in this community, but year after year the result continues to be discouraging.

That this problem is not peculiar to this community is evidenced by the similar situation in most of the fairs around the state. The Long-Prairie Leader, in discussing this situation in Todd County, offers several suggestions that will be interesting both to the local fair management and farmers. The Leader states:

The limited live stock exhibits at the county fair is a-miss to the fair management that special effort must be made to encourage the farmers of the county to bring in their stock. The fact must be recognized that it is expensive for a farmer to bring in cows, horse, sheep and hogs. To make an exhibit of dairy cattle, for instance, means the loss of a week's time and it is time that is particularly busy on the farm. The premiums in the race components for the actual expense." It is doubtful if higher premiums is the remedy because higher premiums will not take care of all the exhibitors. Some system of helping to defray the expense of getting the stock to and from the grounds might be worked out. The live stock industry is the backbone of our county's development, and a fair in Todd county without a representative list of live stock entries is like a fair in California without a fruit exhibit or an auto show without automobiles. The fair owes much to the men who year after year have on their own account built up the live stock department and the leader suggests that steps be taken, even if those steps are based on subsidy of some kind, for a new understanding and working relation between those capitals of our major industry and the management of the fair.

HIGH PRICES AND LOW PRICES

In recent years there has been a determined protest on the part of the farmers of the central west against the low prices of their products and in this section of the country most of us feel that the protests have been justified. In considering this matter, however, it is well to remember that there are two sides to the question. The actual count the number of food consumers is greater than the number of food producers. It isn't strange, therefore, that the nation as a whole did not respond enthusiastically at the first protest of the farmer and that a large portion of the population is still unsympathetic to the demands of agriculture is made evident by the frequent protests of the consumers of the large cities against what is called the present high prices of food.

The following comment of the Christian Science Monitor is interesting in that it explains the situation quite accurately and makes a sensible plea to the people of the larger cities in behalf of fair prices on farm products.

During the last few weeks the wholesale price of butter has advanced five or six cents per pound in an unusually high price, evoking widespread protests from the urban press, complaints from housewives, and demands that state and federal governments protect the consumers by preventive action, what is alleged to be agreements in restraint of trade. To what extent the higher price is the result of concerted action by the producers or middlemen is difficult to say, and it does not appear what, if anything, the government can do to put prices down again. When, as has always happened in the past, there is an abundant production beyond the immediate demand, and the surplus has become large due to control, there will be a downward tendency.

Too often the city press and city dweller rush emotionally into the seeming prices of coal, per, steel and other industrial materials as a fair yardstick index of better business, but unthinkingly and on lines of habit protest against higher prices for an important farm product. City residents, who see prosperity in fair prices for manufactured goods should, in fairness, remember similarly when farmers co-operate to secure a fair price for their milk and butter.

KRATKA

Miss Adele Jensen who has been editor of the "Kratka News" this summer and who has spent her vacation at her home here, left for Washington, D. C., last Saturday evening, Wednesday where she will continue her studies at the Gallaudet College.

Wednesday afternoon a few ladies gathered at the home of Mrs. Jacob Hardy, the afternoon being spent in a "quilting bee." At 5 o'clock a delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Hardy assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Theodore Preuthy to the following: Mrs. O. Hoidal, Mrs. Ole Symmes, Mrs. A. Jensen, Miss Myrtle Hoidal.

Entertains Ladies Aid

A meeting of the Tetrarkton Ladies aid was held last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Sarah Knutson. In spite of the bad road conditions nearly all of the members of the organization attended. The weather was somewhat in the form of a "quilting party" for the ladies.

Luncheon was served by the hostess and her daughter, Lottie. Proceeds of the luncheon was $4.25.

It was announced in last week's news that there would be held a Missionary Festival in the Tetrarkton church Sunday, September 30, at which time Reverend H. Hansen, a former pastor of the church would speak. This meeting has now been postponed indefinitely, however, on account of the announcement of the annual convention of the Thief River Falls and Crookston circuits of the Junior Luther Leagues to be held in Thief River Falls Saturday and Sunday, September 29 and 30.

The annual meeting of the Kratka Young People society will be held Sunday, September 23, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Iver Solheim. Miss Myrtle Hoidahl will leave for Minneapolis, next Friday, where she will be employed teaching.

Harvesting and threshing has again been delayed by the study and heavy rains of last week. Farmers report that grain in the shock is starting to grow and the potato fields are taking damage from rot due to the excessive moisture. However, the rain with its cool days has made late corn now looking better.

Duck hunting season opened with a bang last Sunday, Sept. 16, and soon from all directions came the boom of shotguns, continuing from sun-up to sun-down. Ducks are numerous this year and local hunters have enjoyed the sport report good luck on the opening day.

Sunday afternoon visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Iver Solheim were Mrs. Knutson home were Clara and Edwin Forkas and Mrs. Ida Haugen, Mrs. Jordal, Agnes Jordal and Gilbert Rolfson.

WHY—

Modern Dog Wags Tail as Did Ancestor

Why does a dog wag his tail? Not by accident. It is part of an ancient signal code, a correlative shrug with a white flag. For we must remember every dog then had say white on him at all has a white tip to his tail, at the least a few white hairs. We know, too, that the wild ancestor of the dog also had a white tail tip. We know that the wolf cub carries over a small yellowish admix with light spots on the eyes, that he was indeed a kind of Jackie, Ernest Thompson Seton writes, in Collier's Weekly.

Suppose our wild dog jackal sees or hears a strange animal coming. The first wise thing to do is hide and watch the stranger, that is, crouch in the grass. The stranger comes near. The crouching dog sees now that the newcomer is a friend, he's even kin—and maybe even a friend, therefore his tail wags.

The stranger is now so near that recognizement is no longer possible. So the first wild dog rises and wags stiffly and gratefully forward. Then seeing no threats, the first dog raises his tail so that the white tip is seen high above the level of his back, and waves it from side to side. The other, now desiring war, responds with the same wig-wag signal. They are now friends.

These things and many more pertain to the wilds long ago. Today you may see them in the city every day where there are roaming dogs.

Why Line in Old Play

Has Been Misunderstood

Some zoncs have been thought to be the slightest, and it is remarkable that only one well-worn phrase should remain to remind us that National Leo ever lived and wrote.

If a thousand people were asked to quote the saying they would, without exception, say: "When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war," and if they were asked to explain its meaning they would say: "The Greeks being famous and stubborn fighters, when one Greek meets another there is no quarter asked or given, no fight to the death."

That is undoubtedly the popular view of the meaning of the saying. Yet there are few misquotations further from the original. For it cannot be found in Nathaniel Lee's forgotten tragedy, "The Rival Queens, or Alexander the Great," of which Lee was so proud. It is the only one that has survived, the line reads: "When Greek joined Greek, then was the tug of war." It was designed to show that no united were the Greeks in defense of their country that, when they all stood shoulder to shoulder, nothing but death could defeat them.

Why Dogs "Make" Their Beds

No creature has any habit through fresh or accident. There is a reason back of every established practice.

The wild dog, for instance, usually slept where he found his food. His blanket was on his back. He selected a dry, sheltered spot. Then he smoothed the grass or moved the sticks and pebbles by turning round and round for some time.

And his tame-bred cousin does the very same today. The wild dog had his bushy tail for a foot wrap. His nose and his four paws, his only thinly clad parts, he huddled together, and around them he carried the woolly, warming tail. So do show and pastime pets. If the terrier does not fill his nose with his wig-wag flag it is because his tail has been cut off, Ernest Thompson Seton in Collier's Weekly.

English Writer Has Contempt for Laugh

Men and women laugh because they are happy—unmodified. This sentiment has been the universal theory; but a London psychologist comes forward with the self-contradictory theory that the really happy man never laughs and that the unhappy man cannot laugh. Grown people, he says, usually, the laugh is a hideous grimace, the smile alone being beautiful and permissible. It all depends upon how does the laughing, whether it is beautiful or comparable at times to that of the hyena. Perhaps it is because we are so afraid of laughter, thanks to our infinite wisdom, that these dolls will attain most of us as the twaddle of a seeker for notoriety. It is true that there are all sorts of laughter, edge, triple, stifled, and even brim. It covers a suppressants and soon aroused by a scene of the indecorous, but in its more welcome sense the word betokens harmless merriment and a reflection of the charm and beauty of living.

The week of November 18 has been designated as Schubert Centennial Week, during which 1000 cities throughout the United States will honor the memory of the great German composer, Franz Schubert.

Abuse Of Postage Privilege Will Incur Penalty Under New Rule

In the past a number of firms with branch offices in this city have made a practice of furnishing stamps from the home office. Heavy letters have been mailed here with a two-cent stamp affixed, and the remainder paid at the second end. Not only does this involve extra handling, but stamp sales are accredited to the regular offices rather than to the distributing office. Since the new order went into effect, many branch offices have been authorized to buy stamps here which will give the local office credit for the full volume of business that it handles.

Land Likes Legumes Often

In planning a crop rotation, two to three years of the same kind or two interilled crops should be the maximum number. Intermediated crops that are said be grown in succession after sandy soil, according to the Department of Agriculture. Two common mistakes are the growing of too many related crops and too several small-grain crops in succession. The interilling crops following a good clover or alfalfa seed is usually excellent, and therefore the farmer is tempted to grow grain after interilled crops following the clover or alfalfa crops. However, sometimes has the inevitable effect of causing the rapid destruction of the soil's organic matter, and when several interfilled and small-grain crops are grown after a good crop has been turned under, little or no permanent improvement can be accomplished in the long run, particularly if no effort is made to maintain reserves for organic matter and plant food.

Money for TB Cattle

Appraised values of the cattle condemned and slaughtered during the national campaign against the disease in the cattle herds of the country, averaged for the year ending June 30, 1928, the sum of $111.55, according to Dr. C. H. Wilson of the United States Department of Agriculture. The combined value of the Federal and State indemnities, plus the salvage value of condemned animals, was $87.12. "This figure," says Doctor Mohler, "represents the amount that the owner received for the average diseased animal. The difference, approximately $24.43 per animal, represents the loss to the purchase of healthy stock, usually of better quality and potentially more profitable than the animals condemned."

Shrews are such voracious eaters, feeding principally on insects with an occasional dessert of young mice, that they are of considerable importance in combating certain agricultural pests, say biologists of the United States Department of Agriculture. These mammals of the wild are found in all parts of the United States except in the extreme south, but are so little known to the layman that they are generally confused with mice and often killed they differ from mice in that they have more velvety fur, long tapering muzzles, and minute ears.

PASSION PLAY TO BE PRESENTED AT TRINITY CHURCH

Dr. Ira Berry Will Impersonate Characters in Famous Oberammergau Production.

A representative of the famous Oberammergau Passion Play by Dr. and Mrs. Ira Berry has been secured by the Trinity Ladies Aid for Oct. 3. The play will be presented partly thru the medium of films and partly thru impersonation, according to Rev. Axel Shefveland, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church. Dr. Berry, who has studied in the case made by Anton Lang, impersonates 18 different characters, including Christ, Judas, Mary, and many others.

Since 1634, the villiers of Oberammergau has presented the "Last Days in the Life of Christ," in character every ten years, and the Passion Play, as it is called, has become the most famous drama in history. Thousands of people travel to the little Bavarian village every time it is produced.

Dr. Berry was at one time pastor of one of the largest churches in Chicago. For several years he has traveled all over the world bringing the Passion Play directly to the people.

Editor Times,

Dear Sir:

In reading your paper of August 30 and of September 6, I was somewhat surprised to see the stand you took on the gas tax amendment. You seem in see it as an injustice to the city folks to be asked, or forced as you put it, to bear a part of the burden in an offhand way of keeping up the rural roads. Now just who made it possible to build the graveled and paved roads for our city brother. The farmer, for he has the burden of all tax, directly or indirectly, to bear. If there is a tax, or an increase in a tax, placed on any of the commodities they have to offer for us, they simply add a little to the price to pay this tax and add a little to their profit and in this is not only the fact that we farmers must pay this, but who would be most benefited by helping to put our township and county roads in better shape, be either, or the farmers. Thousands of dollars now go to the mail order house which would go to our own towns only just for the reason that our roads are too bad to get through to the main highway, so they just mail the order in and to be shipped by parcel post.

And on the other hand we must use our side roads the year round day by day, regardless of conditions to deliver the necessities of life to our city brothers and their families, but yet we as a people are always trying to keep unjust expenditures on them if we ask for a small part of this gas tax money to be spent to make it possible to reach them. It is fair enough to say we should be taxed on our mortgaged homes and stock to build good roads and keep up our county and state expenses and schools even though our taxes run to 12 or 15 per cent on our equity in our holdings and we should not murmur. But our city brother with a few thousand to loan goes and buys 5% per cent non-taxable bonds, and then this is used to build roads and school houses, and the already over-taxed property in its section must pay an additional tax that may be fair and just and 5 may only see it wrong but I do wish someone who is wise on the subject would either write up the explanation or explain to me in words some day.

Now in four months of 1926 there was more money spent on our roads, ways to keep the snow off for a few all trucks, commercial travellers and pleasure seekers it would take to keep half the county's rural roads in shape for a year. We are all very much pleased to see these fine highways and to drive on them but have to be left in such a way with our own roads that we cannot get to the city to meet our city brother when we reach the highway or city, for we must get out and push and shovel around to make it at all.

Now I am willing to take everything at its best, but I wish to be shown why it is not best for a portion of this use tax to go into our roads. Our city brothers may about those unpopular taxes we had in 1920, but let her come, we are used to it. Yours for better township and county roads.

Editor, Times,

Dear Sir:

I noticed in your paper of last week that one Samuel had violence as it termed it, against Governor Smith's legislative record would have sounded better had he not taken it from the Spokane Review, the most unfair anti-Smith primary paper on the west coast. William Allen White of Kansas made those same statements in regard to Smith's record and it may be interesting and instructive to some to know that he had to retract most of them. It is true that Gov. Smith believes a modification of the Volstead law would be for the betterment of the country and temperance, and would probably stop some of the crime wave that is sweeping the country, and is changing our law abiding citizens to potential criminals. There is nothing that undermines the morality of a man like the disrespect for the law and never in the history of our country as the church lost ground like in the last eight years. Most of the civilized countries of the world have at some time in their history tried out the lone dry experiment and have found it a gross failure. You simply can't make people good that way and it is a gross error to say that beer and light wines are harmful to the human body. Coffee in ten times more injurious to the system if drunken to excess. Most of the great men of ancient and modern times from Noah to Kellogg, have been drinkers of beer. Half of the fine art and literature would have been lost to the world if had not been for alcohol.

Yet Smith declares, and if he were elected he would most solemnly swear, to make an honest endeavor to enforce the Volstead law so long as it continues to be a law of the country, and that is more than the present administration has done.

But why all this excitement. The president don't have the power to make laws or change the constitution, he simply has to see that the laws of the people. There is not one chance in a million that it will be changed. Don't know as we want it changed, but it certainly could be improved. But even so should a Republican like Nicholas Butler, president of Cornell University say it is a prosperous attitude that Hoover has on the subject.

But the liquor question is not a real issue. It is just a blind to attract the people's attention so they won't see some of the graft and corruption that the grand old G. O. P. has pulled off. So we can swallow some of the wonderful prosperity that Kellogg other high officials on Wall street and the Power trust are telling about. The editor, in one of his recent editorials, said we have reason to suspect that Hoover would be more of a man than Coolidge. How in the Sam Hill does he get that idea when Hoover has not as yet in any way indicated that he will not carry out the policies of the Coolidge administration.

Could the Republicans put up a candidate that would be more republican to the farmers of this country than Hoover—anti- everything that he should climb down on our Wall St. and pro-Power trust, and after two years as the leader of the president's he comes out with a tax that will be a give-all for the farmer's ills. Haven't we had about enough of these fairy tales? Shall we close our eyes to the facts of history and let the politicians till we are driven from our farms, and, like Esau, herd with the husks in the fields like beasts?

P. H. Wright.

Dear Editor:

I am a constitutional government, such as ours, there are certain public services and departments of government provided for in the constitution and the powers and duties of each are defined, as well as the method of their selection. Besides these constitutional officers and departmental departments the legislature and congress have provided for numerous others to take charge of various governmental activities but these departments, bureaus and offices are usually made subordinate to one or more of the constitutional officers or departments and very rarely is there a provision for the direct election by the people of such officers, but the power of appointment is vested in some of the constitutional officers. Usually with the president or the governor.

Wherever the executive, though the use of a powerful political machine built up with the aid of this power of patronage, is able to dominate the legislative department so that he can secure any legislation he desires, democracy is in danger.

An autocrat in the executive position might then secure the necessary legislation to control every other department or activity of government, and ultimately to perpetuate himself and his political machine in the control of the government for their own benefit and to the detriment of all others.

Today Minnesota is facing such a possibility. Under strong executive pressure the legislature three years ago provided for a Department of Administration consisting of three appointees of the governor who should have general supervision of all departments of government both of constitutional and legislative origin. Many students of government think that this is the first step toward destroying our constitutional government and instituting therefore a rank bureaucracy. Several of the constitutional departments have also been being dictated to by this department established only by an act of the legislature and whose members are appointees of the governor, and the courts have held that the legislature cannot interfere with the constitutional duties or powers of constitutional officers and departments except by the submission of such constitutional amendments as would bring on the contemplated reorganization.

The governor is seeking re-election as a vindication of his autocratic position and the voters of this state should not allow the excitement of a heated presidential election or personal attract their attention from this vital issue. If the governor and his friends created by re-election many members of the legislature as well as other constitutional officers may feel that the voters of Minnesota don't care for the constitution is ignorant and autocracy enthroned.

I shall discuss the question of economy and efficiency in a later issue if you editors will grant me space.

Sincerely,
A
W. H. QUIST,
Sec. Ninth Cong. Dist. Fed. Assn.

Editor Times,

Dear Mr. Editor: I was quite interested in reading the letter signed by Chairman Benedict and published in the "Public Forum" column of your last issue. You may be interested because the letter quite openly and without unusual secrecy lays bare for close examination a very common dispositon on the part of those whose sympathies extend Alfred E. Smith are too deep-rooted to be disturbed by such known facts.

Mr. Brandvold's stack upon Governor Smith's record has long since been dissipated among those who are aware of the facts and who have given his record as a whole some study.

Because the letter contains a more or less veiled attack on Governor Smith's personal integrity, and, designedly or not, is calculated to lead us from the vital issues of the campaign, I avail myself of the privileges of your column to answer.

The attempt to smear for the Democratic candidate I may perhaps be deemed somewhat prejudiced myself. I therefore call others better informed than I am to speak for him.

Mr. Brandvold thinks the constitution is in danger if Smith is elected. I shall quote from an authority on the constitution, a former Chief Justice of the United States, a one-time Secretary of State, and just recently elected by the nations of the world to a seat on the Permanent Court for International Justice. Speaking recently about Governor Smith, Charles Evans Hughes said:

"He is one who represents to us the expert in government, and a master of the science of politics. In the highways and byways of the law, particularly of the statutory law, while we go haltingly and with much effort, he threads his path with perfect familiarity, for to him the administration of government is not a study but a life. If we had the elections of other countries, he would

Plymouth Business Coupe, $675

Winning public preference because of greater dollar value

With the arrival of the new Chrysler-built Plymouth the search for greater dollar value in the lowest-priced field is made surprisingly simple.

It is so unmistakably in a class by itself—with its full size, its new and original style, its fine quality of finish and fittings.

But the contrast in Plymouth's favor becomes still more startling in the matter of performance—in its speed, pick-up and power, from its new "Silver-Dome" high-compression engine using any gasoline; its smoothness and roadability; its safety because of light action internal-expanding hydraulic 4-wheel brakes.

The buyer who seeks dollar-while first will inevitably choose the new Plymouth, after observing the very significant contrasts in greater dollar-for-dollar value it presents to every other car in the lowest-priced field.

POSTAL PATRONS WARNED AGAINST LAW VIOLATIONS

Many People Still Enclose Letters Within Parcel Post Packages Despite Rules

In spite of repeated warnings that such action is illegal, people still continue to enclose first class mail matter inside of parcel post packages, H. H. Pope, assistant postmaster, says. he has first received a letter from the post office department concerning a parcel mailed by a local woman, that contained written matter in violation of the law.

The most common violations are in connection with goods that are returned to mail order houses, he said. Instead of sending instructions in a separate letter, or attaching the letter to the outside of the package, which is permitted, written instructions are included within the parcel, which is not permitted.

The following notice has been received by the post office from the department at Washington: "Notwithstanding previous notices it is regretted that it is again necessary to call attention to the failure of some postmasters to exercise proper care to prevent the insertion by mailing at less than the first class rate of postage of packages containing letters, tools, fountain pens, jewelry, machinery, or other articles, together with instructions, indicated by written words or by check marks, for repairs to be made or work to be done in connection with the articles, such instructions accompanying the package to postage at the first class rate of 2 cents for each ounce or fraction thereof.

"A recent test at a post office disclosed that at least 50 per cent of the parcels handled thesel contained letters, personal notes or other written matter which should not have been inclosed."

Test check weeks are held at various offices by the post office department, during which every parcel handled is examined. The postal laws provide a penalty of not to exceed $100 for willful attempts to mail first-class matter at third or fourth class rates.

Preventive rather than remedial measures should be used to control contagious abortion of cattle, a disease from which the losses have greatly increased in the past ten years. Effort expended to destroy infection before it reaches susceptible animals is worth much more than effort to combat it after it has done so.

Tourist Guide Book Will List Scenic Attractions, Business Opportunities

Questionnaires are being sent to towns throughout the state by the Ten Thousand Lakes Association for information to be included in the 1929 edition of Recreation Days, a booklet which is published annually setting forth the scenic attractions of the state as well as to tell the industrial and agricultural opportunities of the various communities. Every city and village in the state filled with 500 or more population will receive a questionnaire which when filled out and returned will give the Lakes association the information needed for the booklet. The questionnaires will be sent to commercial clubs secretaries wherever possible.

At other places they will go to postmasters, newspaper or individuals with whom the association has relations. Every effort will be made to gather complete and authentic information concerning every community in the state and it is the hope of officers of the organization that cities and villages not visited by agent will co-operate to the fullest extent to see that their communities are properly represented. Because of delay on the part of some communities in getting their questionnaires back the 1928 edition was delayed until late in the season. Next year, according to H. C. Hotaling, executive secretary the book will go to press at least three time and those who delay their returns may lose the possibility offering literature.

Recreation Days according to Mr. Hotaling is one of the most valuable booklets ever compiled to advertise Minnesota. It contains writeups of towns and gives complete information concerning resorts. It describes all the state parks and forests as well as national forests. It contains a complete road log of the state trunk highway system. Information concerning traffic regulations, conservation laws and other data valuable to tourists.

It is placed in information bureaus throughout the central part of the United States. Railroads use it in inducing travel in Minnesota and it is sent to thousands who make inquiry to the association as a result of the advertising placed in newspapers and magazines.

Every effort will be made to make the 1929 booklet the most thorough and complete publication ever printed with a purpose of selling Minnesota to the world says Mr. Hotaling and he urged that when questionnaires are received in the various communities that they be filled out and returned immediately.

though they are three times greater than the annual accumulated savings before the war. The mark has been stabilized, until it is today the best money in the world, better even than the American dollar, which is second.

"Lignite is today the basis for German prosperity. Not only does it supply all the fuel that is required for heating and power, but valuable by-products are secured from the briquetting process. These by-products, which include a long line of chemicals from gasoline to sugar, have restored to Germany her supremacy in the manufacture of chemicals.

Exclusive manufacturing rights under the new patented process for the state of North Dakota, S. Dak., and Mont. have been sold to the Lehigh Briquetting company of Lehigh, N. Dak. A plant is already in operation which has a capacity of 100 tons a day. Later this plant will be enlarged to produce 2,000 tons a day, according to Prof. Zimpel.

Chemists and fuel experts have been warning for many years on a method of re-ripening lignite successfully. The biggest problem was a satisfactory binder. One plan recently explored used flour and water for a binder, but this dried out, leaving the coal brittle.

Professor Zimpel has been an exchange professor at the North Dakota Agricultural College at Fargo for two years. Prior to coming to this country he was superintendent of the experimental station in Frankfort. His purpose in coming to the United States, he said, was partly to determine how the famous corn belt farm could be reclaimed for cultivation in a republic, and partly to investigate a market for German-made briquetting machinery.

"I conclusion to Germany has already proved the point where more minerals must be developed in order to avoid disastrous unemployment," he said. "The country can produce only so many automobiles per year. It must import food for 20,000,000 people. It can pay for food only into the nation as exported manufactured goods. Your high tariff wall shut out our products. If we cannot give our people employment, communism is a serious menace.

All the machinery which is used for the manufacture of the lignite briquettes, as well as the by-products, are controlled by German-owned patents, and development of the industry here would mean a considerable export of machinery.

Upon his speech with a summary of the situation in Germany after the war, Prof. Zimpel said that the country was in ruins. The government was unsettled, and soldiers and laborers took over the control. The morale of the people was broken. A fever of historical enjoyment spread over the country, with utter disregard for economic disaster. Then the republic was organized. The socialist took over the government. Although it was their first experience in actual government, they succeeded remarkably well. Germany is today one of the foremost countries in the world in progressive social legislation, he said.

Germany's 65,000,000 are crowded into an area but little larger than the state of Texas, he continued. Land must be intensively cultivated. Fertilizers are all important. Fields must be cropped every year, so that the farmers cannot plow under clover and other legumes to restore fertility, as Minnesota farmers do. Nitrogen must be taken out of the air. For this the lignite fields furnish an unlimited source of power.

Prof. Zimpel closed his speech to one of the largest audiences that has attended a Commercial Club luncheon, with a contrast between two of the major prospects of today, Oswald Spengler, and Henry Ford. Spengler, he said, is a prophet of disaster, while Ford speaks of a "great today and a greater tomorrow."

"I should compromise between the two, and say 'a poor, but hopeful, today, with hope of a better tomorrow.'"

New Oil Does Not Dilute In Automobile Crank Case Says Standard Oil Agent

"The tendency of motor oil to dilute in the crank case of automobiles has for some time past been a matter of grave concern to the manufacturer of these machines," Raid A. J. Cooper, Manager of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) for this territory.

"It also has been a problem of major importance to the oil companies who are responsible for their correct lubrication.

"Many organizations and individuals have undertaken the work of finding a solution for this perplexing problem, but it was not until about two years ago when the Scientific Staff of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) made their report showing that they had developed an oil which would maintain a practically uniform body regardless of the dilution by gasoline in the crank drainings. This oil, which has been protected by basic patents, was put on the market under the name of "RED-WHITE-CROWN-POLARINE" specially motor oil".

"In the course of the investigation leading up to the development of this new type oil several thousand samples of used oil were taken from the crank cases of automobiles and trucks, and carefully analyzed. It was found that in almost all cases the accumulation of dilution in the motor oil had taken up amounted to approximately 15% by volume. This was also found that the dilution agent was a very small fraction found in the heavier ends of gasoline.

Many experiments were tried to make an engine in good mechanical condition dilute excessively but apparently there was a limit of the amount which the motor oil could take up and hold.

After months of work it was found possible to take a small fraction from the crude oil during the refining process which closely approximated the diluent which accumulates in the crank case. With this material available the engineers had a base oil, much heavier than had been found possible heretofore, and predilutet it to the point where it would normally be after 150 or 200 miles of motoring.

This oil was given a thoroughly practical test in part of the fleet of motor trucks and cars operated by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) with results that were surprisingly satisfactory. The oil maintained its body value at the same level when drained from the crank case as it was when it was put in.

This use of Iso-Vis in company owned vehicles was continued for approximately two years before the announcement of the development was made and the oil put on the market for general consumption.

Because of the heavy base the cushion between the bearing surfaces is thicker than when ordinary oil is used and hence it does not thin out as it may be user for a much longer time between drainings. In cars furnished with oil filters 2,000 miles is considered safe.

In order that all motorists may be informed about Iso-Vis a strong advertising campaign is being conducted in the columns of this paper.

Last Call for Dipping

The best time of year to dip cattle for scab is while the weather is still warm. If you did not get it done last month, do it now and save yourself trouble later, as parasites are more troublesome in cold weather. The dips recommended by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the U. S. Department of Agriculture for common scab are a lime-sulphur or a nicotine solution. Nicotine dips can be bought under various trade names, and are best for cattle scab when diluted so as to contain .05 of 1 per cent of nicotine. The lime-sulphur dip is made in the proportion of 12 pounds of unslaked lime, or 16 pounds of commercial hydrated lime, and 24 pounds of flower of sulphur or sulphur flower to two gallons of water. Detailed directions for mixing a lime-sulphur dip can be obtained from the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The temperature of either of these dips should be from 95 to 100 degrees F. Two dippings, from 10 to 14 days apart, can usually be depended upon to cure common scab.

AVERAGE FOR ALL POINTS Is 1,013; HIGHEST 6,835

237 Out of 347 Checkers Report Average of More than 500 Cars Per Day

A 24 per cent increase in foreign cars, a 12 per cent increase in Minnesota "B" cars, and increases in the number of busses and trucks of all classes, are revealed by a summary of the Minnesota highway department's annual traffic census made public this week by Commissioner C. M. Babcock. The complete list of auto and horse drawn vehicles show a decrease.

The average increase for all vehicles was 9.2 per cent. The census was taken August 6 to 12 at 347 points on the trunk highways and nine points on important county roads. Some counts were at new points, but 252 were at points where counts had been made in 1927. These alone are used in computing the per-centage of increase. The average number of vehicles per day for the seven day period for the two years at these stations was as follows:

Minnesota "A"	239	223
Minnesota "B"	447	512
Foreign cars	159	196
Total passenger cars	825	932
Busses	6	6
Freight line trucks	7	8
Other trucks over 2 tons	14	16
Trucks under 2 tons	62	47
Wagons	7	5
Buggies	6	5
Total	928	1,013

There were only 110 points out of the 347 where the counts averaged less than 500 per day, which is generally considered the economical limit of a gravel road. Since the checkers were approximately 20 miles apart, this represents about 2,200 miles out of 7,000 miles total. There were 135 points where it averaged from 500 to 1,000 per day; forty eight where it averaged from 1,000 to 1,500 per day; nineteen where it averaged from 1,500 to 2,000 per day; twenty where it averaged from 2,000 to 3,000 per day, nine where it averaged from 3,000 to 4,000 per day, and six where it averaged over 5,000 per day. The highest average total will fall in 12 west of Hopkins, where the average was 6,831 per day.

The lowest count, both in 1927 and 1928, was on T. H. No. 67, north of the Junction with T. H. No. 14. The count at this point, however, increased from 144 to 185.

Counts taken at 55 points on the paved highways showed an average daily traffic of 2,567 vehicles per day. In 1927 the average per day on the pavements was 2,454.

There were 54 points on the unpaved roads where daily averages of more than 1,000 cars were counted. Forty two of these run from 1,000 to 1,500, eight from 1,500 to 2,000 per day, and four over 2,000 per day. These 54 stations represent about 1,100 miles of highway and Commissioner Babcock cites these figures as showing the urgent need of paving some of the most heavily traveled routes at the earliest possible date, although he believes it would be economy to pave all routes where traffic runs over 500 cars per day.

According to a summary of the local census, which was published several weeks ago, the average daily traffic on T. H. 32 was 844 vehicles of all kinds. The average on T. H. 59 was 216, making a total thru this city of 758.

INCORRECT POSTURE IN YOUTH IS OFTEN CAUSE OF DISEASE

Examinations Prove Many Children Defective, Says State Medical Association

That incorrect standing or sitting postures in youth are the causes of some of the diseases in later life was pointed out in a bulletin by the health committee of the Minnesota State Medical Association this week. The statement declares that these postures are not inherited as is commonly believed but are the result of faulty training in standing or sitting. In Maryland and several other states a campaign to correct these habits is being actively conducted through the schools and health organizations.

"Poor posture is generally the result of bad habits, and like other habits is learned through inattention or indifference," declares the bulletin. "Moreover it has been definitely shown that good posture, that is an upright position when standing or sitting with the chest prominent and the abdomen flat, furthers health; while contracted chest and relaxed abdomen are often factors in inducing ill health.

"The causes of these facts are not fat. A surface chest can be contracted in any direction, diminishes the space required for the normal extension of the lungs, and free action of the heart, consequently these organs often lose able to withstand diseases and strain when thus hampered. Again, the prominent relaxed abdomen which is so often pressed in children with stooped shoulders and weak abdominal muscles, permits the sagging of the stomach and intestines, with a consequent stretching of the nerves and blood vessels which supply and so it interferes with digestion. These form what doctors call a vicious circle. The sagging abdomen tends to bring on indigestion, and this in turn produces further relaxation.

"These abnormal conditions are not necessary; they are more apt to occur in some children than in others, but they can nearly always be prevented or corrected in their early stages, by giving attention to upright postures when standing and sitting, and by taking simple setting up exercises night and morning.

"In the examination of thousands of young children in Maryland, too large a proportion were found to have defective postures. Because this may have a far reaching influence on their subsequent health, the matter is brought to the attention of their parents, so that while it is possible, this important physical handicap may be corrected or cured."

Veterinary Practice Offers Opportunities

Young men of the country may well regard the opportunities offered in the practice of veterinary medicine, says Dr. C. P. Fitch, head of the veterinary department of the University of Minnesota. Enrollment in veterinary colleges fell off for a time because of the general agricultural depression, but evidence indicates that the tide has turned, and that there will be a gradual increase in the future. Enrollment in all veterinary colleges of the United States and Canada increased from 657 in 1926-27 to 769 in 1927-28, and the outlook is for further increases in the coming university year.

Increased salary appropriations for veterinarians in the service of federal, state, and municipal governments, the demand for this class of graduates in the commercial field, and greater remuneration for those in private practice have focused attention on this profession, according to Dr. Fitch. Because of reduced grazing, there is now no trouble in obtaining the number of veterinarians needed by the meat inspection bureaus and field services. Increases only 125 to 150 men are needed, instead of 1,000 as before the state colleges, 250 to 300 are needed to fill vacancies alone.

This condition was recognized by the recent congress which increased the salaries of government veterinarians $100 to $400 a year. By the terms of the Welch bill the minimum salary for veterinarians was raised from $1,500 to $2,000, and the special agricultural appropriation bill makes it possible to add $700 more. The salary for the service who were receiving $2,400 a year were raised to $2,800 and those having salaries of $2,500 to $3,500 were given an increase of $100 to $300.

All Native American Indians May Vote This Fall Under 1924 Law

Indians are now citizens of the United States and have the right to vote as such, that right being subject to and sometimes limited by the laws of the several states, according to a statement from the Department of the Interior.

Up until 1924 citizenship was not granted an Indian until he was considered competent or, in other words, when he was able to handle his own affairs. In that year Congress passed a law which gave citizenship to all native born Indians. The franchise was as newly granted that no great use was made of it in the election of 1924. The election this year is the first general election at which American Indians will have a fair chance to exercise of the franchise.

There are about 340,000 Indians in the United States. They are members of 192 tribes and live in every state. Their number is greatest in Oklahoma, second greatest in Arizona, third greatest in South Dakota.

ANNOUNCING

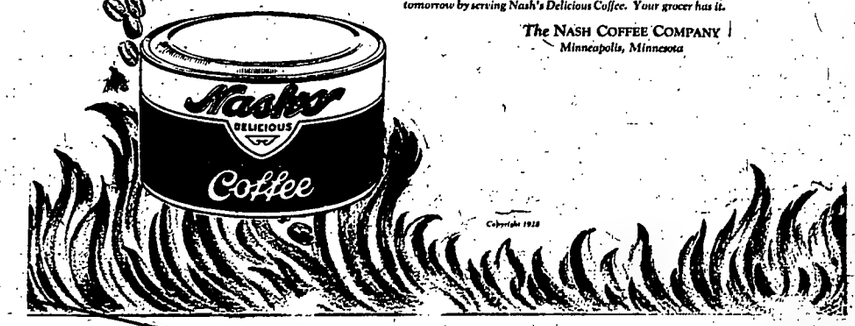
Nash's HERMETIC Toasting Process

Hermes—(from which the word Hermetic derives). Herald messenger of the Gods, God of Science and Invention.
—Webster's New International Dictionary

THERE was a time when great grandmother roasted her own green coffee. But through lack of better facilities for developing coffee flavor, she was compelled either to "parch" the green beans over an open fire or "bake" them in the oven. Since grandmother's time tremendous progress has been made in the coffee industry.

Mechanical roasting was at the time of its development, a revolutionary improvement, but through the years it has retained its one great fault—the unavoidable loss of a valuable percentage of the true coffee flavor which Nature places in each bean of green coffee—the secret of coffee enjoyment. Since the development of mechanical roasting persistent efforts have been made to save this elusive loss of flavor, but with little success.



Several years ago Mr. L. K. Watrous, chief expert of the Nash Coffee Company, began experimenting with a process which he hoped would eliminate this loss by evaporation.

This startling new process instantly seals in the bean more of the flavory aromatic richness which would otherwise be lost. The process can be compared to baking bread, where a very hot oven is necessary to quickly form a crust around the loaf to keep in the moisture and rich flavor, and make possible the goodness and keeping qualities of the loaf.

JUST TRY a cup of Nash's Delicious Coffee, toasted by the HERMETIC PROCESS. You will discover a vast increase in flavor, richer body, a keener taste satisfaction, a new thrill in the morning cup and greater economy. Surprise your family tomorrow by serving Nash's Delicious Coffee. Your grocer has it.

Mr. Holman's statement, "Get busy making this world what it ought to be and you will have no trouble with Crime," is merely a repetition of the old proverb, "An idle mind is the devil's workshop." Mr. Holman, who has had experience with criminals, has found this very true.

Probably you say that this does not apply to high school students, but it does. It has been found that there are many more criminals under the age of twenty-one years than over.

An idle mind is a great contributor in cause to this large number. When thoughts may wander wherever they will without being interrupted they turn off into many channels. Of course, we do not want these long-haired, round shouldered, overworked youths for our citizens to do more than set a el dependable ones.

There are many things to do in leisure time to make this world what it ought to be.

Take for example, to make the world beautiful each one does his best to beautify his own surroundings. If what a change it would make in the appearance of the city! Surely as a great inspiration towards doing worth while things.

There are hundreds of things for you high school students to do towards uplifting the moral and social standing of your community, so get busy!!

The World Demands Accuracy

Two great tests in mental disciplines are accurate good memory. Is far better to master a few subjects thoroughly then to have a mass of generalizations about many subjects. The world will have little use for those who are right only part of the time. Whatever may be the standards of the classes, preference will require something more than 60 per cent or 70 per cent for a passing mark. The standards of the world are not like those set by the faculty, but more closely resemble those set by the student body themselves. They are set as a contest with a member of the musical organization as the Americans entertainment. School to hold trophy for one year—losing team to be engraved with name of school and coach.

Minnesota's contesting typist is Regina Velas from Gowanda, who wrote at 60 words a minute at the state contest held in St. Paul, April 1928 in which time she had only had an entery, Bishops life. Due to illness, Bishop did not participate. Kesh state has a representative in this event.

International Typewriting Contest Will Be Sept. 29

The twenty-third annual International typewriting contest will be held September 29th at Mineral Industrial, Sacramento, California.

Open to all three classes of typists. Class I is open to all typists and contestants of one hour's writing from printed copy. The prizes in this class are: Winner to bear title of "World's Champion Typist" Gold Medal and the same placed on new bronze trophy; silver medal to the second; bronze medal to the third. The second class, Class II is open to any amateur typist who has not previously won in this event. It requires thirty minutes writing from printed copy. The prizes are: winner, to bear title of "World's Amateur Champion Typist," Gold Medal and name inscribed upon Governor's cup; second, silver medal as Amateur Championship Trophy. A silver medal is awarded to second winner; a bronze medal to the third.

The World's School Novice Typewriting contest is open to all students who have not used a typewriter in any way previous to January 1st, 1927, and who have been trained wholly by the school from which entry is made. Entrance must be made by teachers in charge. Fifteen minutes' writing from printed copy.

Prizes: Winner to bear title of "World's School Novice Champion Typist" the World's School Championship Trophy, Gold Medal and name inscribed upon Governor's cup; second, silver medal as Amateur Championship Trophy. A silver medal is awarded to second winner; a bronze medal to the third.

The World's School Novice Typewriting contest will be held during the year—proper to be engraved with name of school and student.

Special Novice Trophy: The Governor Alfred E. Smith-American School Typewriting Championship Trophy will go to the School in the United States entering student in this class who makes highest record of any student in Germany are ineligible to enter any German-American contest taking any entrance examinations.

The "College or Universities in Germany are on a strict as those in America, however, the students being permitted to attend lectures for four years, after which an examination is given which they must pass before one can use the University or go for any degree years before having anoth-er try at it."

Professor Zimpel's address surely opened the eyes of pupils to realize the advantages of living in America where there is freedom, freedom than in Germany but where the educational stress is less.

GERMANY'S SCHOOLS DIFFER SAYS ZIMPEL

Courses More Strenuous and Elimination Greater Than In America

Last Friday afternoon a special assembly was called at which Professor Max Zimpel, Superintendent of the elementary schools at Frankfort on Main, Germany, addressed the students of Lincoln High School.

"It is not as easy to become a high school student in Germany as it is in the United States. In fact it is even harder to meet the requirements of the grade schools than it is here in America. The children start at the age of five and go until they reach the age of 10 or until they reach the fifth grade when they are allowed to try the entrance examinations to the High School. If they pass these successfully they are kind of put on investigation, to see that the teacher makes no errors carefully and there also are teachers sent out from the High School who inspect the grades to see how the students work and the teacher must be able to write perfectly or they will not be accepted in the High School. If they happen to not pass the examination in two tries they are not allowed another try and go on in the grades until they reach the age of fourteen when they must quit to go out into business as an apprentice.

"High School in Germany lasts for nine years as compared to four here in America. School starts at 7:00 in the morning and is over by 2:30 in the afternoon. The periods are 45 minutes in length with ten or twenty minute rest periods between classes when the students enjoy organized games. There are no extra activities, as students are required to take the same subjects. Girls, however, do not have to take as hard subjects as the boys and they will not need the intensive training as much as the boys will have to do in the work in the future.

"In Germany the girls are taught domestic science, cooking, sewing, etc., in the grade schools and not in the High School as in America.

"Another difference between the schools in Germany and those in America is that in Germany the students are not allowed to participate in athletics. They have their gymnasium classes but no athletic contests with other schools. Athletics are left entirely to the individual and are not encouraged by the schools

A Minnesota Dairy Farmer Abroad

U. S. Delegate to International Dairy Conference

CHAPTER VIII.

Where the Shamrock Grows

Dublin, Ireland, July 16.

"Well", said to my friend, Jim Kennedy, "where is the Shamrock?" He looked at a friend or two who were close by and they looked at the heavy matting of pasture grass that the Kerry cows were trying to get outside of and said: "Well, is there such a thing?"

Thus we learn America has more in song and story of the Shamrock than they have in Ireland. They live with it under their feet, but I am inquisitive being and

I wanted to get it all and then I asked: "Are there any snakes in Ireland?" To this I got a chorus of "nos." There are no snakes in Ireland, except in the zoos, and the adage of St. Patrick driving the snakes out of Ireland is literally true. I have been also told that at that time the reverend saint banished the toads and frogs from the sod and that is not proper under the new deal. The territories will eventually be distributed and then a program of quality will be applied that will mean something to the dairy world.

If these farmers would adopt the wonderful little Kerry cow as the dairy cow of Ireland, as they have the Yorkshire hog and the scholars that test established breeds, there would be something doing in their dairy line. It is not uncommon for a Kerry cow to give 30 to 40 pounds of milk a day on pasture and, to make 350 and 600 pounds of fat on three-time milking. And they are hardy as a cow.

Postal Savings Deposits At Local Office Reach High Total of $790,000

Postal savings deposits at the local post office now reach the total of $790,000 according to Assistant Postmaster H. L. Dype. There are 1295 depositors, making an average $686 for each patron.

The local office has been made a postal savings depository, which will take a good deal of business away from the local office. In the past, almost the entire northwestern part of the state, north of Crookston, has been served by this office.

Depositors are paid interest at the rate of two percent. The money is loaned by the post office to the local banks at 2½, leaving a net return to the post office of one half of one per cent. The banks must secure this investment by purchases of Liberty Bonds and other approved securities.

The local post office has been a postal savings depository for almost two years, but it is only during the past few years that it has been used to any considerable extent.

Oak Lake Is Made Water-Fowl Refuge

Oak Lake, near Erskine, has been made a waterfowl refuge by order of State Game and Fish Commissioner Gus W. McCullough. The Erskine Isaac Walton League, together with land owners along the lake shore, petitioned for the reserve, on the grounds that ducks need a resting place where they are not molested if they are to become very numerous in the community.

But speaking of the little Donkey, it is interesting to note that I have a specie value, at a fair yesterday about fifty were sold and they brought from a pound to two pounds each, the little ones about the size of jack rabbits bringing from five to ten shillings each. I asked if the donkey was valuable and was told that they would not know how to put it. When arriving home at night the collar and harness is thrown from the donkey me with his head greetings and as he did so a younger man standing by said with a wink in his eye, "And you bet was that has seen a deal of rail service, too, so you bet."

Everywhere repairs are under way in Dublin and in other cities that have gone thru the late "trouble," as they term it. Debris is being removed and new buildings are replacing the ones that were blown up. Here and there on many buildings are seen the pits of a stray bullet. There seems to be a desire on the part of the new regime to do something constructive and I hope they succeed. But I am unimpressed with one thing—and I say it with all candor and free from any intent to injure the people in the least—and that is the population of Ireland, both the cities and in the country, would substitute at least one half their strong drink with milk there would be a different lot of children in ten years' time. I must confess that the children are small and do not show proper nourishment. Yet, this is as true of all the sheep, girls and boys as well. Just why should Ireland, now entering upon the throes of a new era, send hundreds of thousands of pounds to France for wines and liquors, or for beers, when they have the greatest pastures in all the world and a hungry lot of children craving the nourishment and vitamines that they have for the taking?

On the street, almost in front of my hotel, is the large statue of Father John Mathew, the apostle of temperance, erected in 1900 to commemorate the centenary of his work. We in America have derived more benefit from the lessons taught by that great man than have the people who have lived under the shadow of his monument.

IMPROPER DIET IS CAUSE OF DECAYED TEETH IN CHILDREN

Medical Association Recommends Vegetables, Fruit, Milk for Building Sound Teeth

Decaying teeth among children are more often caused by an improper diet than in any other way, just as obesity may be caused by eating the wrong things. This fact has been discovered from a series of recent investigations which have been conducted upon children, who have been suffering with diabetes. As soon as the child was improved, the decaying of their teeth stopped.

The educational committee of the State Medical Association in a bulletin today reviewing the discoveries from these investigations announced that the feeding of a complete diet was found to be the secret of the recovery of sound teeth by these children.

"Of course where the teeth are decayed, the improvement of the diet did not cause new tooth structure to be formed," declares the Society's bulletin in announcing the result of these investigations. "The striking fact was that the decaying stopped when the right diet was prepared and regulated.

"It is not necessary to have diabetes in order to have a diet that will cause sound teeth to decay. No startling new principles were used in planning such diets. These children ate the same foods as the rest of life and health depended on accurately following the doctor's diet prescription. The diet is really very simple. It can be summarized by saying meat or egg once daily, some green colored vegetables each day, a pint of milk a day, a fruit at least once in the day, and a pint to a quart of whole milk. This is merely a repetition of the essentials of a diet for health. Fat from fruit is less fattening and more wholesome than fat from other foods. Fat from butter, cream and eggs. This phosphorus is necessary for all kinds of body building, and our bodies require a continuous supply, for building tests and bones, for good digestion, for strong muscles, and for the defense against the invasion of bacteria.

"It is not difficult to plan a diet which will furnish good amounts of calcium and phosphorus, but which will allow the child to grow normally and decay. Unless the food contains sufficient supplies of the vitamins, the body cannot use the mineral materials to advantage.

A CIGARETTE TAX

State Auditor Ray Chase proposes a new Forest Policy for the State of Minnesota that would be financed by a tax of one cent a package on cigarettes. He justifies his idea by the fact that cigarettes are major cause of forest fires today.

While we are not certain the proceeds of such a tax should be used for this particular purpose, there is no question but that such a tax should be imposed. To a large extent such a tax would be paid by a class of people who do not otherwise contribute toward the cost of government, and who can well afford to pay a little.

We would be in favor of similar taxes being placed on luxuries of other kinds such as cosmetics, candies and amusements, providing the proceeds of such taxes would be used to reduce land taxes.

THE GOVERNOR IS SECURE

An occasional attack is being directed at Governor Christianson in this campaign, but these are few and far between and there is no reason to believe that any of them are doing the Governor serious damage. In last week's issue Walter Quist sang a song of hate against the Big Three, and urged the voters to be extremely wary or a lot of evil things might happen.

When we consider the mauling the Governor and his Big Three have taken at the hands of the courts during the past year we wonder just a little bit if Walter isn't fighting a giant that doesn't exist. It isn't going to be necessary for the people to rise up to defend themselves from the Big Three. It is going to be necessary, however, for the people of this state to come to the rescue of this solid Big Three or there isn't going to be any such animal in a very short time.

Governor Christianson has probably made a few mistakes and he probably will make a few more as governor between now and 1930, but there is no reason to believe that he has been unfaithful to the best interests of the people at any time and there is every reason to believe that he has fought for the things that he has believed were right.

EUROPE'S PLIGHT

Max Zimpel, a German professor who has taught during the past two years at the North Dakota State College at Fargo, discussed Germany's ability to "come back" at a Commercial Club luncheon recently. The picture that he painted, while hopeful from some standpoints, was nevertheless pathetic.

We have heard apparently sane people remark that they do not believe conditions in this country could be worse than they are now, but those who heard Mr. Zimpel left the club rooms feeling that they have much to be thankful for. We have heard people of this community tell of the horrors of the last war whose most terrible experience was the eating of a few bakings of barley bread. According to Mr. Zimpel twenty-seven per cent of the children of his city of Frankfort are tubercular as a result of undernourishment during that war. And there are millions of people thruout the world who are suffering actual hunger today as a result of that war.

We don't know who started that last fight, and we can't see that it makes a great deal of difference who started it. The thing to do now is to heal up some of the wounds that are still causing suffering. The European countries ought to pay back to us the money that was borrowed, sure enough. But if forcing them to pay that money is keeping health and happiness from the children who hadn't a thing to do with submarines or poison gas or Serbian assassinations, we can get along with it little less. America doesn't need the money as badly as all that.

Our Public Forum columns are filling up nicely lately and they probably will continue to fill during the present political campaign. In spite of the fact that few of the contributors agree with us we are glad to publish these letters. We reserve the right to censor them, of course. There are one or two subjects that we bar from the discussions. One of these is religion. Another is medicine or healing. The reason for barring discussions on such subjects are obvious. It is sufficient to say that they would accomplish no good and would do some harm. We also try to weed out needlessly severe and unjust criticisms of private citizens. We allow a little more latitude in this respect when public officials are concerned, especially around election time.

An American election is a remarkable institution. In these events each half of the population figures the other half is composed of a combination of knaves and fools. As the preceding campaigns progress the bitterness of the opposing factions increases and by election day the voters are at a white heat. Then comes the remarkable thing about this institution. As soon as the results are made known the bitterness vanishes. The minority congratulates the majority and a beautiful harmony prevails until the next campaign gets under way.

Australia pays a bounty of six cents a pound on all butter exported. This bounty has enabled Australian farmers to ship butter into the United States with less disadvantage than other nations, and for this reason the imports of Australian butter have increased considerably. To offset this growing import the American government added six cents a pound to the tariff on Australian butter making the tariff eighteen cents instead of twelve, this went into effect this month. Such protection is proper.

REVENGE VS. REASON

The foundation of the Democratic appeal in this campaign seems to be revenge. The popular hue and cry of those who are laboring at the wheels of Al Smith's band wagon is to the general effect that the country should go democratic this year as a slap-in-the-face to Coolidge.

There is no question but that this is the Democrats' best bet in this campaign. The appeal is not without some justification, and if we went to the polls in a fit of anger we might be tempted to follow their advice. But if we go to the polls thinking about the next four years rather than about the past eight we will probably vote for Hoover.

Al Smith is a big man. We will concede that he is a good man. We will concede that he is a fearless leader. But when you stand him up alongside of Hoover and compare the qualifications of the two he is dwarfed in the comparison. New York State is a great commonwealth, and the man who has governed well this great commonwealth must be a great man. But Al Smith is to Hoover as New York State is to the world. Smith is a successful statesman in one state. Hoover is successful as a statesman of worldwide experience.

SMITH ON IMMIGRATION

One of the national issues that is especially interesting to most of us in the Northwest is the immigration question. This problem has received considerable attention in recent years. The present immigration law is based on the census of 1890, and admits from each nation 2 per cent of the total number of persons of that nationality residing in the United States at that time. The purpose of establishing these quotas on the 1890 census is to secure more immigrants from such countries of Europe as Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Germany, and less immigrants from such nations of Southern Europe from which immigration is considered less desireable. While this law is not perfect, it is satisfactory to those of us who are satisfied with its general results.

This arrangement is not satisfactory, however, to those who are not satisfied with its general results. There are many of our citizens in other parts of the country who want the quota of each nation based upon the population of a later date. For instance the National Origins Provision of the present law, which would have become effective this summer had not Congress delayed it another year, would have decreased the quotas of nations mentioned above and would have increased the quotas from such nations as Great Britain, Austria and Hungary, Italy and Russia.

If this provision becomes effective the quota of immigration from Norway will be reduced from 6,453 to 2,267. Sweden will be reduced from 9,561 to 3,259; Denmark from 2,789 to 1,011, and Germany from 51,227 to 23,026. On the other hand Great Britain would be increased from 34,007 to 73,089; Italy would be increased from 3,845 to 6,091; and Russia from 2,248 to 4,761.

The difference of opinion on this subject between the two leading presidential candidates should be carefully considered by those who have not yet made up their minds which candidate to support in the coming election. Hoover is definitely in favor of the 1890 quota. Smith is definitely opposed to it. Smith wants the quota based on a later census. This would mean that if Smith's aim were carried out the immigration from the Scandinavian countries and Germany would be decreased.

In this matter Smith, of course, reflects the wishes of the majority of the people of his native city. His opposition to the 1890 quota is pleasing to his friends of the East Side, as undoubtedly are his views on prohibition and several other things. These views, however, certainly will not recommend him to the voters of the Northwest.

A GOOD IDEA
(Ft. Worth Star-Telegram)

A newspaper reporter in a western city got an idea. He went to the jail on Thanksgiving day when the prisoners were dining on turkey and dressing, mince pie and ice cream, and enjoying an entertainment program prepared by them by the good people of the city.

He looked through the prisoner's records and found several names of men who were serving terms for abandoning their families or refusing to provide properly for their children. From this reporter went out and looked up the families of these men. He found most of the abandoned children in misery. Some were being fed by charity. Some were being cared for by their former mothers who were working hard at poorly paid tasks to feed them.

The reporter's idea was that delinquent fathers should be made to work and be paid a living wage by the city, instead of being kept in idleness and the comparative comfort of the modern jail, the money to go in support of the families. He would keep dad locked up until he got the work habit so thoroughly that he would continue it outside.

It would not do to abandon the idea of punishing evildoers. The experience of centuries proves that punishment pays. But it is not humane or intelligent to punish the innocent along with the guilty. The incarcerated offender should be made to support his dependents. It would soon be found that most men would prefer to work outside prison than inside.

ISSUES TIMELY WARNING
(Ithaca County Independent)

The Park Legion Echo of Alexandria issues a timely and appropriate warning about a scheme that is being worked extensively in all parts of the country with the advice "Don't bite on this one." The editorial from the Echo is as follows and applies equally to Grand Rapids as well as to Alexandria or any other town in the United States:

We want to warn Alexandria residents against a swindling scheme, not a new one but an old one in new garb, now being worked through the mails. Some "slicker," having secured a list of names of people scattered pretty generally throughout the country, is sending them letters stating that the site of Trinity church, at the head of Wall Street in New York, is now in dispute, and that heirs to the same name as the person addressed are preparing to make an effort to reclaim the property, valued at many millions. The "slicker" asks for the intended victim's family history, merely as a blind and of course, for a contribution in cash toward getting the matter into court and paying attorneys for waging a legal battle in behalf of the "heirs." Many are easily persuaded that they are descendants of original owners of the site, so the "slicker" is reaping a rich harvest. There is absolutely no truth in the story, the title of Trinity church rests as clear as the title to your own home. Don't be duped by this old scheme in a new dress. If you receive one of the letters now being sent to intended victims, turn it over to the postoffice department through your local postmaster.

PublicForum

Mr Dear Editor:

I see by the last issue of your paper, The Times, that at least two persons in our county, do not agree with me, as to the qualifications of Gov. Alfred E. Smith, as candidate for President.

Mr. Clemens of course is a Democrat, and is the Democratic Chairman of the 9th Congressional District at that, as he of course has to defend the Democratic presidential candidate. As to Mr. Wright I do not know what political party he belongs to, but judging by his letter he must be a Democrat.

Well I shall in my best to answer these fellows, and I want to assure all concerned that I shall try to center my arguments on Alfred E. Smith as candidate for President and nothing else. First I maintain that a candidate for President who does not accept and believe in all the amendments to our dear Constitution is not the man to be president of the United States. The ground upon which I base abiding citizens of our country all stand in the present campaign that all ready been surveyed, and staked out. Governor Smith is only an incident. It is for Prohibition that we fight. Governor Smith, is against Prohibition for he has already declared that he does not believe in it. Right here I wish to submit part of a resolution to be proposed.

The immediate relief he favors an amendment or modification of the present Volstead Law, raising the alcoholic content of beer and wines, and allowing each state to fix its own standard of intoxication. He follows the drift of the Canadian plan, saying our neighbors have solved the problem better. Now let me ask Governor Smith, and his supporters, what has Canada gained by installing saloons, as I am sure most wonder if he has studied the Canadian plan. What about Canada's record in Canada since they got the saloons back, or rather since the sale of liquor is permitted under government supervision.

Here is what the Montreal Star informs us "Drunkenness among women has increased 125 per cent." Chief Commissioner C. F. Burtch of Manitoba has written that if all the drunkards who were arrested there would be no room left for them all, as the public arrests for drunkenness increased 125 per cent in the first eight months of Government control. The Toronto Daily Star continues, "All records for intemperance were broken in the Province of Ontario during Labor Day celebrations faced Magistrate Cohen."

Ah, but then think of what Government control has done to the bootlegger. Well, what has it done? It is the greatest problem in menahge in the country today" is the wail of the Alberta liquor Board. As much liquor is sold by the bootlegger, as is sold in the Government stores, adds the Saskatchewan liquor board. And British Columbia joins in the same astounding chorus. There bootleggers increased one hundred eleven per cent (111 per cent), in the past year. Government Control in Canada begins to look indeed as if the Government was controlled.

Now where does Gov. Smith stand on the liquor issue. Has he not said personally, He is for a modification of our liquor laws in favor of the Canadian plan, or something similar.

Do not listen to just what Governor Smith says right now during the campaign. Of course he has to try to make the best of it now. All candidates try to speak well during a campaign. All we ask is that the voters try to look up and find out about his record as governor, and member of the Legislature in the State of New York. See what he has said and done in regard to the liquor question. How he has voted upon the question when he had a chance. What legislation he has supported.

Try to judge Governor Alfred E. Smith upon his record on the wet and dry question. We do not need to bother so much about what he and his friends say and promise now during the campaign. Look back over his record for the past ten years and judge him by that. There is an old saying that, Deeds not words. It is equally true that Governor Smith's record as governor and member of the Legislature of the State of New York, will speak louder and more dependably than his present campaign promises.

Look up Alfred E. Smith's record upon the liquor question and judge him by that. That is fair to him and fair to everyone else. After you have done this, can you support him for president?

Yours truly,
Sam Brandvold.

Editor Times,
Dear Sir:

I was very much pleased and cheered by your editorial of recent date in regard to the senatorial race. Coming from such a staunch Republican it carries weight. You say it is generally conceded that Shipstead has made good. And perhaps I will be pardoned for saying that Teddy Christianson has made a pretty good governor.

I think it is encouraging when people elect men above party lines in religion. Along this line Smith, Shipstead, Christianson and Wefald don't make such a bad combination.

Yours truly,
P. H. Wright.

Dear Editor:

Economy and efficiency as applied to government really belong together and while discussion of the one is very much the other too, yet to discuss both with reference to the governor's past performance would make too long an article for print and so I shall discuss the boasted economy of the governor's administration at this time and consider his efficiency next week.

Economy is not at niggardliness in the part of expenditures but rather a carefulness that for each dollar expended, a dollars worth of benefit is received. As governmental activities increase in numbers and in scope it is naturally follows that the total costs of operating the state Government will gradually increase but if full value is received for this increased expenditures the state government may still be just as economical as before. As to the governor's record of economy we are to be that the state government has not increased a certain definite amount. If any political party or political party or public opinion forced the expenditure of money in such new field the governor in office can oppose the installing of some other activity to retain standard of economy. Before the governor's High Water Stark.

In order to convey the results of the "Big Three" and some of the other new lads, he found it necessary to call a special session of the legislature bill which provided the customary relief. This was dealt with handily throughout the State and also reduce the support of State institutions for superfluous loans, bonuses and slush and other unfortunates.

The governor's statement on this question of economy is as illogical as his Public Utilities report. Before the amendment program to return to the republican revels of the State in 1912 when he came to the legislature and took a hand in the running of the State Machine. Was it any worse for the last legislature to add a million dollars to the deaf and dumb institute than it was for the legislature with Theo. Christian as Chairman of the House Committee on Appropriations to increase the expenditures from $21,719,457.65 in 1910 to $32,463,134.54 in 1922. These are the figures taken from the State Auditors reports showing the amounts of warrants issued during those years and should be a fair index on growing expenditures under economy Christianson.

Yours truly,
W. H. Quist, Sec. 9th Cong. Dist. Farmer Labor Association.

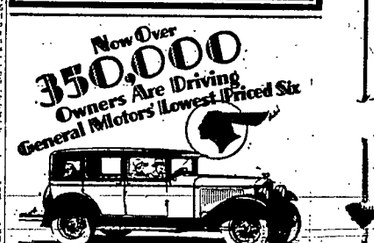
Caution Is Driving Through Smoke Urged To Avoid Accidents

Caution in driving through dense smoke, is urged in a bulletin issued by the Minnesota Highway department. At this time of the year the section men of the highway must be doing away the weeds and brush on the roadsides, partly for neatness, and partly to keep snow drifts from blocking the highways next winter.

When there is a plowed field or other fire-safe land adjoining, the burning is done when the wind is away from the road, but where there are fields or meadows which might catch fire, the burning must be done when the wind is towards the road. It is done in as short stretches as possible, but the smoke nevertheless creates a hazard which requires drivers to go very slowly and carefully.



In addition to going slowly, every driver should see that he is on the right hand side of the road. Turning on the lights is another precaution which may help to prevent accidents. Failure to drive carefully may lead to a collision with an oncoming car, a car going more slowly in the same direction, or a car which has been stopped on the road.

The same suggestions, of course, should be used when there is smoke from weeds or straw being burned on fields along the road.

CHAPTER IX

FROM IRELAND TO DENMARK

Aalborg, Denmark, July 14.

I left Ireland the other night at about eight o'clock and took the English boat to Hollyhead. This was all right but I was warned never to travel first class in England and before I knew it I was travelling first-class, and could feel it better than I could see it. First, I had a return ticket and then I wanted a reservation after I got off the boat at Hollyhead but I did not know what it meant first-class." Well I paid fifteen shillings for the reservation and then when I got in and was half undressed and the other half dead a big guy with works like a conductor came in and asked me for eighteen shillings, all pence. I asked him what it was all about and he said it was the reservation and I was a fool not to have paid it. I gave him a five pound note and he said he would bring me in some tea in the morning and the change. I had it figured that the tea would make the change and he would forget the whole affair. But no post war ever woke me in a sleeper yet and this guy was not going to be the first. So in the morning when I got up to his stbe and told him to come and get the change. He acted simply like he was my banker and didn't have any change and so I dropped another and waited for him to come across. I made up my mind that I would play the game with him and I won. That is, I got my change.

Take a friend's advice after this and go third-class in England even if it kills you.

I got thru London with the assistance of a cousin. Now there are many men in the world who have "cousins," real and otherwise, but I have the greatest real cousin that I have ever named and the cousin just do London, on top of the ground and under, and keep just a jump ahead of the Scotch, Scotland Yard and all. I would like to write a full page about her but I fear that my relatives are not your relatives and that's different.

Several good, loyal Danes led in advance warned me to take a Danish boat if I wanted to enjoy some real good eats across the North Sea. So I took their advice and booked on the Jutland. This boat is but two years old and is one of the finest boats that it has ever been my pleasure to see. It is some of the combination here that runs every other day with cargoes of bacon and butter for Great Britian and is the last word in cleanliness. Well, when it came to real lunch on this boat it was a perfect banquet and the Danes did not overstate their case. The meal was served in the finest style and was cooked and seasoned as the Hoteldrig. Do they or very like we Americans like it and in vast contrast with the English cooking, which is never seasoned until you get it in front of you and then you must season to suit yourself.

After a ninety-four hour run over a sea that was surprisingly calm we came into the harbor of Esbjerg and here I would have been as green as grass if I had not met Mr. S. Sorensen, counsellor of agriculture for the Danish government. Mr. Sorenson had spent seven years with the Danish legation at Washington and spoke good English, but he will be long remembered by me for otherwise I would very likely be standing on the dock yet taking bad and Hotel Synagehve where I was given a first class room and shown real hospitality. After I had my baggage checked at my hotel I followed Mr. Skanderborg, in the greatest thing of his kind I have ever attended. The name implies, only young animals are allowed in the cattle and horse classes nothing that is three years old or over is admitted. The stock is shown in the open, being tied in long rows to fences, with mangers for them to eat from. I am quite sure that the reader will be loathe to believe me but I actually counted the entries in the bull classes of the different breeds and there were actually 769 young bulls shown. They are divided into classes and animals within the three month periods of the same ages compete. In one class there were 102 bulls entered and it would sure have been a great pleasure to have seen Julius Moesrip go over them. And he would have enjoyed the work. In the stallion classes there were about forty entries, and the mares likewise in number. They were of the Jutland breed and nearly all a chestnut of the various tones and many of them with light manes and tails. All were very nicely fitted, and the judges gave a large breed but blocky, yet active. The long two-year-old would weigh about seventeen hundred.

* * * *

I have wondered why American threshing machines did not have a baler attachment to bale the straw as it came from the separator. I have asked this question of the machinery exhibits at the state fair in many times and those in charge did not seem to know. Now I have found what I wanted, and what every other farmer in my neighborhood wants, and that is this combination. I saw as many as fifty different machines at this show and all big and little, had the complete machine that did the entire job of threshing and saving the straw and putting it away for feeding purposes. This is again a case of necessity being the mother of invention" as the Danes feed most of the straw and they would not have a machine around that did not save the straw.

* * * *

The farm clubs of Denmark, the copied from the American idea, have a far greater influence than in America, Mr. Sorenson, whose seven years in America gave him a keen insight into the benefits of club work as derived from these clubs wrote a bulletin on them and one which was used all over Denmark but it has been copied by the Norwegians and Swedes as well, and it has even gotten back to the Rockefeller foundation and been reprinted there in the English language. But there is a reason for all this. The Danes are all agriculturally-minded and anything that will help agriculture is the very life of the nation. To show that this is literally true the last large breed but blocky, yet active. The long two-year-old would weigh about seventeen hundred.

* * * *

Now I wondered why American threshing machines did not in every nation. I am sure that our larger farms and except for a slight difference in the shades of the reds and the ears are less black on the flatlands it was hard to notice a difference in the type. And I have not seen a single sleepy, rumped animal in the pasture or in the great Jutland honey block show that I am now attending.

This Young Stock Show, held at Skanderborg, is the greatest thing of its kind I have ever attended. The name implies, only young animals are allowed in the cattle and horse classes nothing that is three years old or over is admitted. The stock is shown in the open, being tied in long rows to fences, with mangers for them to eat from. FAMOUS DRAMA TO BE PRESENTED AT TRINITY CHURCH

Oberammergau Passion Play Here Monday in Pictures and Impersonations

Residents of this city and vicinity will have their first opportunity to see and hear the famous Oberammergau Passion Play next Monday night, Oct. 3. Dr. and Mrs. Ira P. Berry will present this great drama at the Trinity Lutheran Church, in a combination of moving pictures, impersonation and voice tones.

Dr. Berry, who was for many years pastor of one of the largest churches in Chicago, was studied with the famous cast at Oberammergau headed by Anton Lang. He is said to be able to impersonate perfectly eighteen of the leading characters. His ability to speak in the voices of Anton Lang, as the Christ, Herod, Judas, Caiaphas, Pilate, many others has earned for him the title of "The Man of Many Voices" in press reports of his appearances.

The Passion Play, which is a dramatic representation of the last days of the life of Christ, was first produced at Oberammergau in 1633. Passion plays, acted during the week before Easter, were very common in Europe throughout the Middle Ages. After the reformation they were rejected in Germany, except in one at Oberammergau, where the villagers vowed in 1633 to enact the play every two years, as a measure of gratitude for having been spared in the deadly plague that raged in Bavaria that year. There are about 600 performers in the cast, and thousands of tourists visit the little village each time the play is produced.

Dr. Berry has spent twenty years perfecting his presentation of the play. He is an orphan at six, a peanut vendor in the stockyards of Chicago at 16, superintendent of schools at 23, and ordained minister at 24. He became pastor of one of Chicago's largest churches at the age of 30. He has travelled extensively through most of the countries of Europe, Asia and northern Africa. He is said to have lectured in 18 different countries.

Dr. Berry is appearing in this city under the auspices of the Trinity Ladies aid. The play will begin at 8 o'clock, according to announcements, are not "sold" on it yourself.

J. C. Penney Co. Will Add Fifty-Three Stores Next Spring, Making Total 1078

The J. C. Penney Co. has just announced the assignment of fifty-three new stores to be opened in the spring of 1929, making the total number of stores 1078.

From 1922 to the close of 1927, the store units increased from 371 to 1027, 156 stores in operation to the end, and the gross volume of business for the year was $151,247,625. In 1928, with 1200 stores in operation, it is expected that the $200,000,000 mark will be reached.

The fifty-three new stores will be opened in the following states: Arizona 1, Arkansas 4, California 8, Colorado 1, Georgia 3, Illinois 2, Indiana 2, Kansas 3, Kentucky 1, Missouri 1, Mississippi 1, New Mexico 1, North Carolina 3, Ohio 3, Oklahoma 2, Oregon 2, South Carolina 1, Tennessee 2, Texas 5, Washington 2.

Although the average population of these towns is 3,500, several larger cities are included in the number, among them Ft. Lewis, Joplin, Tulsa, Oklahoma, and El Paso, Texas.

This is in accord with the policy of the Company recently adopted to open in the next four years ten thousand which the next Passion will be in the larger population centers.

SEED CONFERENCE WILL BE HELD AT, U' FARM OCT. 10

Several Organizations Will Join in Discussion of Pure Seed and Weed Control

The agricultural extension service of the university of Minnesota, crop improvement association, and the newly organized Minnesota Seed Dealers' association have united in a call for a State Seed Conference to be held at University Farm Wednesday, October 10.

Various organizations will be invited to send representatives, among them the Minnesota Farm Bureau, the state Department of Agriculture, the Northwest Crop Improvement association, the State Bankers' association, the Minnesota Implement Dealers' association, the Division of farm crops of the university, and farmers' elevator companies. The United States Department of Agriculture will also be invited to cooperate.

To launch a constructive, co-ordinated program of education and demonstration proving the practical value of good seed is the motive for the calling of the conference. Proposed policies and objectives of such a campaign will be presented and discussed at the two-day session. A program of short addresses and the organization of the Minnesota Seed Council, composed of one member from each of the groups, will feature the afternoon. The council will be charged with the duty of working out a program which will be submitted to the different groups and to the public at large.

Following the conference has been called to—

Emphasize the importance of pure seed production and use;

Present and promote a strong program of crop standardization;

Limit the traffic in seed varieties which have not been thoroughly tested out by responsible persons;

Prevent the sale and use of mixed, adapted seed, and the misuse of impurified strains and noninscript varieties;

Aid in arousing public sentiment against the seed menace, which is growing more portentious year by year, and to work out control methods by planting only seed that has been thoroughly cleaned and prepared.

All persons interested in the seed seed situation in Minnesota are invited to attend the conference.

Farmer's Wife Attacks Federal Agents With Axe

When federal agents arrested Lucas Cieck, 46, Holdingford farmer for possessing a still, Tuesday afternoon his wife tried to strike them away with a double-bitted axe, they said.

The woman was angered at the idea of the men taking her husband to jail. The agents succeeded in disarming her and confiscating the still. Then they took Cieck to the county jail at that place where he is being held pending a preliminary hearing before the federal court commissioner—Bagley Independent.

Mrs. Peter Stauning

Mrs. Peter Stauning, 78, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Hans Hanson of Beltrami Tuesday of last week following a lingering illness. Funeral services were held Thursday from the Hanson home and the United Lutheran church of Beltrami, Rev. R. M. Vordal of Crookston officiating. Mrs. Stauning was the mother of Mr. Peter Husted of this city, who left Wednesday to attend the obsequies.

Times Adds New Equipment To Modern Printing Plant

The installation of the Linn-tabler system of producing ruled forms and tabular matter of all kinds, recently made by The Times makes its printing plant one of the most modern in the Northwest. This system consists of an ingenius device whereby compiling rated printed forms are neatly made from material cast on the linotype composing machines. The large volume of of ruled forms handled by The Times printing department made the installation of this machine necessary.

Joyce Lucille Berges

Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon, Sept. 16, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Borgen for their infant daughter, Joyce Lucille. Rev. A. O. Bloom read the last services and Dr. Berry has appeared before capacity audiences in the new Central Lutheran church in Minneapolis, of which Dr. Rich is pastor.

LEGION COMMANDER URGES TOLERANCE AS PRIMARY POLICY

Sick and Disabled Must Be Cared For, Says Stafford King in Message

Stafford King of St. Paul, Minnesota Legion state commander elected at the recent Austin department convention, in his message to "the Gopher Gang" outlining the aims he will emphasize during his term of office, says:

"I remind you, my comrades of the Legion, that at Austin we reveled again in the fundamentals of our original platform. A few was nominated for commander by a Catholic; a Catholic by a Protestant minister; and a Shriner's nomination was seconded by a Catholic. No intolerance was there. There was no thought of rank nor class nor creed. There was no bitterness. And when the vote was polled you had elected one to be your representative.

"I promise that my administration shall be honest, sincere and without prejudice; that it shall have all I can give in energy and ability; and I believe, however, depends entirely upon your willingness to make it so.

As your commander I need support and advice, and your labor for our Legion, if staging is to attempt success. I feel that they will be given us, not but your representation by those of your organization, for the success of which yours is the final responsibility.

"The program of the Legion must continue. Its standards must not be completed; its scope of activity must be extended. We have not yet satisfied it has accomplished much; you and I must see to it proper funds more than a million dollars a day for them. For it will be to our that the greatest good is had for every dollar expended. Nor can we be unmindful of the wives and families of those disabled men.

"Let us be faithful then to our obligations of service to them thru the United States Veterans Bureau, thru the Minnesota Legion Hospital Association and our local Legion service officers.

"In the training camps and on the fields of battle men died that we might live. Each year the roll call of Absent Legion grows in length. He who was with us in the morning is gone with the setting sun. Let us make especial effort then to keep Memorial Day a holy day rather than a holiday. Let us honor our dead even as we ourselves want to be honored; and let us mark their graves that none may go unhonored nor unwept Tuesday.

"Men and women serving as we did, and do, realize that life is short, and its height of service limited. We have but a single best in the heart of time, and we are going to live it well we must build for the future.

"The boy and girl of today is the men and woman of tomorrow. Let us help them. Let us continue our educational work, that they may be wiser; let us continue our program of physical education, that they may be strong; let us continue our Americanism program that they may be willing to accept their responsibilities of citizenship; let us foster clean, constructive, competitive sport, that they may know and accept the true tenets of sportsmanship.

"And let us, in the name of generations yet unborn, retain some portion of Outdoor Minnesota for them; for their health, their happiness, and thru their association with nature they may know the greatness of God and His gifts to mankind.

"For ourselves, let us be jealous of our record of service, loyal to one another and prideful of our Legion. Let us know its accomplishments, study its program, plan for its progress. Let us use our ritual, understand its significance, and inspire new members in its service. Let us ever remember that even as we stuck together then we must stick together now. Let us be true to all our associations one with the other, tolerant of our comrades opinion and endeavor, knowing that only thru understanding and united effort can we build a worthwhile structure. To these ends I pledge you the best that I have; and I ask your best from you."

Duck Hunters Swamped In Wild Rice Bed at McIntosh

L. R. Desmonas and B. H. Hallas of Brooks had a narrow escape from drowning Sunday afternoon when a small duck boat in which they were hunting sank under them in the middle of Bird Lake, near McIntosh. The boat was leaking water from the start but they deemed it safe enough to make a short tour of the lake, which is more or less a big rice bed. The men luckily kept their balance in the boat as it sank until it came lodged on the safe bottom of the lake and they stood there until assistance reached them. Swimming was impossible due to a heavy growth of rice above the water level. They were rescued by the only other boat on the lake, that of Claude Paul in accompany with V. B. Pusehinsky of this city.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

May Establish Big Game Reserve North of Red Lake

Steps are being taken for the establishment of a game reserve on the north shore of Red Lake to include five or six townships in the territory where caribou are gradually on the increase. The district consists mainly of swamp land, without any settlers and it is believed wild life could be protected there to such an extent as to bring back the caribou, moose and deer in numbers that existed before the white people saw the country.

Another reserve is proposed consisting of Townships 157 and 158 of Range 35, this being two tiers of the headwaters of both branches of the Rapid Rivers.—Warroad Pioneer.

TRUNK HIGHWAYS CARRY MAJORITY OF AUTO TRAFFIC

Department Estimates That Less Than Half is on County and Township Roads

That the traffic burden on the Minnesota trunk highways is as great as the total traffic on state aid, county and town roads, added to the traffic on the city streets, is indicated by an analysis of the recent traffic census taken by the Minnesota Highway department.

"If this is correct, and the department gives figures which show that the conclusion is not very far wrong, then the amount of money spent on the trunk highways is not as great as it appears when only the totals are published," says a Highway Department bulletin. "The money spent annually on the trunk routes is considerably less than the amount spent on the state aid, county and town roads, to say nothing of the money spent on municipal streets.

This is the way it is figured out: There are 650,000 cars registered in Minnesota and they travel an average of 5,000 miles a year. The latter figure is confirmed both by general experience and by an analysis of gasoline consumption. This makes a total of 3,250,000,000 vehicle miles. To this should be added tourist traffic but this is nearly compensated by the tons the Minnesota cars are out of the state. This figure, therefore, may be considered a fair total of the travel on all roads and streets in the state.

By using the Highway department's traffic census and multiplying the average number of cars going past each checker, by the number of miles in the system, it is found that Minnesota cars rolled up a total of 3,- 520,000 vehicle miles every day and as it appears when only the totals are published," says a Highway Department bulletin. "The money spent annually on the trunk routes is considerably less than the amount spent on the state aid, county and town roads, to say nothing of the money spent on municipal streets.

By using the Highway department's traffic census and multiplying the average number of cars going past each checker, by the number of miles in the system, it is found that Minnesota cars rolled up a total of 3,- 520,000 vehicle miles every day and tourists from other states, another 1,- 435,000 miles, making 5,955,000 vehicle miles as the daily traffic burden on the trunk highways.

The census week, Aug. 8 to 12, did not include any "peak loads" on Labor Day, Fourth of July, December day, Traffic on such days is probably three or four times as great as the average per day in August. Allowance, however, must be made for reduced traffic in winter. With the several winter travel since the snow removal program was adopted, travel by Minnesota cars is estimated to be at least 75 per cent as great on the average the year around as it is in summer, although foreign cars, as a yearly average, are not much over 25 per cent as numerous as in the middle of summer. On this basis the Minnesota cars cover a total of a billion and a half miles and foreign cars 1,500,000,000 miles on the trunk highways in a year, or 1,650,000,000 vehicle miles as the total traffic on the trunk routes.

Italy Building System Of High Speed Highways

"All roads lead to Rome" will again be true in a few years. News reports say that a good portion of the seven "autostrada" system has already been built and other portions are under construction. The system will consist of 13,538 miles of high speed highways, mostly paved. They will connect the principal cities and make travel to Rome especially easy.

The "autostrada" will have no road level intersections or railroad grade crossings. Other roads will go under or over the "autostrada," making high speed on these roads possible. Motor trucks may be entered only when a watchman opens a gate.

The highways will be built by private corporations, and toll will be charged all who use them, but the government has contracts with the builders of the highways by which roads will become the property of the government in fifteen years.

JOKES

The story goes that several college professors were discussing what they would do after they retired. "What they would do for recreation after the operation.

"Well," said one of them, "I don't know that I'd be fit for anything, but I know what I'd like to do. I'd like to be superintendent of an orphan asylum so I'd never get any letters from parents."

"I've a much better ambition," exclaimed another, "I want to be warden of a penitentiary. The alumni never come back to visit."

At a banquet held in a room, the walls of which were adorned with many beautiful paintings, a well known college president was called upon to respond to a toast. In the course of his remarks, wishing to pay a compliment to the ladies present, and designating the paintings with one of his characteristic gestures, he said, "What neat is there of these painted beauties when we have so many with us at this table?"

SENIORS HOSTS AT FACULTY RECEPTION

Speakers Stress Importance of Co-operation Between Students and Teachers

The annual Senior-Faculty reception was held last Friday night, September 21. The program was rendered in one of the lower classrooms after which lunch was served in the Home Economics Department.

The teachers were greeted at the door by a reception committee. At eight o'clock the program opened with Clarence Sunde acting as chairman.

Douglas Boorom, president of the Senior class, began the entertainment by a speech of welcome to the teachers, expressing the desire of the Senior class for co-operation and the wish that they together could make this year in Lincoln High school a bigger and better year of instruction.

Mr. Ilse responded on behalf of the faculty, thanking the previous speaker for his hearty welcome and earnest desire for co-operation. He stated that the teachers were often looked upon as a group of people whose duty to tell the students what to do, but that they were always trying to help them as much as possible toward their goal, namely, "success." He closed by telling a story given by Lucille Bayuk, Geneva Allen then gave a reading entitled, "The Inspiring Dishwasher." A girls' quartet consisting of Katherine Blake, Violet Griffin, Lucille Nerbovig, and Esther sang a song dedicated to the Seniors, on this subject. Miss Griffin sang to the tune of "Chloe."

Following the program a social time was enjoyed, lunch being served in the Home Economics room. The guests were seated at white-frosted popcorn cakes, with the numeral 29 inscribed in green, hot grape juice with marshmallows, and green and white candy.

The hall was decorated in green and white streamers (class colors). Many bouquets of sweet peas and asters intermingled with small sprigs of baby-breath adorned the room.

Posture Tests Given; Volley Ball Season Opens

Individual Posture tests have been given during the past weeks in girls' physical education class. The exact percent is not determined as yet, but in a short time another test will be given in the hope of improvement.

Volley ball practice begins this week. All girls interested in this sport who have a "C" average in their lessons, will meet after school in the gym. Temporary captains and managers will be elected, and the same trading rules that have been observed before will be enforced.

Some fall to realize the responsibility that comes with success.

Junior English Theme Book Has Interesting Features

The Junior English Theme Book of the Class of 1929 which was put on file in the high school library for inspection by the student body has proven to be one of the most interesting and instructive literary ventures of its kind ever put out in Lincoln High school.

The book is a large one, containing over 400 pages bound in red with gold trimmings. The interior is very attractive; it begins with a little page worked out in old English lettering. Next is given the names of the student editors; Otto Stenberg, George Anstine, William Froehlich, Lucy Warner, and Robert Hesterman. These were elected from their respective class divisions.

Following the preface and dedication, introductory remarks, and table of contents, the book begins in earnest with a little page of short-stories by several of the English III students. These short stories were written as a part of the regular work in English III last year.

The first chapter is entitled "English III". This chapter is subdivided into three parts, dealing with different phases of English III work and the social contacts and environments of the English classes.

The third chapter is entitled "Essays." It contains essays written during the year by different students of English III, wherein various ideas and opinions are expressed.

The fourth chapter especially shows originality. It is entitled, "Idoum Numbers", and tells all about the English III room. Which stories were written as essays are vividly brought forth in the theme on this subject.

The next chapter deals with "debating," which was interesting to the students during the year, every person in the English III classes being required to take part in one debate. This contains a list of the debates as they were held in each classes with the members of the affirmative and negative sides and the final outcome. There are also many essays on the value of debate.

Then there is the class' prophecy in which the more prominent members of the class are linked together in story form as they are supposed to appear in the world. These prophecies are cleverly illustrated by cartoons drawn by Robert Biederman, class artist.

The 5th chapter contains temperance essays. These were the result of a contest sponsored by the W. C. T. U. which all the class in Lincoln High school conducted.

Courtesy in the class room is dwelt upon in the 7th chapter. The several members of the class have written themes about the inconvenience of misconduct and how much more could be obtained through co-operation.

Much credit is due to Miss Leavitt in the editing and publishing of a book with so many improvements over that of previous years.

Swenson's Band Plays For Football Pep Fest Friday

In order to arouse enthusiasm and "pep" for the first football game of the season, a special assembly was called last Friday.

Mr. Heml acted as chairman and announced, to the delight of the students, that Mr. Swenson's "pep" band would play "Hail, Hail, the Gang's all here." This put the students in the right spirit for "yelling" which was richly contained by Paul Maltby and Ruth Jacobson.

"Boomer" Dahlow was then called upon to give a talk. According to Coach Ilse it must have been the "right kind" as he seconded everything that "Boomer" said. Mr. Ilse stressed the importance of support from the student body stating that "The team is no greater than the student body."

The squad was then dismissed to the tune of "Hiffe Rangers" played by the "pep" band.

Keen Interest is Shown In Band and Drum Corps

Much enthusiasm has been shown among the students in response to bandmaster Swenson's plans for the development of band work. The beginners' band has thirty members of both boys and girls. Six girls having already joined while several more are waiting for instruments. Books have been ordered, and rapid progress is expected. A new feature will be the high school band, composed of fifteen advanced players of the boys' band.

"Tryouts for the girls' Drum Corps have also been held and the drums have been ordered. As soon as these arrive, work will begin in earnest. In several months' time Thief River Falls is expected to have a first class drum corps.

Mrs. Homer: "Don't you think your husband is rather headstrong for an invalid?"

Mrs. Neighbor: "Yes, and the doctor is to blame for it too."

Mrs. Homer: "Indeed! And why, pray?"

Mrs. Neighbor: "He won't allow him to take any nourishment but goat's milk."

Faculty Romances

It so happened in a certain town of Edna, South Dakota, that to one of all American Methodist family, a boy was born on a fortunate day in 1901. Needless to say, the child, Lyle Lanning, grew into young manhood. Whereupon, after finishing his high school years, he decided to become a barber. No sooner had he learned the trade than his natural love for adventure asserted itself. In the midst of counting ties—not many, riding bobo style on box cars (also in trains and automobiles) he wandered about in every direction, visiting almost every state west of the Mississippi, and seeing all there was to see. When he came to a town he usually hung his razors and diligently applied his trade.

One evening while in California, the barber beheld a cloud of smoke rising beside him. He turned, startled. Out of the smoke a voice thundered, "Which would you rather be in after Negro?"

Although greatly surprised, Barber Lanning answered with his usual composure and interest. "None of them, thank you. I like a town as well as a chinaman, and they are good for just about everything but fuel. Of them. There's a reservation for Red Skins—keep them there."

"Your fate is decided; you will continue to live as a man and go to Edna's town." Again the voice in the smoke, but ever since then it has been his delight to tell incident by incident the rounding himself in the smoke of the cigarette.

After five years the wanderer came back to Egan, where he decided to end his travels for four years. He turned his steps toward college, pursuing his studies diligently. Mr. Lanning was announced fit to become a student in a military academy after victoriously passing a physical examination. Eventually it came to pass that he finished this course and entered into an officers' camp, becoming second lieutenant of the reserve infantry. While partaking of the life of college life he graduated from the commercial course in the university of this certain state. Therefore, being extremely fond of seeing new places and desiring to journey northward he came to a small city in the Minnesota lake region, appellated Thief River Falls. In this particular town he made his home. His activities in school, band, and among the boys' scouts, demonstrated the astonishing knowledge he had gained as a child, traveller, and college graduate.

Curiosity and the love of travel have again asserted themselves and Barber Lanning went on a journey to Winnipeg over the weekend.

Such at least has been the writing which is recorded on the pages of his life—so far!

Teacher Training Dept.

The Teacher Training students attended the Teacher's Institute which was held in the Court Rooms last Thursday and Friday.

On Friday three of the Training students entertained opening exercises at the afternoon session. Three varieties of entertainment were developed. Peggy Shaw told a story entitled, "Dicky Smiley's Birthday." It was rendered exceptionally well. Agnes Angell delivered an ethical reading to show how ethics may be taught in the opening exercises and yet afford entertainment. The third was a vocal number rendered developed in school. This point was illustrated by a joke told by Florence Knadle.

Practice teaching starts on Tuesday, Monday the training students chart-ed in the rooms they are to teach in and Tuesday take charge of their particular group of children. The students are distributed in the Rural, Northrup, and Washington schools, having their first classes in the second and third grades arithmetic work.

The last week's nature study consisted of bird study. To make a lasting impression of the differences in leaves of the several trees, leaf booklets are going to be made.

William Froehlich's leaf book was the first subject by the students.

Second Game of Season With Grand Forks Friday

The Lincoln gridders leave for Grand Forks Friday for their second out-of-town game, when they play the Central High team in the new Universities stadium. Many of the local fans are going to witness the game and classes are being run on shortened periods Friday morning.

The boys are expected to play good ball and will find plenty of opposition in the Central team. Grafton was the team to defeat the Central's last year.

FIRST GAME ENDS TIE WITH GRAFTON

Last Year's Score of 6 to 6 is Repeated in This Year's Game

Repeating the score of last years game Thief River and Grafton tied the count of 6 in their first game of the season played on the local gridiron Saturday, Sept. 22. A good crowd turned out and the cheering under the leadership of the rooter's king and queen, Paul Melby and Ruth Jacobson, showed a decided improvement over that of last year.

Mr. Swenson's pep band furnished music for the occasion, the senior class supplied the fans with hot dogs, Beth Evans were rather ragged at the opening of the game but Thief River was in scoring territory when the whistle blew ending the first SAT.

When Thief River kicked off to Grafton at the opening of the game, the latter immediately began to feel out their opponents line and discovered a weak spot in the locals' defense. They were forced to kick, however, and then followed on exchange of punts, until the locals started to work the ball down on Grafton's 10 yard line, which seems to get a touchdown when the whistle blew.

Coach Ilse's gridders started a march down the field by a series of line bucks and runs. Dahlo at the critical moment it was very well attended.

Sophomores Are Hosts At "Nationality" Masquerade

Freshmen were guests at a masquerade party given them by the sophomores for Saturday evening beginning at eight o'clock. Everyone was masked and garbed to represent a certain nationality. There were gypsies, pirates, and clowns, soldiers and gentlemen from Holland, Norway, Russia. Some represented colonial times; several were tramps, or "hoboes." Many were just common people.

Games and prizes were played and won as was given for the best costumes—Stella Verser dressed as a pirate, receives a prize for having the most comical costume. Assembly Clifford Froehlich, an old gentleman with—a—cane and yellow-lidded spectacles, was awarded as the funniest personage; and Ruth Jacobson, tramp in patched overalls and large straw hat, separated a prize for the best-disguised personage. Dancing and the party ended with "Home Sweet Home."

Parents and Teachers Mix At First P. T. A. Meeting

The first P. T. A. meeting was held in the high school gymnasium Tuesday evening, Sept. 25 at 8:00 o'clock. A fair crowd was present to witness the community singing.

In the response, Supt. Ilye introduced the teachers to the parents. Mrs. Neper was the "Mixer" of the evening, enabling all the parents and teachers to become personally acquainted with each other.

ADVERTISING HYMNS

A certain young man with exaggeration was too poor to purchase hymn books and so he got Revised Version of a patent medicine house provided they be allowed to insert their advertisements in order to defray some of the cost. By this he was stated upon request by them to find no aid in the books. The next Sunday he distributed the books, telling his brethren of his good fortune, and requesting them to sing number 119. His chagrin may be imagined when they sang the hymn: "Hark the Heavenly angels sing. Johnson's pills are just the thing; The angelic voices mock and mine; Sing them and one for child."—Halstad Journal.

HIGH TAXATION IMPERILS IRON ORE INDUSTRY

CALLS TAX RATE UNFAIR, DISCRIMINATORY, WASTEFUL

Acute Unemployment Result of Abandonment of All But Richest Deposits

Discriminatory and excessive taxation threatens to destroy the prosperity of one of Minnesota's leading industries, the mining of iron ore, said L. A. Rapp, publisher of the Grand Rapids Herald-Review in an address to the Commercial Club last Thursday noon.

Unfair discrimination in state taxation and unprecedented municipal extravagance in the mining area have placed the iron industry in danger, he said.

"A few years ago the Lake Superior district used to ship four to five million tons of ore in a season less lying east of the Allegheny mountains. But 20,000,000 tons were shipped to these eastern furnaces, and the Lake Superior district retained that market, a thousand more men would have been employed in the mines, and much more people would be supported by the Minnesota ranges.

"Eight years ago iron ore was produced from the mines in Minnesota. In 1927 ore was produced from these mines than a hundred mines. In the ten years from 1918 to 1920 the average number of men employed in the mines of St. Louis county was 15,200. In 1927, 9,000 were employed.

"At the present rate of shipments the iron ores of present merchantable grade in Minnesota will be exhausted in about 22 years. In order to preserve this great natural resource we must use low grade ores and underground mines.

"High taxes added to the higher cost of mining has made it impossible for these lower grade and underground ores to compete with those imported from South America, India and other places. Underground mines are closed down, low grade deposits lie idle and undeveloped, rich ores are being rapidly exhausted. In 1927 the Mesaba Range produced nearly 37,000,000 tons of ore. Two hundred million tons, over half, came from eight great open pit mines.

"The result has been unemployment and economic distress. In an underground mine, for example, 1,200 tons of ore a year is mining, equal to a million and a quarter cars and trucks. Each month this year wholesale and retail sales have exceeded those of the same month in any previous year.
